DESTROYERS AND A MERCHANT SHIP DO WELL-MANAGED JOB

Gunners on Ship Hit the Diver and the Chasers Finish the Work, Sending Submarine to the Bottom.

CREW IS RESCUED BY HARD EFFORTS

Washington, Dec. 29.—Full details of the destruction by American destroyers of a German submarine and the capture of its crew made public today by the navy department show that the destroyers Fanning and Nicholson were the warships engaged. The incident was reported Nov. 24, but few facts were given at the time.

The submarine was sunk, the navy department's story of the affair indicates, as it was preparing to attack a merchantship flotilla convoyed by the destroyers.

The navy department's full story of the incident follows:

"At about 4:10 p. m. while escorting a convoy, Coxswain David B. Loomis, lookout of the Fanning, sighted a small periscope some distance off the port bow, extending about a foot out of the water and visible for only a few seconds. The Fanning immediately headed for the spot and about three minutes after the periscope had been sighted dropped a depth charge. The Nicholson also speeded to the position of the submarine which appeared to be heading toward a merchant vessel in the convoy and dropped another depth charge. At that moment the submarine's coning tower appeared on the surface between the Nicholson and the convoy and the Nicholson fired three shots from her stern gun. The bow of the submarine came up rapidly. She was down by the stern, but righted herself and seemed to increase her speed. The Nicholson cleared, the Fanning headed for the U-boat firing from the bow gun. After [illegible] third shot the crew of the submarine all came on deck and held up their hands, the submarine surrendering at 4:28 p. m.

U-Boat Goes Down.

"The Fanning approached the submarine to pick up the prisoners, both destroyers keeping their batteries trained on the boat.

"A line was got to the submarine, but in a few minutes she sank, the line was left go and the crew of the U-boat jumped into the water and swam to the Fanning.

"Although the crew wore life preservers," the statement continues, "a number of them were exhausted when they reached the side of the destroyer. As the submarine sank five or six men were caught by the radio aerial and carried below the surface before they disentangled themselves. Ten of the men were

WANT TO GET OUT OF THE GREAT WAR

Already Germans Are Filling Up Petrograd and Getting Ahead.

London, Dec. 2r.—Special dispatches from Petrograd bearing date of Thursday, aim to give an impression of how the German peace reply was received there, but the statements are inexplicit and seem to be based partly on surmise. The reply, according to the correspondent of the Daily News, created a favorable impression generally, and he believes that if the Bolsheviki convene the constituent assembly now they will have Russia almost solidly behind them. Representing the people as dispirited and indifferent, owning to the miserable conditions of life, including the food shortage, the correspondent of the Morning Post says that as far as northern Russia is concerned, it will accept peace on any terms the Germans may like to impose. How the remainder of Russia will act, he adds, is another question.

A Bolsheviki Setback.

The correspondent of the Times is of the opinion that the Bolsheviki are disheartened over the German refusal to allow nationalities hitherto without political independence to decide their own future. He says that as the Russian delegates will adhere to this de-

Ferdinand Reported to Have Abdicated in Favor of Crown Prince.

NEW MONARCH IS A YOUNG OFFICER

Abdication is Probably Result of Disturbed Political Conditions.

Petrograd, Friday, Dec. 28.—There are persistent rumors here that King Ferdinand of Rumania has abdicated in favor of Crown Prince Charles.

Disturbed conditions in Rumania were reported in a dispatch from Petrograd dated Monday. It was said that news of a revolutionary plot against King Ferdinand had been received at the Bolsheviki headquarters in Petrograd. Other reports, it was added, tended to confirm indications of a political crisis. Except for this there has been little news from Rumania since the Rumanian army was forced to agree to an armistice on the eastern front. It had been reported that Bolsheviki and German propagandists were at work among the Rumanian troops. King Ferdinand, who is a member of the Hohenzollern

QUIET NEW YEAR'S EVE

No Hilarity is Planned at the Hotel Cafes and Restaurants.

WILL BE TAMEST IN MANY YEARS

Revelers Who Waste Food in Their Celebrations Are Denounced.

The New Year's eve celebration in Fort Wayne this year is likely to be a tame affair, compared to the revels of former years.

Inquiry at the various hotel cafes and restaurants Saturday indicated that practically no preparations are being made, as in the past.

Denunciation of revelers who waste their food in their celebrations is made in a statement by H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator. George M. Haffner, county food administrator, is expected to see that the rules for food conservation are strictly observed. Chief of Police Lentz will probobly see that drinking is restricted to the smallest possible minimum.

Federal Food Administrator Barnard was most emphatic in his criticism of any person who eats an extra meal at midnight because they waste the food and thus give aid and comfort to the enemy in the time of war. Barnard's denunciation amounts practically to branding such revelers as disloyal, and it will be interesting to see who will be willing to accept that designation by indulging in the kind of performance that Barnard refers to.

Many dances are planned for New Year's eve, as well as the usual number of watch parties.

The railway executives here today inletting their decision be known, made no concealment of their feeling that government operation is a step toward government ownership and made clear they felt the public and the stockholders would demand it.

NEW EDIFICE IS DEDICATED

First Sermon in Jewish Temple is Delivered by Rabbi Weinstein.

DEDICATORY ADDRESS BY RABBI PHILIPPSON

Special Services Continued Saturday Morning and Sunday.

Special services which began Friday evening marking the dedication of the magnificent new temple at Wayne street and Fairfield avenue of the Achduth Vesholem congregation were continued this morning. Services also will be held on Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

The new temple was crowded to its full capacity Friday evening, notwithstanding the extreme cold weather. A special musical program was rendered by the choir. The dedicatory address was delivered by Rabbi Philippson, of Cincinnati, one of the prominent rabbis of the country.

In the first service in the new edifice Friday evening the lighting of the perpetual lamp was in charge of Helen Freiburger. Isador Lehman, chairman of the building committee, presented the key, which was accepted in a few appropriate remarks by Marx Frank, president of the congregation.

Consecration Sermon.

Rabbi Weinstein delivered the consecration sermon, which was the first sermon to be delivered in the new building. He spoke as follows:

It is my privilege this evening to preach the first sermon in this new house of God. It is a time when words alone are altogether inadequate to express the emotions that one experiences who has helped to conceive and plan the structure which now rears its dome toward heaven, and who has watched and

GERMAN JUNKER PRESS ANGERED BY PEACE PLAN

Amsterdam, Dec. 29—Pan German newspapers angrily condemn the peace terms of the central powers. The Taglische Rundschau, of Berlin says: "Never before have we given up so completely everything we so dearly bought with the blood of hundreds of thousands, with the sweat of millions, with the deprivations of our children, with our own hunger."

DAY'S WAR SUMMARY.

[By The Associated Press.]

King Ferdinand is reported to have abdicated the Rumanian throne in favor of Crown Prince Charles, according to persistent rumors in Petrograd. Official confirmation, however, is lacking.

Unsettled conditions and a political crisis in Rumania were reported early this week in dispatches from Petrograd and the Bolsheviki government received information that there had been a revolutionary plot against Ferdinand. The Rumanian army has been inactive since the Russian armistice and peace negotiations forced it to suspend hostilities. Bolsheviki and German propagandists have been reported working among the Rumanian troops.

Russia, Leon Trotsky told the council of workmen's and soldiers' delegates, would be forced to conclude a separate peace with Germany unless the entente allies join in the peace negotiations within ten days. The Bolsheviki foreign minister announced that he officially will ask the entente powers whether they will join in the peace negotiations. An advance guard of German peace emissaries has been observed in Petrograd. England [illegible] through Premier Lloyd [illegible] enunciated by Count Czernin for the central powers. The German terms are declared to be insufficient. The British national labor conference has voted to continue the war to make the world safe for democracy in the future. Foreign policies of the French government were approved by the French chamber of deputies.

Only in Palestine has there been marked fighting activity. North and northwest of Jerusalem, British troops after repulsing four Turkish attacks, attacked the enemy and pushed them back two and one-half miles on a front of nine miles. Turkish losses are reported to have been heavy and among the prisoners taken were Germans. Artillery duels occupy the opposing armies on the Italian and western fronts. On the front in France the German artillery fire has been heavy around St. Quentin and in the Ypres sector. A German attack in Lorraine was broken up by French gun fire.

A shell fired by an American passenger steamer is believed to have sunk a German submarine near the British isles, Thursday. Gunners and passengers saw the periscope of a submarine and the second shot from the gun exploded just above [illegible] from the submarine.

GOVERNMENT GOT SOAKED

Failure to Buy Wool at the Right Time Cost U. S. $150,000,000.

WAR INQUIRY IS HAVING RESULTS

Cloth Scrap Sorting Graft is Brought Up for Some Further Airing.

Washington, Dec. 29—The profitable "scrap sorting contracts" in connection with making army uniforms which testimony at the senate committee investigation of war activities has led into the committees of the council of national defense came up again at today's hearing while Quartermaster General Sharpe was still under examination. It developed that Samuel Kaplan, a member of one of the supply committees had protested against cancellation of a sorting contract in which his brother was interested and it was further developed that his brother was treasurer of the Millbrook Mill company owning one of the Connecticut Woolen mills commandeered by the government.

The Brother Act.

Senator McKellar asked whether Emmanuel Kaplan, treasurer of the Millbrook Mill company, was not a brother of Samuel Kaplan, a member of a supply committee. Gen. Sharpe said he thought so. Last Saturday, Gen. Sharpe said Samuel Kaplan and other members of the council supply committee came to him and protested against canceling of wool scrap sorting contracts given the Base Sorting company of New York. Senator McKellar said that Ira A. Kaplan, president of the sorting company which Gen. Sharpe said stood to make 400,000 a year under the contract recently annulled because it was regarded as excessive, was related to the council member.

"We had to follow the advice of the council committee," said Gen. Sharpe, explaining that Charles Eisenman, head of the supply committee, had approved the contract.

Senator McKellar assured Gen. Sharpe that the quartermaster general's faith and good intent in the situation was not questioned.

Usurpation of Authority.

"My purpose is to show that the council of national defense has usurped authority of the quartermaster general's office and is largely responsible for the shortage in clothing supplies," said Senator McKellar.

Senator Weeks brought out that on April 3 Boston wool dealers offered all their wool to the government at prevailing prices but the offer never reached Gen. Sharpe, being referred to the general munitions board.

When orders were given to prepare to clothe one million more men Gen. Sharpe said, soaring prices, rather than a shortage was the worst factor in the situation.

Cost Government $150,000,000.

"I was told by a responsible man that the failure of the government to accept the Boston wool men's offer of April 3 has cost the government $150,000,000," said Senator Meeks, "and I want to find out who is responsible for delay in its acceptance, and also who is responsible for delay in beginning purchases. I, for one, am somewhat dismayed by the length of time it takes in the war department to do things. Apparently injection of the council of national defense makes for further delay."

Senator Wadsworth said that on June 6 the treasury authorized the war department to buy wool, but that no considerable amount was bought until September. Gen. Sharpe insisted that there was no necessary delay and that the council had to study thoroughly the new subject and organize, necessitating great care and consideration.

Gen. Sharpe said that if the Boston wool dealers' offer of April 3 had been accepted promptly "it would have been very advantageous, as wool advanced after that." He reiterated that the offer never reached him, being referred by Secretary Baker to the munitions board.

Motor Truck Shortage.

The alleged shortage of motor trucks testified to by General Greble came up again today. It is not intended, the quartermaster general said, to deliver motor trucks to the training camps until the troops get ready to go abroad. The committee members expressed surprise.

"How are the men going to get experience in handling trucks?" asked Senator Hitchcock.

"I don't know," said General Sharpe. "Those are the orders. I think any surplus not needed by General Pershing should be sent to the training camps."

CHARLES POTTER DEAD.

Well Known Resident of Butler Victim of Pneumonia.

Butler, Ind., Dec. 29.—Charles Porter, aged 69 years, passed away at his home on East Main street Friday morning at 12:30 o'clock after a two weeks' illness of pneumonia and other complications. Mr. Potter came to Indiana from Fulton county, Ohio, when a small child and lived on a farm in Franklin township until he grew to manhood. He engaged in the carriage and wagonmaker's trade and was in partnership with Lou Burgett for several years. Later he went to work for the Lake Shore Railroad company and for about forty years was employed as night ticket agent. It was while performing his duties in this office that he was taken sick with grip, which terminated in his death. He was a member of the local Order of Maccabees and was well known throughout this county. He is survived by his widow, one brother, Ed Potter, of near Butler, and a sister, Mrs. Flora Gail, of Wenatchee, Wash. Funeral services will be held from the home Monday afternoon.

GIVEN MASONIC PASSPORT.

Butler, Ind., Dec. 29.—Friday evening after the work of installation of the officers of Forest chapter, O. E. S., and Forest F. A. M. orders, Guy Cosper, a member of Battery F, 330th Field Artillery, was presented with a Masonic passoprt and a leather belt in which the passport is to be carried. Mr. Cosper is a member of the Masonic order of this city and is home on a short furlough. He left early Saturday morning for Camp Custer, Mich. Passports and belts were sent to three other soldiers belonging to the Butler lodge. They are Tom Maxwell, of Fort Funston; Dr. E. E. Frisbee, of Camp Jackson, South Carolina, and Guy Apt, somewhere in France.

REPUBLICAN ADMINISTRATION.

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 29.—M. J. Finnand A. Crites have paid the city waterworks department $50 and $15 respectively for alleged irregularities in connection with their water meters. It was alleged a piece of iron was found in the cogs of the meter at the Finn home last spring by an inspector, and recently it was found that Crites had taken his meter entirely off, it was alleged. Finn protested innocence, and Crites says his meter froze up and he took it off to fix it. Both were threatened with arrest before they made payment.

MRS. OLIVE M'CARTNEY DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Funeral Services Will be Held at Kendallville Sunday Afternoon.

[Special to The Sentinel.]

Kendallville, Ind., Dec. 29—Funeral services for the late Mrs. Olive McCartney, wife of William McCartney, who died very suddenly Thursday morning at Lakeside hospital where she had been a patient for the past ten days, will be held from the Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon. The pastor, Rev. D. C. Truesdale, officiating and the ritualistic ceremony of the Eastern Star will be given. Interment will be made in Lake View cemetery. The deceased was born September 8, 1850, and had practically been a resident of this vicinity all her life. Surviving besides the husband are one daughter, Mrs. F. E. Whitford of Lafayette and one son, L. E. McCartney of this city, two sisters, Mrs. W. W. Riddle of this city and Mrs. M. A. Ernst of Constantine, Mich., and one granddaughter and three grandsons.

HURT IN AN ACCIDENT.

John Smith, 1125 Elmwood avenue, is confined to his home with a broken rib, a serious gash in the head and numerous cuts and bruises as the result of an accident Friday afternoon. Smith was driving in his buggy when he was run into by George Ray, a jitney driver, living at 1015 Oneida street. Smith was thrown from the buggy sustaining the injuries. He was taken to his home. Ray claims that the accident was due to the slippery pavement, the car skidding into the buggy.

The Atrocities in Armenia; Refugees Escape Massacre at Hands of Turks, But Die of Hunger

Thousands of Those Who Fled the Desolated Country Die of Starvation, Says Dr. Haggard in Another Installment of His Story of the Unspeakable Fate of the People of Armenia.

(This is the fifth of six articles on the horrors in Armenia, told by an American authority on the subject. Dr. Fred P. Haggard has spent much time investigating the atrocities of the German-dominated Turks, and is head of the Armenian and Syrian relief work in the United States.)

BY DR. FRED P. HAGGARD, Secreary, American Commission for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

(Copyright, 1917, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

There is a terrible aftermath to the German-inspired Turkish brutality, that, after having disposed of from one to two million Armenians by massacre and starvation, drove the remaining unfortunates out of their home land.

Tens of thousands of human beings who managed to escape the Turkish massacre found their way, after enduring the most terrible hardships, through the mountain passes into the Russian Caucasus.

Many perished by the wayside, but the miserable exiles who reached Russian territory are now in daily danger of starving to death.

Thus, through the brutality that inspired the horrors against the Christian inhabitants of Turkey is confined to Turkish lands, the destitution and suffering resulting from it has spread to the surrounding countries.

Lucky as are the refugees who managed to escape over the Russian border, or south into Egypt, or perhaps across to Greece, in comparison to the people left behind, still their plight has been desperate indeed.

The bulk of those refugees who managed to escape the horrors of deportation, the desert, the wild Kurds, or the Turkish harem, found their way to Erivan and other cities in the Caucasus.

Here the Russian government was ready and willing to do all in its power to relieve their immediate needs, but there was lack of funds or time to consider the problem of rehabilitation.

Relief societies, however, sprang up almost over night, notably the American Society for Armenian and Syrian Relief, which has had men and stations there almost since the beginning of the war.

In this region alone, there are between fifteen and twenty thousand orphans, gathered in orphanages or "farmed out" to families who will care for them in return for a slight government grant, or a regular sum promised by a relief society.

Armenian-American girls in mourning costume appealing for aid for their native land.

Here it is a case of trying to provide not a "supplementary meal," as was asked for Belgian children, but one essential meal each day.

Without it the helpless youngsters were dying by hundreds in the streets.

Tens of thousands of refugees who escaped to the Caucasus had nothing but the clothes on their backs. They lay in the open under the burning sun by day and the chilly air of the night, with no change of clothing, almost no food.

Typhus and disentery broke out, and for a week in many centers hundreds died daily.

Very slowly, little rooms or rough shelters were found, and many families were quite extinguished before aid could be given them.

Relief workers have done wonders, but lack of funds hampers the work.

It has been a case of choosing out of a multitude, all at the point of destitution, those who are to be helped; the children, of course, have come first.

One of the workers, Dr. G. C. Reynolds, speaking of a little fellow of six, says:

"He was bereft, at a blow of his parents and two sisters. The family lived in Van and fled with the rest in the retreat of 1915. They reached Echmiadzin, where is situated the head of the Armenian church, but conditions were no better there than elsewhere, and due to exposure, hunger and disease both parents and the sisters died, leaving poor little Varazted alone in the world. His aged grandmother is trying to care for him, but she must have financial help."

Estimates place the number of Armenians and Syrian refugees in the Russian Caucasus alone at 250,000, and in eastern Turkey the number is 100,000. This total is being increased each day by newcomers. Nearly all are without employment. The larger proportion are women and children.

FEDERALIZED RAILROADS.

What advance may be made toward completely and permanently federalized railroads in the United States as a result of the establishment of government operation as a war measure will depend upon the public advantages demonstrated. For years radicals have demanded government ownership of the railroads as a part of the program of political and economic extremism, but in very recent times that demand has not been confined to the extremists. Many of the big railroad executives and financiers have been declaring with the utmost candor that only through government operation of the railroads could there be a return of efficiency to the country's rail transport.

This view is predicated, of course, upon the assumption that there will be no recession from the progressing policies of government in the control of interstate commerce. The anti-trust laws and other measures of control have well-nigh pitched the railroads into chaos. The present breakdown of transportation is due in great part, though certainly not wholly, to the trammels the federal enactments and the interstate commerce commission has set upon the operation of the railroads. There has not seemed to be any way around this except in abandonment of the anti-trust policies of government as enforced during the past dozen years. Railroads are harder put to it trying to obey the law than they are attempting to take care of the country's increasing traffic. The prodigious growth of traffic during the past two or three years has simply broken down the transportation system of the country. Since the war began and the government's own needs in transportation have become tremendous and imperative the breakdown is almost disastrous. This is seen in the multiplying difficulties of the past half dozen months getting coal distributed to the people and to industry.

To step around the law that hampers transportation the government has been forced to take control of them and operate them under its own authority. Whatever processes may now make for efficiency can be employed without let or hindrance. The government is not ruled by the laws and the decisions that have been made for the control of the corporations that own the railroads. Wherever it can handle more traffic or speed up traffic or cheapen operation or in any wise or by any means improve efficiencies and make the transportation of the country perform its work the government can form its own rules and adopt its own practices without any reference to anti-trust laws, interstate commerce regulations or rate controls.

The experiment will be watched with an absorbed and critical interest. The future of the greatest single industry the country has save its agriculture is perhaps bound up in the success of federal operation of the railroads. If the vast efficiencies that theoretically have been promised, if the prodigious economies that have been predicted, if the superior service that is hoped for shall together issue from this essay of the government to administer transportation during the war and shall be fully realized the public will be pretty much of one mind as to what should be the future of the railroads. And this assumes, of course, that the abuses and political dangers that have always stood rather portentously and affrighting in the forefront of all proposals for federalized railroads shall be escaped or at the least be seen as not necessary concomitants of government ownership.

In any event, it has become clear to reasonable minds that the federal policy toward railway finance and operation must be altered in some respects. The roads have come to the present breakdown through causes for which they are not altogether responsible. This is shown in the necessity of the government to take hold of the railroads as the only alternative to radical changes of policy toward corporate ownership and operation. It may be doubted if there is a practicable way to alter those policies to meet the situation after the war's stresses upon transportation have ended, when a return to the private operation of the roads would be the logical step. The theory of government ownership is undeniably having its trial in practical operation and in it is invested the future of the railroads of America.

Discovery that the mayor-elect of Michigan City is not a citizen and probably is ineligible to hold the office to which he was chosen serves to emphasize what many thoughtful persons have for a good while contended should be done in this state to establish definite and rigid qualifications both for the exercise of the franchise and the holding of civil office in Indiana. An alien may vote upon the evidence of his declaration of intention to become a citizen and by that same qualification may hold certain offices. It is not enough. Complete citizenship should be made prerequisite to any exercise of the political functions of citizenship. Not many years ago it was discovered at the death of a man long resident in Fort Wayne, where he served in both elective and appointive municipal office, that he was not a citizen and had been wholly ineligible to serve in public capacities where he had acquitted himself well. He did not himself appear to have known that he was not a citizen. The ballot is made too easy a privilege in Indiana and it ought to be more severely qualified than it is.

The new police administration will find itself provided with plenty of cut-out work when it takes hold in a few days. Whether or not it will know what ought to be done and how to do it we can't say, but we have hopes. An entire now policy of police administration is necessary to any radical improvement of efficiency and morale in the department and we trust the new administration will see and appreciate that. A common sense view of police organization and work—such a view as would be taken of a private business matter—will bring a transformation in the department. There are, of course, some restrictions as to "hiring and firing," owing to civil service restraints, but even these trammels need not be fatal to discipline and efficiency if the board of safety will put trust in its chief and then decline to meddle in and muddle his affairs. Matters in the department cannot be completely remedied in a day, but they can be straightened out in due time if an intelligent and experienced chief be given half a show to make good with his job.

The bolsheviki government in Petrograd is treating the diplomatic representatives of the allied countries very much as though they were interlopers, meddlers, hostiles and downright no-goods. What the Prussian peace tricksters are likely to fasten on Russia will have the whole land screeching for help before the war has been ended a twelve-month. Half-baked puddings like Lenine and Trotzky will fare badly dealing with the Prussian diplomats of the Machiavellian school. When Russia again needs help democratic nations will think at least twice before helping.

There no longer is any manner of doubt of the failure of the Zeppelin as an engine of offensive warfare and if the conflict goes on for another year the submarine will be sent to keep the German air monsters good company on the scrap heap. Count Zeppelin did not live long enough to see his life's greatest work go definitely into the discard, but he did not die before having understood its limitations even if not its almost complete failure.

Not far ahead lies a new year. So swear, swear, swear with care, but swear off. It is better to have sworn and welched than never to have sworn at all. Getting from New Years day to Candlemas with a good resolution is some better than the average record and who does that does well if not nobly.

It will be noted with satisfaction and interest that since the congressional inquiries into war matters began there has been a more or less increasing train of reports from the big camps and cantonments that the stores of overcoats and blankets are improving nicely.

The people of this country are ready for government ownership or any other kind of a deal in railroading that will bring from the mines enough coal to keep them warm.

For the little irritation of late trains you will now please do your cussing to the government.

As a strong man Brother Sylves has nothing to speak of on Mister McAdoo.

TRYING TO DRIVE HIM IN.

Sees Fall of the Bolsheviki.

By A. J. SACK,
Director of the Russian Information Bureau in America.

The rule of the bolshiviki is tottering and we may expect their downfall in a very short time. But, whether they fall tomorrow, or even today, they have already committed their greatest crime against Russia and the allies: they have disorganized and demoralized the once so-glorious Russian army. While Mr. Trotsky is pathetically exclaiming that the bolsheviki will not kneel before the kaiser, and that in case Germany offers Russia "offensive peace terms," the bolsheviki will declare a "revolutionary war" on Germany, while playacting so in the midst of the Russian tragedy which the bolsheviki have themselves created, the truth of the situation is plain: the damage the bolsheviki have already done the the Russian military machine is almost irreparable; there is probably no longer a Russian army in existence and the roads to Russia are open. A separate peace between Russia and Germany, under present conditions, would be a peace on Germany's terms. Russia, under these terms, would become practically a vassal of Germany.

It should be understood that a separate peace with Russia, on the terms which Germany is now able to dictate, resorting probably to some pseudo-democratic camouflage, would be a realization beyond the wildest dreams of Prussian junkerdom. This victory would strengthen the political position of the German militarists and justify for the population of Germany their sacrifices during the war. Germany extending her rule over Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Turkey, Rumania and Russia, with the possession of the resources of these countries, with access to every kind of food, metal and raw material, becomes almost unconquerable. At best, the war between Germany and the allies, under such circumstances, will last for another several years, until a military decision favorable to the allies is reached. At worst, the war may end in some sort of compromise, leaving in existence two antagonistic forces: the German autocracy with her vassals, bound to her militaristic chariot, on the one side, and the union of democratic nations on the other. Such will be the case if peace is attained by Germany yielding every possible concession in the west in exchange for a free hand in Russia. Sooner or later such a situation would bring another war, another world's tragedy with millions of dead.

Hope for the great allied cause, under the present difficult conditions, lies in the national movement against the bolsheviki, already active in many parts of Russia, the movement which will turn against any attempt of Germany to destroy the newly organized centers of the Russian democracy and to conquer Russia economically. The recent movement, which began after the bolsheviki revolt and which resulted in a final "separation" of many parts of Russia, such parts as Siberia, the Caucasus, the Cossacks' regions and the Ukraine is very significant. It is a remarkable expression of the instinct for self-preservation, which is still very powerful in Russia.

After the provisional government disappeared and the role of the central government was usurped by the bolsheviki, many parts of Russia decided to live, temporarily at least, independent of central government, and to work out their local problems through their own properly organized local governments. This movement is significant not only because it solves one of the most important problems confronting the new Russian democracy—the problem of organizing the local governments—it is also a sign that centers for future opposition to Germany have already been organized.

The psychology of the Russian people must be properly understood. Russia is longing for peace, but a separate peace concluded on the terms Germany will dictate will act on the country as the lash of a whip. Russia's losses in the war, up to date, are about 8,000,000 men. Every Russian home is in mourning. There are in Russia now about 40,000,000 or 50,000,000 men and women who have sacrificed the blood of their children, husbands and brothers in this war. Now can you imagine how Russia will feel when the Germans appear, practically rulers in the country, and from day to day the news will be coming that German troops released from the Russian front, through the treachery of the Bolsheviki, are concentrating their endeavors in the west, threatening the very existence of the French, English, and American democracies?

In this Russian psychology lies hope for the Allies and the Allied great cause. The signs of a national movement against the Bolsheviki and the Germans have appeared in Russia, and this movement will grow with every endeavor of Germany to impose her rule on democratic Russia. The main task of the Allies, in case separate peace is concluded, must be an active support of this national movement. The allied democracies must make a definite distinction, once for all, between the Bolsheviki and the Russian people. Whatever the Bolsheviki do, the betrayed Russian democracy should feel that the allied democracies are with her at this critical moment of her life. It should be realized that even if Russia is out of the war, she still remains an important factor in the world situation. The Russian situation is critical but not desperate, and whatever happens, not everything is yet lost for the Allied cause in Russia.

The consolidation of the democratic forces and the establishment of a staple must be properly understood. Russia in Russia's life, after the present chaos. The more thoroughly the Russian democracy is organized, the more powerful the central and the local governments are, the stronger will be the anti-German movement in our country, the movement which will be most useful for the Allies, even with Russia out of the war.

President Wilson has repeatedly stated that one of the Allied war aims is the democratization of Germany. The democratization of Germany is impossible if German Junkerdom is permitted to crush democracy in Russia. On the other hand, the democratization of Germany is inevitable if democratic institutions are firmly established in Russia, and Germany finds herself in an iron ring of great democracies, all fighting the rule of her militaristic clique. This makes the support of the Russian democracy, in her struggle for existence, one of the most important allied tasks, regardless of whether Russia stays in the war or drops out because of exhaustion.

A GOOD WAR YARN.

(Chicago Evening Post.)

One of the neatest war stories that are going about these parts is attributed by Chicago Commerce to Mr. Lee Nichols, the London soldier, who has made a name for himself by his war lectures. The story needs no word to point its delicate compliment to America.

Nichols says:

"I was at Rockford a short time ago looking around your camp, and a boy came up to me in uniform, of course, and said:

"'Say, you are English, aren't you?' I said 'Yes.'

"'Say, have you been in the war?' 'Yes.'

"'Pretty tough out there, ain't it?' 'Yes, pretty tough.'

"'Say, what do you have to do out there? You work in the trenches for 10 days and then go back for five months, don't you?' 'Well, if you reverse it you might get nearer the truth.' I said. So he said, 'Tell me what you do in the trenches.' I said, 'Oh, when you are on guard at night you will have to put your head over the top for two hours out of every six and keep it there.'

"'Say, is there anyone there to see you do it?'

"So I thought, so this is the material that the great national American army is made up of! Then I said to him, 'Where do you come from?'

"'Oh,' he said, 'I come from London.'"

ACCUSED.

GERMAN INFLATION.

(New York Sun.)

Inflation is the order of the day in Germany. Inflated war bonds, inflated bank loans, inflated credit, inflated paper money, inflated prices despite every rigorous measure Prussia can apply. German finance is like the bag Zeppelin. A puncture will be fatal.

Here, how inspiringly different! Here we have no flood of worthless I. O. U.'s issued by a crumbling government. FIVE BELOW ZERO PREDICTED TONIGHT

No Warmer Weather is in Sight, Declares Forecaster McDonough.

With the mercury down to zero last night and with the prospects good for its going as low as 5 below tonight, there is little relief in sight from the present cold snap. "It won't get much warmer at least until after New Year's," was the word given out this morning at the weather observatory.

The light fall of snow last night will remain as the mercury will not go above 32 any time in the next few days.

In Hattiesburg, Miss., where many of the Fort Wayne soldiers are in training, the mean temperature yesterday was 30 above and at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., the mercury stood at 10 above.

First American to Fire on German Sub

Matthew C. Sullivan.

"Sailor of Fortune" is broke, but rich in memories. It was Matt's eagle eye and timely shout of warning that sent America's first shot of the war smashing into the conning tower of an enemy U-boat.

Matt landed in Seattle the other day from Kobe, Japan, after a globe-circling tour as a seaman. All he had in money was an American nickel, a Chinese nickel and two American pennies

Sullivan was the lookout on duty on the steamship Mongolia, which, after his cry of warning, with a single shot sank a German submarine in the English channel.

"We were about forty miles out from Dover when I sighted the submarine," said Sullivan. "I shouted to the officer on the bridge and the order to fire was given. There was nothing to it. That one shell did the business for the U-boat."

TO MAKE STANDARD SUITS.

London, Dec. 15.—(By mail)—The new "standard suits" for men, which are to be manufactured under government control will cost $12 each. The cloth, it is announced "will be composed in the bulk of wool" and through a limited variety of fabrics, mostly of the favorite gray and brown tweeds. The first of the new suits will be placed on the market in February.

Society

It has certainly been many years, if there were ever a time when the holiday season was so quiet as this one of 1917. Only the boys and girls find their spirits rising to the occasions of real party giving or attending, and though there are gatherings of families and of intimate friends every now and then, it is with work bags and knitting or Red Cross sewing, or a talk on the various situations and possibilities of the war over cigars or maybe a game of cards. There were many Christmas trees though not many of them were lighted brilliantly, as patriots were conserving electricity. But the children found as much delight in useful presents and a limited quantity of candy as they did formerly in pounds of sweets and some extravagant gifts.

Many people are to be at home on New Year's eve and day. From some homes have gone invitations to close friends to call during the day, but on the whole it is not going to be a festive time aside from gatherings of home folks. Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Bechtel and children are going to have a reception for their friends on Tuesday afternoon.

MILITANT AND MILITARY IS THIS COSTUME THAT HAS JUST APPEARED

This ordinary pleasing young person is shown in a costume that startled Fifth avenue. There have been many military fashions, but not one of them ever came near this for a militaristic appearance. This feminine piece of apparel is patterned in many ways after the uniform. The coat is more full, and the collar has long points, which are practically the only differences. Swinging from the shoulders is a military cape that adds to the style of the costume. When the wearer smiles, she looks less like Lord Kitchner.—Copyright Underwood & Unnderwood.

Miss Italia Evans, who has gone to New York city to visit Mr. and Mrs. Durr C. Chamberlin, accompanied them home after their visit with Mrs. Chamberlin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ward L. Wilt.

The Wrong She Suffers

Almost every woman composes a book a year: WRONGS I HAVE SUFFERED.

Most husbands and lovers get the book in installments. And fortunate indeed is the man whose serial runs in weekly or monthly rather than in daily chapters.

Woman meditates on her bleeding heart in silence while she rocks the baby or composes chapters of her work as she pushes a flat iron. And she never wastes a line of her literary product. When it is perfected to her satisfaction, she springs it on the one man who must be made to pay, somehow, for her sorrows.

The wife's art is directed toward her husband's uplift. The maiden's complaint is designed to make her lover appreciate her sensitive disposition. Daughter's woes are such as father can solace quickly with a bank note.

For an over-irritated and desperate lover or father there is escape in flight but a husband has simply got to listen to the end of the chapter about—

"What I have to go without—"
"If I hadn't married you—."
"If your sister don't stop telling me how to raise my Johnny—."
"If I were a man in your shoes I'd ask the boss for a raise today—."
"I'll not risk the children's lives in that car again unless you run slower—."
"I'd never slave this way if it wasn't for my babies—."
"Why can't my husband get home to supper on time like all the other men in this street—?"

Few husbands find these quotations unfamiliar. All husbands know that they lose their effect when repeated too often.

So there isn't much harm done provided "Wrongs I have Suffered" remains a de luxe edition with a circulation limited to the family.

But real tragedy arrives when a wife is indiscreet enough to take her narrative to her relatives and neighbors. Their thoughtful censorship soon advertises her domestic tribulations to all the world. Thus are half of the country's divorces promoted.

In the cause of marital peace, there ought to be a dictagraph in every home into which the wife with the bleeding heart could whisper her woes. Then in some chance mood of greater contentment, she could listen to the record of her wrongs—could hear her very words thrown back to her in her own accents—haply to discover that husband is about right when he treats it all as simply silly, haply to decide that she would better not repeat such stuff to Mrs. Neighbor.

MOTHER OF GOVERNOR GOODRICH PASSES ON

Aged Woman Native Daughter of Randolph County, the Place of Her Death.

Winchester, Ind., Dec. 29.—Mrs Elizabeth H. Goodrich, mother of Governor James P. Goodrich, died here early today at the governor's home. She has been ill a long time. Gov. Goodrich had been at her bedside since Thursday. Mrs. Goodrich was born in Randolph county Indiana, Oct. 19, 1840. She had lived in the county the greater part of her life. In 1859 she married John B. Goodrich. Six boys were born, five of whom now are living. After her husband's death in 1872 she moved to a farm near Winchester and raised her family there. By her own work and the assistance of her sons she accumulated considerable property. Last June she had a severe attack of heart trouble but rallied considerably.

SOME EXPERIMENTS IN ESTABLISHING A UNIFORM FOR WOMEN

BY WINONA WILCOX.

Woman has always standardized her clothes more than she has realized. In any circle of dress, mst of its apparently great differences have been pure camouflage.

Rob dress of its color and strip it of its furbelows and its lines would remain straightfront, or hipless, or hourglass or bouffantly bustled, according to the date of making.

Women has always insited on wearing her skirts long or short, scant or full, just as the designers decide for her. She has left it to the corsetmakers to determine whether her waist should be wasp or natural, high or low.

She has put on silk or wool, cotton or linen, velvet, fur or chiffon, exactly as the commercial interests of the country have dictated.

Therefore any lightning change should be easy for her, even to a national uniform, should war impose that duty.

But probably it will be considerably easier to popularize a standardized wartime frock that it will be to design one.

The classic simplicity of primative art inspires most dress reformers. An early and artistic type of national feminine attire must be credited to the Greeks. What is considered an exact reproduction of this ancient universal fashion was woven recently by a group of New York artists. The design is interesting as proving the antiquity of the one-piece dress.

Agitation for dress reform in the United States was begun by Dr. Mary Walker half a century ago. Dr. Walker's idea of a uniform for women was trousers and a frock coat, a modernized version of which leads today's art suggestions.

But no matter what the model may be, a woman cannot put it on in the morning and wear it all day, at all kinds of occupations, in man's careless way. She must always have one kind of a dress for the kitchen and another for out-of-doors.

The national food conservation authorities recently invented a regulation kitchen garment which fastens with a single button and is conveniently finished with detachable collars and cuffs. This type becomes a very smart street dress when developed in cloth with collar and cuffs of fur or velvet.

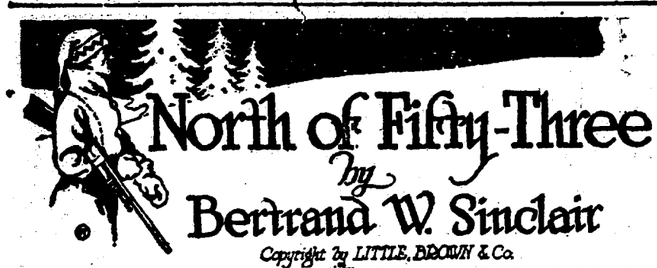

The Polymuriel, or reversible dress for which a prize of $150 was given in a nation-wide contest a year ago recognizes woman's general need of different dresses for different occasions. It is a triplet dress, a three-in-one combination, and it is dull or gray, as it is worn wrong or right side out. By omitting the skirt, it becomes a practical Russian coat and trousers.

A true uniform is already in existence in some schools for girls. Whether made up in white cotton for summer or blue serge for winter, its lovely lines follow the figure in a way which suggests the ancient Greek pattern.

If the war actually makes necessary a uniform for women, it will doubtless also determine what the garb shall be like.

Thousands of women are already wearing olive drab military coats and capes, some with skirts and some with breeches and puttees. The color is compulsory for women who drive ambulances or work in other ways in the war zone. As a war exigency, the color may become fashionable for all civilians, but what the cut of the cloth may be remains the secret of some futurist designer.

A national uniform cannot, however, depart conspicuously from one of the costumes [illegible] lined.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story opens in the town of Granville, Ontario, where Miss Hazel Weir is employed as a stenographer in the office of Harrington and Bush. She is engaged to Jack Barrow, a young real estate agent, and the wedding day is set. While walking with him one Sunday they meet Mr. Bush, Hazel's employer, who for the first time seems to notice her attractiveness. Shortly afterward, at his request, she becomes his private stenographer. After three months Mr. Bush proposes marriage, which Hazel declines, and after a stormy scene in the office Hazel leaves her employment, Mr. Bush warning her he would make her sorry for refusing him.

CHAPTER II—Bush makes an effort, by a gift of flowers, to compromise Hazel in the minds of her friends. She returns them. The next day Bush is thrown from his horse and fatally hurt. He sends for Hazel, who refuses to see him before he dies. Three days afterward it is announced that he left a legacy of $5,000 to Hazel, "in reparation for any wrong I may have done her." Hazel recognizes at once what construction will be put upon the words. Bush had his revenge.

And then she flung herself across the bed and sobbed hysterically into a pillow.

Through the night Hazel dozed fitfully, waking out of uneasy sleep to lie staring, wide-eyed, into the dark, every nerve in her body taut, her mind abnormally active. Grief and anger by turns mastered her, and at daybreak she rose, heavy-lidded and physically weary.

The first thing upon which her gaze alighted was the crumpled photo in its shattered frame; and, sitting on the side of her bed, she laughed at the sudden fury in which she had destroyed it; but there was no mirth in her laughter.

She gathered up the bits of broken glass and the bent frame, and put them in a drawer, dressed herself, and went down to breakfast. She was too deeply engrossed in her own troubles to notice or care whether any subtle change was becoming manifest in the attitude of her fellow boarders. The worst, she felt sure, had already overtaken her.

She had a little time to spare, and that time she devoted to making up a package of Barrow's ring and a few other trinkets which he had given her. This she addressed to his office and posted while on her way to work.

She got through the day somehow, struggling against thoughts that would persist in creeping into her mind and stirring up emotions that she was determined to hold in check. Work, she knew, was her only salvation.

And so she got through the week. Saturday evening came, and she went home, dreading Sunday's idleness, with its memories. The people at Mrs. Stout's establishment, she plainly saw, were growing a trifle shy of her. She had never been on terms of intimacy with any of them during her stay there, hence their attitude troubled little after the first supersensitiveness wore off. But her own friends, girls with whom she had played in the pinafore-and-pigtail stages of her youth, young men who had paid court to her until Jack Barrow monopolized her—she did not know how they stood. She had seen none of them since Bush launched his last bolt. Barrow she had passed on the street just once, and when he lifted his hat distantly, she looked straight ahead, and ignored him. Whether she hurt him as much as she did herself by the cut direct would be hard to say.

When Sunday noon arrived, and the phone had failed to call her once, and not one of all her friends had dropped in, Hazel twisted her chair so that she could stare at the image of herself in the mirror.

"You're in a fair way to become a pariah, it seems," she said bitterly. "What have you done, I wonder, that you've lost your lover, and that Alice and May and Hortense and all the rest of them keep away from you? Nothing—not a thing—except that your looks attracted a man, and the man threw stones when he couldn't have his way. Oh, well, what's the difference? You've got two good hands, and you're not afraid of work."

She walked out to Granville park after luncheon, and found a seat on a shaded bench beside the lake. People passed and repassed—couples, youngsters, old people, children. It made her lonely beyond measure. She had never been isolated among her own kind before.

A group of young people came sauntering along the path. Hazel looked up as they neared her, chattering to each other. Maud Steele and Bud Wells, and—why, she knew every one of the party. Hazel caught her breath as they came abreast, not over ten feet away. The three young men raised their hats self-consciously.

"Hello, Hazel!" the girl said.

But they passed on. It seemed to Hazel that they quickened their pace a trifle. It made her grit her teeth in resentful anger. Ten minutes later she left the park and caught a car home. Once in her room she broke down.

"Oh, I'll go mad if I stay here and this sort of thing goes on!" she cried forlornly.

A sudden thought struck her.

"Why should I stay here?" she said aloud. "Why? What's to keep me here? I can make my living anywhere."

"But, no," she asserted passionately, "I won't run away. That would be running away, and I haven't anything to be ashamed of. I will not run."

Still the idea kept recurring to her. It promised relief from the hurt of averted faces and coolness where she had a right to expect sympathy and friendship.

The legal notice of the bequest was mailed to her. She tore up the letter and threw it in the fire as if it were some poisonous thing. The idea of accepting his money stirred her to perfect frenzy. If she could have poured the whole miserable tale into some sympathetic ear she would have felt better, and each day would have seemed less hard. But there was no such ear. Her friends kept away.

Saturday of the second week her pay envelope contained a brief notice that the firm no longer required her services. There was no explanation, only perfunctory regrets; and, truth to tell, Hazel cared little to know the real cause. Any one of a number of reasons might have been sufficient. But she realized how those who knew her would take it, what cause they would ascribe. It did not matter, though. The very worst, she reasoned, could not be so bad as what had already happened—could be no more disagreeable than the things she had endured in the past two weeks. Losing a position was a trifle. But it set her thinking again.

She stopped at a news stand and bought the evening papers. Up in the top rack of the stand the big heads of an assorted lot of Western papers caught her eye. She bought two or three on the impulse of the moment, without any definite purpose except to look them over out of mere curiosity. With these tucked under her arm, she turned into the boarding-house gate, ran up the steps, and, upon opening the door, her ears were gladdened by the first friendly voice she had heard—it seemed to her—in ages, a voice withal that she had least expected to hear. A short, plump woman rushed out of the parlor, and precipitated herself bodily upon Hazel.

"Kitty Ryan! Where in the wide, wide world did you come from?" Hazel cried.

"From the United States and everywhere," Miss Ryan replied. "Take me up to your room, dear, where we can talk our heads off.

"And, furthermore, Hazie, I'll be pleased to have you address me as Mrs. Brooks, my dear young woman," the plump lady laughed, as she settled herself in a chair in Hazel's room.

"So you're married?" Hazel said.

"I am that," Mrs. Kitty responded emphatically, "to the best boy that ever drew breath. And so should you be, dear girl. I don't see how you've escaped so long—a good-looking girl like you. The boys were always crazy after you. There's nothing like having a good man to take care of you, dear."

"Heaven save me from them!" Hazel answered bitterly. "If you've got one you're lucky. I can't see them as anything but self-centered, arrogant, treacherous brutes."

"Lord bless us—it's worse than I thought!" Kitty jumped up and threw her arms around Hazel. "There, there—don't waste a tear on them. I know all about it. I came over to see you just as soon as some of the girls—nasty little cats they are; a woman's always meaner than a man, dear—just as soon as they gave me an inkling of how things were going with you. Pshaw! The world's full of good, decent fellows—and you've got one coming."

"If you'd had my experience of the last two weeks you'd sing a different tune," Hazel vehemently declared. "I hate—I—"

And then she gave way, and indulged in the luxury of turning herself loose on Kitty's shoulder. Presently she was able to wipe her eyes and relate the whole story from the Sunday Mr. Bush stopped and spoke to her in the park down to that evening.

Kitty nodded understandingly. "But the girls have handed it to you worse than the men, Hazel," she observed sagely. "Jack Barrow was just plain crazy jealous, and a man like that can't help acting as he did. You're really fortunate, I think, because you'd not be really happy with a man like that. But the girls that you and I grew up with—they should have stood by you, knowing you as they did; yet you see they were ready to think the worst of you. They nearly always do when there's a man in the case. That's a weakness of our sex, dear. Well, you aren't working. Come and stay with me. Hubby's got a two-year contract with the World Advertising company. We'll be located here that long at least. Come and stay with us."

"Oh, no, I couldn't think of that, Kitty!" Hazel faltered. "You know I'd love to, and it's awfully good of you, but I think I'm just about ready to go away from Granville."

"Well, come and stop with us till you do go," Kitty insisted. "We are going to take a furnished cottage for a while. Though, between you and me, dear, knowing people as I do, I can't blame you for wanting to be where their nasty tongues can't wound you."

But Hazel was obdurate. She would not inflict herself on the one friend she had left. And Kitty, after a short talk, berated her affectionately for her independence and rose to go.

"For," said she, "I didn't get hold of this thing till Addie Horton called at the hotel this afternoon, and I didn't stop to think that it was near teatime, but came straight here. Jimmie'll think I've eloped. So ta-ta. I'll come out tomorrow about two. I have to confab with a house agent in the forenoon. By-by."

Hazel sat down and actually smiled when Kitty was gone. Somehow a grievous burden had fallen off her mind. Likewise, by some psychological quirk, the idea of leaving Granville and making her home elsewhere no longer struck her as running away under fire. She felt that she could adventure forth among strangers in a strange country with a better heart, knowing that Kitty Brooks would put a swift quietus on any gossip that came her way.

So that Hazel went down to the dining room light-heartedly, and when the meal was finished came back and fell to reading her papers. The first of the Western papers was a Vancouver World. In a real-estate man's half-page she found a diminutive sketch plan of the city on the shores of Burrard inlet, Canada's principal outpost on the far Pacific.

"It's quite a big place," she murmured absently. "One would be far enough away there, goodness knows."

Then she turned to the "Help Wanted" advertisements. And down near the bottom of the column she happened on an inquiry for a school-teacher, female preferred, in an out-of-the-way district in the interior of the province.

"Now, that—" Hazel thought.

She had a second-class certificate tucked away among her belongings. Originally it had been her intention to teach, and she had done so one term in a backwoods school when she was eighteen. With the ending of the term she had returned to Granville, studied that winter, and got her second certificate; but at the same time she had taken a business-college course, and the following June found her clacking a typewriter at nine dollars a week. And her teacher's diploma had remained in the bottom of her trunk ever since.

Unaccountably, since Kitty Brooks' visit, she found herself itching to turn her back on Granville and its unpleasant associations. She did not attempt to analyze the feeling. Strange lands, and most of all, the West, held alluring promise. One thing was certain: Granville, for all she had been born there, and grown to womanhood there, was now no place for her. The very people who knew her best would make her suffer most.

She spent that evening going thoroughly over the papers and writing letters to various school boards, taking a chance at one or two she found in the Manitoba paper, but centering her hopes on the country west of the Rockies. Her savings in the bank amounted to three hundred odd dollars, and cash in hand brought the sum to a total of three hundred and sixty-five. At any rate, she had sufficient to insure her living for quite a long time. And she went to bed feeling better than she had felt for two weeks.

Very shortly thereafter—almost, it seemed, by return mail—Hazel got replies to her letters of inquiry. The fact that each and every one seemed bent on securing her services astonished her.

But the reply from Cariboo Meadows, B. C., the first place she had thought of, decided her. The member of the school board who replied held forth the natural beauty of the country as much as he did the advantages of the position. The thing that perhaps made the strongest appeal to Hazel was a little kodak print inclosed in the letter, showing the schoolhouse.

The building itself was primitive enough, of logs, with a pole-and-sod roof. But it was the huge background, the timbered mountains rising to snowclad heights against a cloudless sky, that attracted her.

She sat for a long time looking at the picture, thinking. Here was the concrete, visible presentment of something that drew her strongly. She found an atlas, and looked up Cariboo Meadows on the map. It was not to be found, and Hazel judged it to be a purely local name. But the letter told her that she would have to stage it a hundred and sixty-five miles north from Ashcroft, B. C., where the writer would meet her and drive her to the Meadows.

"What a country!" she whispered. "It's wild; really, truly wild; and everything I've ever seen has been tamed and smoothed down, and made eminently respectable and conventional long ago. That's the place. That's where I'm going, and I'm going it blind, I'm not going to tell anyone—not even Kitty—until, like a bear, I've gone over the mountain to see what I can see."

Within an hour of that Miss Hazel Weir had written to accept the terms offered by the Cariboo Meadows school district, and was busily packing her trunk.

CHAPTER IV.

Cariboo Meadows.

A tall man, sunburned, slow-speaking, met Hazel at Soda Creek, the end of her stage journey, introducing himself as Jim Briggs.

"Pretty tiresome trip, ain't it?" he observed. "You'll have a chance to rest decent tonight, and I got a team uh bays that'll yank yuh to the Meadows in four hours 'n' a half. My wife'll be plumb tickled to have yuh. They ain't much more'n half a dozen white women in ten miles uh the Meadows. We keep a boardin' house. Hope you'll like the country."

That was a lengthy speech for Jim Briggs, as Hazel discovered when she rolled out of Soda Creek behind the "team uh bays." His conversation was decidedly monosyllabic. But he could drive, if he was no talker, and his team could travel. By eleven o'clock Hazel found herself at Cariboo Meadows.

China's the Place Boys, Says Expert

"Why don't more young American men come to China, a land of wonderful opportunities—to try their fortunes?" asked Miss Clara Veisbehn, born in Russia and reared in Shanghai, upon her recent arrival at San Francisco. Why not, indeed! But wait, boys, don't crowd to make reservations for the Shanghai boat! Miss Veisbehn is going to keep that smile in the United States for some time while she acquires a college education.

NEW OFFICIALS TO TAKE OFFICE JAN. 7

Mayor-Elect Baker Getting Ready to Take Charge at Columbia City.

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Columbia City, Ind., Dec. 29.—Mayor-elect John W. Baker, republican, and the city's new official, and his council composed of three republicans and two democrats go into office Monday evening, January 7, after the old council and present Mayor Frank L. Myers close up the business for the year. The new mayor and council have already been sworn in. City Clerk Erdman, democrat, succeeds himself, and Treasurer Edward C. Binder will be succeeded by Reed N. Willits. Mayor-elect John W. Baker has announced he will re-appoint the present fire chief, Henry E. Romey, likewise the present city marshal, William K. Gregg. The new city board of health will be composed of Dr. D. S. Linvill, secretary; Dr. O. V. Schuman and Arthur Corse. The retiring city board is Dr. Ben P. Linvill, secretary and Jacob Overdeer and Lester Williams. Mayor-elect Baker will request that all the city police officers and the two men in charge of the fire truck shall wear uniforms.

Fort Wayne Man Brings Suit.

J. V. Banta, real estate dealer of Fort Wayne, who with two friends got into an altercation with his tenant, D. L. Aden and son Lawrence, last summer, east of the city on the Banta farm, and who was prosecuting witness in cases terminating in the fining of the younger Aden, has filed suit in the circuit court against the Adens, through Attorneys Gates & Whiteleather, asking that they be ejected from the farm, which they leased for a period of three years, expiring March 27, 1919. Banta avers in the complaint that he is not getting his half, according to contract, of the produce, and that he has been mulcted out of a certain share. He also claims other agreements in the contract have not been lived up to by the Adens, whose violence he further says he fears, if he attempts to enter his farm. In another action Banta sues the elder Aden for judgment of $600 on a note for $495.80, secured by mortage on chattels which Banta alleges Aden has been selling. In both cases receivers are asked to take charge of affairs, and liquidate, giving the defendant Aden that which is his within hi own right.

R. J. Jontz Dead.

R. J. Jontz, former hardware dealer of this city, and in earlier years a dry goods merchant at Churubusco and Columbia City, who with his daughter Miss Vera left Thanksgiving day for Blythesville, Ark., to visit his brother-in-law, W. W. Hollopeter, died there Thursday afternoon, following a relapse from kidney and heart trouble that he suffered shortly after his arrival. Accompanied by members of the Hollopeter family, his daughter, Vera, and son, Merle of Blythesville, as well as the two daughters, Mesdames Esta Goodrich and A. E. Erdman, who left this city for Arkansas several days ago. The remains of the deceased resident of this city arrived here late Friday evening and were taken to the home to await burial Sunday afternoon in the Masonic cemetery. Mr. Jontz was born near Silver Lake, 68 years ago. During his business career in this city he had amassed a comfortable fortune, and was until recently a heavy stockholder in the Harper Buggy Co. At the time of his death he was stockholder and director of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. The wife of the deceased, formerly Miss Flora Hollopeter, died in 1900, leaving the above mentioned children living. Surviving brothers and sisters are: John, of South Bend; Greel, of Silver Lake; Eugene, address unknown; Mrs. Leffel and Mrs. Reams, of North Manchester, and Mrs. John Sitton, of Silver Lake.

A Memorial to Justin Nelson Study

For Twenty-One Years Superintendent of the Public Schools of Fort Wayne

The resolutions and other expressions herewith appearing were evoked by the death of Prof. Justin Nelson Study, for twenty-one years superintendent of the public schools of Fort Wayne. They have been assembled in this form as a memorial to him and his work in Fort Wayne upon request of many of those who worked under and with him in the cause of public education in this city.

JUSTIN NELSON STUDY.

A Memorial Read at City Superintendents' Section of State Teachers' Association.

Justin Nelson Study, one of the charter members of this Association, died at his home in Fort Wayne at 6:40 o'clock on the afternoon of August 29th, 1917. His death followed a brief illness from heart trouble. For two weeks immediately prior to his death he had been away from his office. For the greater part of that time, however, he had attended to his mail and directed preparations for the opening of school at his home, and on the afternoon of his death, went over the assignment of teachers for the approaching school year, suggested changes and when completed expressed his satisfaction with the arrangement. A few minutes before his death he sent a message to Mr. Cook, a member of the Board, concerning the salaries of teachers.

At the time of his death Mr. Study was in his 72nd year. He was born on a farm in Wayne County, Indiana, February 25th, 1846, and received his early education in the schools of Hagerstown, Indiana. His university work was done in the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. From that institution he received his Bachelor's degree in 1871 and his Master's degree in 1874.

His professional life as a teacher in the Indiana Schools extended through practically a half century. For more than 46 years he served as Superintendent of City Schools in Indiana, being Superintendent at Anderson from 1871 to 1881, at Greencastle from 1881 to 1884, at Richmond from 1884 to 1896 and at Fort Wayne from 1896 until his death. While at Anderson he read law and was admitted to the Madison County Bar, but never engaged in practice.

Less than one month before his death he entered upon his twenty-second year as Superintendent of the Ft. Wayne City Schools and for a like period he had been exofficio a member of the State Board of Education. That he was faithful to every trust is evidenced not alone by common rumor and report but by the statements of those who worked with him and know most of his life and work. From Mr. Cook who for twelve years has been a member of his Board at Fort Wayne, we have the following statement:

"Mr. Study was a man of exceptional qualifications, possessing many traits of character that are seldom included in the requirements that go to make up a successful Superintendent of Schools. He not only possessed the necessary training but was a man of great executive ability. He was at all times diplomatic in his relations with teachers and while he was always firm in his convictions, he had a way of convincing teachers and those under him, that his way of thinking was better than theirs, and when he made an ultimate decision it met with the approval of the teachers collectively and time proved that his judgment was right. While he made no pretensions of being an orator whenever he had anything to say people listened, knowing that he knew what he was talking about and would have something to say that would prove of benefit to them.

Never an aggressive man, he was always watching for the best things that would have a tendency to improve the efficiency of the schools and was ready to adopt any new method and give it a fair trial. He was not a theorist nor a faddist but possessed at all times that sober judgment that brought him the reputation he had attained. Always pleasant and affable, his words of good will brought cheer to many a struggling teacher. His relations with his Board were always pleasant, and those who knew him best never forgot the pleasant and instructive hours spent with him."

Members of the State Board of Education have testified as to his ability and the high value of his work in connection with that work. The welfare of the children of the state was always upon his mind. In him their interests had an ardent advocate.

His standing in the community and as a citizen was ably set forth in the following editorial published in the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette the day following his death:

"The unexpected death of Prof. Justin N. Study, Superintendent of Schools, will impress the majority of the citizens of Fort Wayne as in the nature of a calamity to the community. For more than two decades this great educator has directed the public school system of the city. During the long period he has grown steadily in popularity and in the confidence of school patrons. A man of high educational ideals, possessed of the high constructive talent, impressed by progressive ideas, and gifted with more than ordinary executive capacity, he has impressed his influence indelibly upon the community. It has always been an influence for the good. His reputation has extended over the state and far beyond and his work as a member of the State Board of Education has been of the kind that has made him so valuable to the people of Fort Wayne. There is a story—we forget the author—of the appearance at some function of men of distinction. Most of the men were proud of the part they played, of the position they had attained. One was a great statesman whose name was on the lips of men. Another was a brilliant orator—the idol of the cheering multitude, and another was a scientist who had served mankind.

"And what have you done?" was finally asked of a quiet modest man sitting far back.

"I am a teacher—I taught these men." And the teacher was awarded the place of honor.

For in the final analysis of things no profession is of such vital importance as that of the teacher who molds the minds of the young, inspires them during their impressionable period with the ideals that are to dominate and direct their lives, and prepares men for citizenship.

In this profession none have stood higher in Indiana than Prof. Study. His splendid work goes on—for the harvest from his sowing is not all in. In a personal sense his loss will be deeply felt for he was a man of fine social instincts. He has impressed his personality upon the community and his memory will abide."

In addition to the above it has been our privilege to read resolutions by the Trustees of the School City of Fort Wayne, by the Special Supervisors in the Fort Wayne City Schools, by the Teachers in the Fort Wayne Public Schools, and by the Fort Wayne Principals' Club, all commending his life and his work in the highest terms and voicing their sympathy to his bereaved family and friends.

The home life of Mr. Study was of the highest type. In 1874 he was married to Miss Belle Wiggins of Hagerstown, Indiana. Two of his children, his only son and one daughter, died in infancy. Three daughters and the devoted wife are still living. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. His religion was a matter of daily practice in his relations to his family and to his fellow men. Much of his Christian practice was amid scenes to which the world was not a witness.

He was a thirty-third degree mason. His funeral was held in the beautiful Scottish Rite Cathedral at Fort Wayne. After the funeral his body was taken to Hagerstown and there in the beautiful little cemetery, amid the scenes of his boyhood and youth, he was laid to rest.

It is impossible in this brief way to estimate the influence of such a life or to fittingly express our appreciation of his work. He was a sympathetic co-worker in this association, a professional brother to us all. We can only give expression to our appreciation of a friend that is gone; tender our sincere sympathy to those whom his death has left especially bereaved and add this tribute to his memory.

BY THE PRINCIPALS' CLUB.

Resolutions by the Heads of the Various Public School Units of Fort Wayne.

"Whereas, Justin N. Study died suddenly at his residence on Wayne street on Wednesday evening of August the twenty-ninth of this year, nineteen hundred seventeen, the members of the Principals' club, on this their first regular meeting after his decease, desire to adopt and place upon their records the following resolutions:

"Resolved, Inasmuch, as it has pleased our Divine Father, in His wisdom, to remove from our midst, in the height of his powers, Supt. J. N. Study to enter upon the happiness of an immortal existence, it is eminently appropriate that the members of this club pay their tribute of respect to their late distinguished superintendent, who reflected honor upon every association with which he was connected; who has left us a legacy to be cherished with gratitude and pride in the services he rendered to the cause of popular education, by preserving in a permanent form some of the numerous tributes to the memory of our trusty counselor and esteemed friend.

"Resolved, That our school corporation which has been so long blessed by his presence has sustained a loss which is justly regarded as a calamity, and which affects with unspeakable sorrow this entire community in which he had so long lived.

"Resolved, That as members of this club, we regret we are no longer to be assisted in our deliberations by his wisdom and experience in school affairs; by his prompt readiness to serve in all official relations;

"That we record our individual dependence upon him for advice and assistance in every emergency and in all good works.

"That Justin N. Study's highest happiness was in ministering to the welfare of the school.

"That throughout his long and honorable career he regarded the good of the child first.

"That in certain respects Justin N. Study was a very remarkable man;

"On all occasions he was a gentleman;

"At all times he bore himself with a quiet dignity, which was fit and appropriate;

"When smarting under misconstruction of his motives and acts he did not lose his dignity, nor indulge in harsh language;

"His keen sense of humor helped to tide over many a disagreeable situation;

"That in any good cause he was possessed of indefatigable industry and faithfully adhered to principles of justice and honor;

"That his merits as a school man were acknowledged throughout the state;

"That though sometimes called cold in his sympathies, the impression soon corrected itself when one came in direct contact with him, either socially or in the ordinary intercourse of business life;

"That no one ever went to him for kindness, sympathy or counsel and found him either cold or repellant but ready with cordial co-operation;

"That he administered his trusts as a personal duty;

"That he acted on no measure without thorough investigation;

"That he dignified his public station by private virtues;

"That his presence gave a peculiar dignity to our meetings which it will be difficult to replace;

"That it is probable the high-bred and in-bred courtesy we all so much admired may be an explanation of some of the things in his character which have received adverse criticism;

"Resolved, That while we little thought when we lately saw him that Justin N. Study was so soon to fall asleep, we bow in devout submission to the Divine Will and recall with gratitude his distinguished services and regard it as a pleasure and a privilege to cherish the memory of all that was fine, useful, and honorable in his life and character and make it an incentive in our hearts to a like fidelity. He had finished his course; he had lived his three score and ten years and cannot be said to have died prematurely and to us falls the privilege to hold his example in precious remembrance.

"Resolved, That we cordially unite with the Teachers' club in any movement to honor his memory or commemorate his name;

"Resolved, That the secretary of the Principals' club be directed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased and that they be entered upon the records of the club and that every member affix his signature:

JUSTIN NELSON STUDY.

In Memoriam—Adopted by Ft. Wayne Board of School Commissioners. October, 1917.

Justin Nelson Study, for twenty-one years the superintendent of the public schools of Fort Wayne and our esteemed associate in the management of the school system of our city, reached the end of a long, useful and honorable life on the 29th day of August, 1917. We, the undersigned members of the school board, desire the records to show our great appreciation of his services to the people of Fort Wayne and our tribute to his personal and professional character.

Justin Nelson Study was born of American parents of sturdy Christian character with a love for the things that are pure and of good report in this life and among them was their love of education and the Christian church. His early influences, therefore, laid the foundation for that purity of heart and that quickness of mind through which he won and held the respect and esteem of all with whom he ever came in contact. Now that he has left us and we realize the void, we know better than ever the sterling quality of his heart and the giant strength of his mind. We realize more than ever the splendid polish of his intellect and the profound depths of the knowledge his constant study had given him. No day passed without adding something to the wealth of his information. His mental habit was one of order and, therefore, what he knew he could impart,—and therein lay the reason of his success as an educator and a molder of the ideals of the young who came under his influence. It was a pleasure as well as an honor to be associated with him in his high calling.

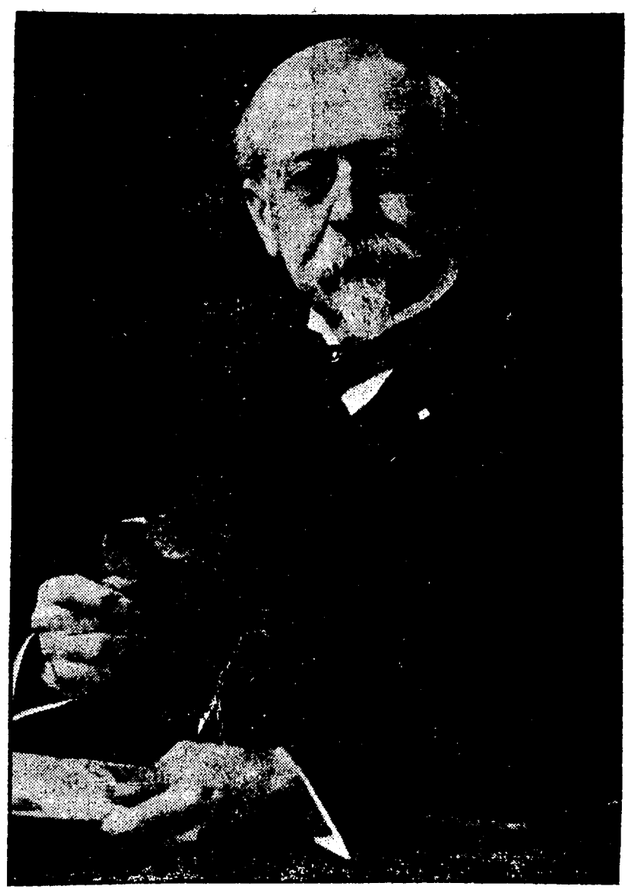

As representatives of the educational interests of the city of Fort Wayne, we deplore the loss of his services, but it is a matter of profound satisfaction that he was spared to our people for more than a score of years. The city is to be congratulated that the schools had the benefit of his guiding hand so long. We believe it literally true that while he had passed the allotted score, the virile powers of the years which men call the prime of life ripened but did not weaken in him as age crept on. As it takes a beautiful character to grow old gracefully, it is proof of a strong character far beyond the ordinary that one grows old in years without loss of the powers and graces of his prime. Such a man was Justin Nelson Study.

We deeply sympathize with the wife and the daughters in their grievous loss. Their sorrow is profound but throughout life theirs will be the comfort that as husband and father no man ever measured to a higher stature. From whatever viewpoint the mind, heart and life of Justin Nelson Study may be studied, it will be found that he was a Stalwart American gentleman, whose death was a heavy loss to his family, to his city and to his state.

The secretary of the board is instructed to spread this tribute on the records.

A. L. RANDALL, President.
E. W. COOK, Secretary.
W. H. SHAMBAUGH, Treasurer.

EDUCATOR WHO LATELY DIED

THE LATE JUSTIN NELSON STUDY.

IN MEMORIAM.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 15, 1917.

Once again we are reminded that the duration of life on this earth is uncertain and we are called upon to mourn the death of an esteemed and beloved Frater and Sir Knight. The ever living God gives us life and controls our destiny. His will is our guide: His love our support: His protection our faith and His promise our salvation. Let us be true and faithful to all the tenets of Christian Knighthood.

Eminent Sir Justin N. Study received his masonic degrees and orders as follows:

In Webb Lodge No. 24 F. & A. M.
Entered Apprentice March 24, 1886.
Fellow Craft, April 7th, 1886.
Master Mason, April 21st, 1886.
In King Solomon Chapter No. 4 R. A. M.
Mark Master, April 27th, 1888.
Past Master, May 25th, 1888.
Most Excellent Master, May 25 1888.
Royal Arch Mason, June 8th, 1888.
In Richmond Commandery No. 8 K. T.
Red Cross, May 11th, 1891.
Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, June 8th, 1891.
All at Richmond, Indiana.

He served as Master of Webb Lodge No. 24 F. & A. M. during the years of 1891, 1892, 1894, 1895 and 1896.

He was admitted to Fort Wayne Commandery No. 4 K. T. by demit from Richmond Commandery No. 8 K. T. January 15th, 1897, and served in the exalted position of Eminent Commander during the years of 1902 and 1903.

He was again honored by being crowned an honorary member of the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General at Boston, Mass., October 1, 1912.

Thus was he honored by his Masonic Brothers and Sir Knights.

As a civilian, he devoted his entire business life to teaching and public school work. For nearly thirty years he was Superintendent of Public Schools in Fort Wayne and during his administration of that office he gained a lasting reputation for efficient work and was recognized as one of the foremost leaders in his profession.

He was a man of strong character, patriotic and loyal in his service to his Country and the public: devoted to his family as a loving husband and a kind father. He was forceful and persistent in doing right. He was gentle, kind and sympathetic, and those who knew him best loved him most. Let us cherish his memory and imitate his virtues.

He was born in Wayne County February 25th, 1846, and died at Fort Wayne, Indiana, August 29th, 1917.

We wish he could have lived longer, but we humbly submit to the will of Him, who in His divine wisdom ruleth all things.

We extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy.

We recommend that these expressions of respect, love and sympathy be spread upon the records of our Commandery and that a copy be sent to the family of our departed Frater.

SYMPATHY EXTENDED.

Unanimous Expression of the Northern Indiana Superintendents' Club.

November 2nd, 1917.

Mrs. Justin N. Study, Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Dear Mrs. Study: On October 19th, 1917, the Northern Indiana Superintendents' club met at South Bend. One familiar face was missing, one very much respected and beloved member could not, in flesh, answer the roll call. Yet many times during the day he was most kindly remembered and mentioned. All thought of him as present in spirit. Certainly it is a consolation to know that the deeds ond thoughts of good men live after them. With you and your children we mourn him as having departed from among us. With you and them we rejoice in the excellence of his deeds, the nobility of his thoughts and the sturdiness of his character.

By unanimous vote of the club, the secretary was directed to extend to you the sincere sympathy of each and all the members. May God's blessings rest upon you and your family.

Sincerely,
EDWIN N. CANINE,
Secretary Pro Tem.

FROM HIGH ASSOCIATES.

Memorial by Indiana State Board of Education of Which Mr. Study Was a Member.

The state board of education has learned of the passing away of its senior member at his home in Fort Wayne, Indiana, on the 29th of August, 1917.

Justin N. Study had been a member of the state board of education for twenty-two years. During this long period of service he missed very few meetings, and this only when incapacitated by illness or prevented by other unavoidable cause. He was prompt, regular, painstaking and conscientious in the performance of every duty devolving upon him as a board member. He was remarkably alert and attentive to every important question that came before the board for consideration and his judgment on all educational and practical subjects was sound and trustworthy.

Professor Study was a man of scholarly attainments, unusual business capacity and rare administrative ability. He was an intelligent, genial, companionable man with whom it was always a pleasure to be associated—a faithful official, a sincere friend and an exemplary citizen.

This board desires to bear testimony to the faithfulness and efficiency of Professor Study as an educator, to his usefulness and value as a member of the state board of education and to his uprightness and exemplary character as a citizen of Indiana and of the country at large.

To his family and friends this board tenders its profoundest sympathy in this hour of their desolation and loss.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by the Teachers of the Public Schools of the City of Fort Wayne.

The following resolutions upon the death of Supt. J. N. Study were passed by the teachers of Fort Wayne:

Whereas, It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst, our beloved Supt. J. N. Study, our friend, whose personal interest, kindly advice and unfailing fairness have helped us over many a hard place and inspired us with deeper interest and greater efforts for the advancement of the common weal, whose strong influence will still be with us as a potent factor to help us attain the high ideals he ever held before us, and

Whereas, We feel his death is a great calamity to the city of Fort Wayne, as well as an irreparable loss to us, be it

Resolved, That we, the teachers of Fort Wayne, extent our sympathy to the family in this, their great bereavement, which is also our bereavement, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they be printed in the city papers.

Committee,
TEACHERS OF FORT WAYNE.

BY THE SUPERVISORS.

Resolutions Adopted by the Late Superintendent's Assistants in the City Schools.

To Mrs. J. N. Study and Family.

Resolved: In the death of Supt. Study, we, his supervisors, feel the loss of our best school friend.

That his trust and confidence in us blended our views into a unit of that until his desires came to be ours.

His place in our memory cannot and will never be filled, but as his interest and effort in the work of the schools placed these schools, at all times, before any personal consideration he had for himself, so we as a united body feel this same interest in carrying on, so far as is in our power, the work outlined by our revered superintendent.

To you, his family, we express deep sympathy and friendship, and reiterate the words, "He is not dead," and his work, the seed of which is so well sown goes on and on and on.

The supervisors,
WM. MILES.
ALICE E. HALL.
CARRIE A. SNIVELY,
HENRY MEYER,
O. L. ROGERS,
J. J. RITTER,
LOUISE N. WOLF.
GAIL CALMERTON.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by a Committee of the Principals, Supervisors and Teachers of Fort Wayne.

Whereas, it has pleased Divine Providence to remove from our midst our beloved superintendent and fellow-worker, Justin N. Study, a man with great steadfastness of character, strong executive ability, a high sense of justice and whose friendly personal interest endeared him to us all, and

Whereas, no man has done more to bring the school system of Indiana up to its present high standard, and no man stands higher in the educational forces of the state, and whose death is felt as a personal loss and a public calamity.

Therefore, be it resolved that we, the teachers of Allen county and the city of Fort Wayne, in the Allen County Teachers' institute, assembled, do extend our sympathy to the wife and family so greatly bereaved and to the community, where his loss will be so keenly felt, and

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and published in the daily papers.

The Committee of Principals, Supervisors and Teachers.

CARRIER PIGEONS SUCCEED WHERE TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH FAIL

When telephone and telegraph communication is cut off at the front the services of the military carrier pigeons is unvaluable. They are being used more in present day warfare, than possibly ever before. With almost every unit is a military motor car home for pigeons, and they always prove of great service.

LODGE NOTES.

KILBOURNE HONORED BY MIZPAH TEMPLE

Shriners Elect Him Potentate—Highest Office in Order.

At the Scottish Rite cathedral, Friday night, Mizpah temple, order of the Mystic Shrine, held its annual election and chose to the office of potentate—the highest within the power of the temple, E. H. Kilbourne. There was a large and representative crowd in attendance, many members being present from out of town, among the number many well known northern Indiana business men.

The following officers were chosen: Potentate, E. H. Kilbourne; chief rabban, Charles Gumpper; assistant rabban, Charles Meigs; high priest and prophet, E. A. Wagner; oriental guide, Walter Seavey; recorder, Charles E. Read; treasurer, George Pixley; trustee for three years, Charles Wilding; auditors, Sam Newell, Wade Bailey and Frank Rouzer.

The following delegates to the imperial council at Atlantic City next summer were named: Messrs. Kilbourne, Gumpper, Meigs and E. H. Merritt.

Postponed Meeting.

The scheduled meeting for inspection of 3. W. Stirk circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., which was to have been Friday evening was postponed. A telegram was received late in the afternoon to the effect that Mrs. Dailey, the department president of Indiana, would not be able to reach Fort Wayne from Terre Haute. The postponed date will probably be set for some time in January. The annual installation of officers of Stirk circle will be held Friday evening, January 11. A social hour was spent in the quarters following the executive session Friday night. Refreshments were served. Members of the G. A. R. were present.

Will Distribute Rabbits.

There were distributed to the poor of Fort Wayne Saturday morning more than 150 rabbits. O. E. Mohler, secretary of the associated charities, supervised the work. This is the result of two days' drive by members of the B. P. O. E., which ended Thursday evening. The results of the drive were very satisfactory to all concerned when the unfavorable weather is taken into consideration.

New Year's Watch Party.

The B. P. O. E. will give a dance and watch party for their families and friends at the Elks temple Monday evening. In their announcement they say: "All who would win joy must share it; happiness was born a twin." Music for the occasion will be furnished by Jackson's orchestra and jazz band from Anderson and the Gaston Bailhe orchestra of this city.

Public Installation.

Our home lodge, No. 881, I. O. O. F. will give a public installation January 4. Preceding this the regular meeting will take place at 7:30 p. m. after which the installation will be carried out. A short program will be rendered after the ceremonies in honor of the sixth anniversary of this lodge. All Odd Fellows and their families are cordially invited. Clarence Miller is the N. G.

W. R. C. MEET FRIDAY.

Mrs. Etta Bickel, the newly elected president of the W. R. C. of Sion S. Bass post, G. A. R., presided over a very enthusiastic meeting at Vordermark hall Friday. Arrangements were completed for the installation ceremonies which will be in conjunction with the veterans of the post which is to be held January 14. The ladies also accepted an invitation to attend the installation ceremonies of Lawton-Wayne post which will be held January 4. Mrs. Sutton, the retiring president, gave may little gifts to members as tokens of appreciation who had been unfailing attendants at the meetings throughout the year.

VALUE OF PUBLICITY.

London, Dec. 15.—(By Mail.)—Publicity given to two successful jewelry robberies about six months ago has resulted in an epidemic of such thefts in London, the police say. Among the latest victims are the Duchess of Marlborough and Lady Chesham. A diamond brooch valued at $5,000 was stolen from the duchess at a recent society bazar, while Lady Chesham lost a diamond ring worth $7,500 at a similar function.

INDOOR TENNIS TOURNEY.

New York, Dec. 29.—National indoor tennis titles were up for decision in the juniors' and boys' classes rede today. As the result of the semi-nals in the annual championship tournaments yesterday Edward M. Hendrickson, of Amherst college, and Harold L. Taylor, of Brooklyn Preparatory school, are the contenders for the junior title and Cecil Donaldson, of Brooklyn, and A. Bassford, III, of this city, for the boys.

AT THE MAJESTIC

Zallah and the "Tempters" at the Majestic Tomorrow.

As the burlesque season rolls on a few of the shows that make their annual visit seem far superior to the others in quality as well as in quantity. One of these is "The Tempters," a production that The Baker & Kahn Amusement company may well feel proud of in every way. The costumes are costly and of pleasing color and designs. The tights and stockings are of pure silk. The twenty-four chorus girls are the pick of New York as Mr. Baker has his office open twelve months in the year and the result is that only the best talent is selected for his four productions on the American burlesque circuit.

The principal fun-makers, Max Fields and Sidney Rogers are a couple of boys that know all the ins and outs of burlesque and guarantee the audience a laugh a minute. The balance of the cast includes such well known burlesquers as Harry Keeler, Eddie Healey, Ruth Everett, Evelyn Claffy and Anna Fink.

The really big feature of the show is Zallah, who is acknowleged to be supreme in her line of entertainment. At each matinee she wears a costume for the benefit of the ladies in the audience that was presented to her by the Shah of Persia several years ago while she was touring the far east. This costume is studied with sapphires and rhinestones and is a masterpiece of the Persian's art.

"The Tempters" and Zallah will be the attraction at the Majestic theatre for one day only, tomorrow, matinee and evening.

MOVIE GIRL.

Rollicking Musical Farce Heads Bill Opening Sunday at Palace.

It looks like a gala bill thats coming to the New Palace for the first four days of the week, opening Sunday matinee. For one thing there is the rollicking musical hit, "The Movie Girl," a toppy little girl act with nine people, most of them the type of girls one sees screened on the one dimension stage, when the directors want the "tired business man" to unscramble his mind and pay attention to what's coming off in the world.

Then there's Happy Jack Gardner in the greatest success this versatile comedian ever has had. "In the War Zone," in which Happy Jack is seen at his best. The skit affords him some splendid opportunities for it gives him a chance to do that wild boasting of his physical prowess and bravery at which Gardner is so clever. He is assisted by a Red Cross nurse. Sol Burns as "The Train Announcer" is a bit taken from life in which Burns does the shouting figure so familiar in every railroad station only a few years ago. Marshall Montgomery, the ventriloquist extraordinary assisted by Edna Courtney; Hattie Ritchner, the golden haired violinist and Pipifax and Panlo, comedy acrobats complete this bill.

The program featured by the lovely Albertina Rasch and her dainty ballet of eight sweet girls, closes this evening. Included in this bill in addition to the headline attraction are Creighton, Belmont and Creighton in some brand new nut comedy "The Mudtown Firemen; Page, Hack and Mack, two men and a girl in ten minutes of startling acrobatics; Bissett and Bestry, the singing and dancing duo; the singing novelty spectacle "The Girl in the Moon" and Lucille and Cockie, the singing parrots.

LASTING INFLUENCE OF SUBURBAN DAY EFFORTS

New Year to Open With Prospect of Growth of the Plan.

The merchants who form the Fort Wayne Suburban Day Trade association and who have issued their invitations to the outside people to come to their places of business to take advantage of special attractions during the fall and winter are united in the sentiment that the influence of suburban day is permanent and of untold benefit to both merchant and patron. All that has been accomplished in the formation of closer commercial and friendship bonds between the people of Fort Wayne and their neighbors in other towns and cities, as well as in the farming communities, will exert a strong influence upon the trade of the succeeding months and years. With the opening of the new year, many anticipate a still deeper interest in the plan.

Next Wednesday, January 2, the first suburban shopping day—in fact, the first day of the new year when any shopping can be done at all—inaugurates the 1918 series of midweek special shopping days.

WEATHER TO GET SOFTER

None of the Balmy Promised, But Relief from Zero Kind Coming.

STINGER HITS A TREMENDOUS AREA

Frost Wave Called an "Anti-Cyclone" is Doing Its Nicest Bit.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COMING WEEK

Washington, Dec. 29.—Weather predictions for the week beginning Sunday, issued by the weather bureau today are:

Ohio Valley—Fair and rising temperature first half of week. Snow about Thursday and again at the end of the week. No decided temperature changes last half of week.

Region of Great Lakes—Moderate Monday and Tuesday. Light snow middle of the week and again at the end of the week. Colder Thursday.

Washington, Dec. 29.—A great thick blanket of intensely cold air, lying sluggishly over the country from the upper Mississippi valley to the seaboard has plunged the whole eastern section of the United States into a cold snap from which the weather bureau sees no immediate relief. While record low temperatures may be shown in some places the cold generally does not equal that of the mid-December snap, but it is non the less effective as an agent of distress and suffering in many localities where there are coal shortages, intensified by the increased difficulties of transportation and communication.

In the language of the weather sharps an "anti-cyclone" is responsible for the change. This is nothing less than an extraordinarily high barometer, touching this morning as high as 31 inches, something seldom seen in winter weather. This condition prevailing over a great territory, means that an area of high atmospheric pressure, impregnated with cold, has suddenly settled down over the eastern section and by its superior weight and force had crowded out the low pressure which contained all the warmer air. Around the edges of the high pressure area there are rain and snow, but the whole great mass has settled so sluggishly and gives so little disposition to move on and give place to warmer airs that the weather bureau warns the country it may not expect relief for three or four days at least.

RELIEF IN SIGHT.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Relief from the cold wave gripping the middle western states will come tonight or tomorrow, according to a bulletin of the weather bureau today. Although the temperature was at zero this morning, official reports told of 30 degrees below at Duluth. At Prince Edward, Sask., 40 below was registered.

BIG PACKERS CONTROL IN HIDES AND LEATHER

Boston, Dec. 29.—Control by the packers of the hide and leather industry, as well as the rendering business with its many branches, was indicated by the evidence elicited by the federal trade commission which closed for the time being its local inquiry into the country's meat industry today. As J. E. Maloney, of the Brighton Dressed Meat company, told of his selling hides to the American Hide and Leather company, Francis J. Heney, the commission's special counsel, asked if he was aware that there was a Swift concern.

The rendering company which took the waste of Mr. Maloney's company and the property owners he paid rent to, Mr. Heney said, were directly or indirectly in control of the Swifts. He said he did not know this.

Wm. McDonald, formerly an independent renderer in this city, who lost his health and property trying to meet his financial obligations, told of his experience. In adjourning the sessions to enable the commission to return to Washington this afternoon, Mr. Heney said the surface had only been scratched in New England and that he planned to return soon to finish the investigation.

COAL CONSERVATION.

Traction Company May Use Less Heat in Cars and Stations.

Fort Wayne's city street cars may soon be without heat if coal conservation plans formed at a conference of electric railway men with State Fuel Administrator Woollen and attended by E. W. Greenland, of the local traction company, at Indianapolis yesterday are put into effect. The propositions of not heating cars, stations, reducing the number or lights in cars and waiting rooms, and the consolidation of power houses were discussed and passed on favorably by the traction men. The plans will not be put into effect, however, until State Administrator Woollen deems such conservation necessary, and instructs the [illegible] to do so.

MILITARY NEWS

WILL LEAVE SOON FOR BATTLE FRONT

Brother of Mrs. Rosa Crist is Now at Fort Oglethrope, Ga.

Robert F. Frederick, brother of Mrs. Rosa Crist, 1216 Schilling avenue, wearing the chevrons of a sergeant at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., has written the following letter to his sister here. He is also a brother of William Frederick, foreman at the Fort Wayne Corrugated Paper company:

Chickamauga, Dec. 22, 1917.

Dearest Rosa:

I received your letter day before yesterday and your box last night, and I can't express my thanks. That cake was delicious, and those other things sure come in handy.

Rosa, you say we will have lots of music or noise if I ever get to visit you people, but if it is up to me I am afraid it will be more noise than music. Ha, ha!

Gee, Rosa, since I came here I have seen more snow than I have seen for three years; we have about four inches snowfall on the ground now and by the looks of things we will have more before tomorrow. I heard the other day that they had a blizzard in Hoboken; that is some lookout for us boys who are going there, isn't it? We are waiting for a telegram from there now; when we get it we will leave forty-eight hours afterwards. The biggest share of our ordnance has been shipped over to Europe now, so I guess it won't be long before we start. Yet I wouldn't care if we didn't go until next spring now.

Rosa, have you read what the Sixth field artillery is doing to the Germans? I read where they had a battle with the Germans and came out the winner with but small loss. That is the regiment Leo is in. Mother got a letter from him the other day saying he was all right and that is about all he did say.

Well, Rosa dear, about all I can do this year is to wish you a very merry Christmas and lots more of them, and the same to Mr. Crist.

Well, I must close. With love and best wishes, from your loving brother,

BOB.

DR. GILPIN ENJOYING LIFE IN THE ARMY

Word has been received from Dr. Gilpin to the effect that he has been transferred to the 316th Engineering regiment stationed at Camp Lewis, Washington. Dr. Gilpin expresses himself extremely well pleased with army life and is anxious for duty in France.

ARRIVES IN FRANCE.

Columbia City, Ind., Dec. 29.—Ensign Ralph Gates, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Gates, of this city, and assistant paymaster in the United States navy, has arrived in France and cabled his parents: "Arrived; Merry Christmas. Gates." He and Ensigns Barnes and Phillips have been sent there to explain government insurance to the United States soldiers an dsailors. On the same boat, the British fast mail steamer "Adriatic," Ensign Gates met Privates Ralph Weston and Ernest Erne, of this city, and Private Virgil Morgan, of Logansport, also formerly of this city. They are with the United States artillery.

Plymouth Co. Has 76 Men.

Major John E. Miller mustered in a company of Indiana State Militia at Plymouth last night, which has seventy-eight men and is one of the best appearing new companies it has been the good fortune of Major Miller to m ster in this winter. So he said this morning. The new company has not fully decided upon a captain, the vote last night being a tie. The matter will be settled Sunday, possibly by appointment if the boys fail to vote one in.

RALPH BROWER IMPROVING.

Ralph Brower, the Fort Wayne boy who was injured while in training in an aviation camp in Texas, has been brought to Fort Wayne and is slowly recovering from his injuries. Brower sustained his injuries by falling from a truck and alighting on his head. The fall caused a temporary blindness and deafness but the young soldier is rapidly recovering from the ill effects.

EVERYTHING READY FOR NEW OFFICIALS

City Hall Have Cleared All Standing Business and Are Ready to Leave.

City hall employes whose places will be taken by newly appointed men are prepared to leave on a moment's notice. The board of works has completed its work and its members are ready to retire. Mayor Hosey and R. Kelly will rest upon their laurels while Frank Singrey will spend the next year in travels through the south.

Fred Hilgeman is as yet undecided, but it is probable that he will resume his duties as contractor and builder. Clerk Gus Boerger will confine his efforts to real estate and life insurance while Deputy Clerk L. Schwartz is as yet undecided as to what work to pursue in the future. Comptroller W. C. Baade will resume his duties in the Baade book store.

BEYERLE DISCHARGED FROM POLICE FORCE

Board of Safety Takes Action on Boseker-Beyerle Fight Firday Evening.

The board of safety at Friday evening's session discharged Harry G. Beyerle from the police department because of his attack upon Officer W. C. Boseker. Eight witnesses were called and all evidence indicated that Boseker did not incite the trouble nor did he at any time strike Beyerle during the melee. Beyerle's black eye was due to striking against the foot rail as he fell to the floor. The discharged officer has been on the police force for twelve years, and he is at the present a member of the board of trustees of the pension fund.

Officers Boseker will be returned on duty on January 1, the lay off being necessary to enable him to fully recover from his injuries. The two men seemed to be on the best of terms Friday evening.

NAME NEW FIREMEN.

Board of Safety Appoints New Engine House Force.

The board of safety has completed plans for opening the new fire engine house on Winter street on January 1. It is expected that all new equipment will be ready for service at that time. Fred Tieman will be captain. He has been in the service of the department since 1896 and has proven himself to be highly capable. Howard Garmon is named lieutenant. He is stationed at No. 4 engine house at the present time, and has been with the department for [illegible] years. The [illegible] will be taken from the various stations and placed at the new house. The following men will be placed in the department: William D. Stine, M. Laughlin, W. H. Hyatt, G. W. Hankey and C. J. Heiser.

Singrey on Trip.

F. E. Singrey will celebrate his release from his duties as a member of the board of works by spending the remainder of the winter in Florida, Cuba and other points. Mrs. Singrey will accompany him.

GERMAN SOCIETIES WILL GIVE BENEFIT

Concordia, Saxonia, Kries Stolzenau to Give Affair At Turner Hall.

Under the auspices of the American Defense league, three German singing societies are planning an entertainment to be given at the Turner hall on January 31. The societies are the Concordia, Saxonia and the Kreis Stolzenau. The program will be an extensive and interesting one, and the proceeds will be donated to the American Red Cross.

Earl Thompson will give his services for several solos as will Prof. Koeppel. The Kuckkuck orchestra has signified its willingness to donate its services for the evening. Paul Richter has been appointed chairman of the affair while Henry Meyer will officiate as secretary.

NO REVISION OF COKE RATES FOR COMING YEAR

Washington, Dec. 29. —There will be no general revision of coke prices for the year 1918, Fuel Administrator Garfield today issued an order continuing in force the prices fixed last September.

In some outlying districts with comparatively small tonnage of coke production costs are unusually high and where a showing is made as to the importance of the production, exceptions from the standard of prices may be allowed to avoid shutting down the ovens.

MEET WEDNESDAY.

District Board to Consider Claims Under New Regulations.

Dr. Miles F. Porter, chairman of the second Indiana district conscription appeal board, has notified the members of the board to meet in his office next Wednesday. From then on the board will sit in continual session to consider claims for exemption on industrial grounds under the new regulations and appeals from the classification of the local boards. Hundreds of questionnaires have already been filed with the district board.

CONSUMERS COMPLAIN OF EXORBITANT PRICES

Commissioner Haffner Asked to Come to the Rescue —Grocers Blamed.

In the past few days County Food Commissioner George M. Haffner has been deluged with complaints from consumers regarding the excessive prices being charged by grocerymen for canned goods. In mentioning the fact to The Sentinel Mr. Haffner stated that cognizance would necessarily be taken and an investigation made in a very short time. In cases of flagrant infringement of the law, those grocers who are doing over $100,000 of business a year stand in danger of having their license revoked.

By December 31 it will be possible for grocers coming under the ban to show by invoices what they are charging and whether the price is excessive or not. They can remark their prices and if the profits are not excessive that will end the matter. But where it is known after an investigation has been made that prices on the different kinds of canned goods are too high priced, the matter will be immediately given to the state food controller.

It must be understood, and the sooner the better, that the government, state and county food controllers will not tolerate excessive prices on food commodities.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Will Attend Services at Christ Lutheran Church Sunday Morning.

Fort Wayne Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, have accepted a very courteous invitation from Rev. H. C. Hadley to attend divine services in honor of St. John's day at Christ Lutheran church, Jefferson and Webster streets, Sunday morning, Dec. 30, at 10:45 o'clock. The members of the commandery will meet, fully armed and equipped, at the asylum at 9:45 sharp.

It has been the custom of the local commandery to attend in a body the services of some church every Easter and the Sunday nearest St. John's day. The latter date falling on the 27th of December, the invitation of Rev. Hadley was accepted.

This is the firs ttime that any of the Fort Wayne Masonic bodies has been invited to attend divine services in a Lutheran church.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT.

The resignation of Mrs. A. B. Clark of Indianapolis, as superintendent of the nurses at Hope hospital has been accepted and she has been succeeded by Miss Sholta also of Indianapolis. The affairs of the hospital are now in perfect order following the discharge of [illegible] by the [illegible] board.

SEVERE BLOW TO BRITISH

Naval Disaster Inflicted by Enemy U-Boats or Mines.

THREE DESTROYERS SUNK IN ONE NIGHT

Trio of Fast Chasers Put to Rest Off the Dutch Coast, Says Report.

London, Dec. 29.—Three British torpedo boat destroyers were sunk through being struck by torpedoes or hitting a mine off the Dutch coast on the night of December 22 with the loss of 13 officers and 180 men, the admiralty announced today. The statement reads:

"Three of our destroyers were mined or torpedoed during foggy weather off the Dutch coast on the night of the 22nd of December. A total of 13 officers and 180 men were lost."

COMMISSIONERS AND SURVEYORS IN TILT

Notice is Served That Bridge Superintendent Must Work by the Day.

The county commissioners and Surveyor A. W. Grosvenor cannot agree, the bone of contention being over the bridge superintendent. Saturday Surveyor Grosvenor served notice that hereafter Bridge Superintendent Bell must work by the day, instead of on a straight monthly salary of $100. He says he has the authority in such matters. The commissioners are investigating to ascertain just where the authority lays.

Since assuming of the office of surveyor, the commissioners claim that Grosvenor, who is an expert in bridge building as wel las in surveying, has been doing much of the work that heretofore has been done by the bridge superintendent and has charged accordingly. At the same time the bridge superintendent has also been receiving his monthly salary.

State Commissioners Here.

L. H. Wright, chairman, and R. F. Lee, engineer, members of the state highway commission, who are making a tour of this section of the state, marking highways and locating roads for the government, capable of withstanding the rigors of heavy hauling, were here Friday in consultation with the county commissioners.

SPORTS

IN SPITE OF ALL VARSITY TRIMS ALUMNI

First Half a Thriller, After That Alumni Was Simply Outclassed.

There was no use in trying; it simply couldn't be done; the Varsity team, like the father who forgot to teach his boy a particular trick in boxing, stood pat and won. The game at Library hall Friday night drew out an audience which about filled that edifice. The game was between the Catholic Varsity and the Alumni. The latter squad had suffered defeat in a previous game, and it was up to them to get sweet revenge. And they played hard and in spots so furious that Referee Jules Doriot was forced to penalize such tactics.

The first half of the game would have suited the most critical. It was a thriller. It was one of those nip-and-tuck affairs in which both sides played to an equal advantage. It might have been that the Varsity was trying to feel out their antagonists; fiddling for an opening as the term is used in boxing, because in the latter part of the game they drew away seemingly, at will. The first half ended in 4 all.

It was the final period and the tactics of the Varsity that put a quietus on the hopes of the Alumni. It was at this period of the game that Referee Doriot was forced to penalize rough playing. It started with a rush at the very start with both sides fighting for every advantage. It was the middle of this half that the youngsters began piling up baskets. They were as plentiful as eggs in May. Suelzer had been slightly hurt and was taken out and Logan sent to center. This was the keynote for the slaughter and the final score resulted 27 to 6.

There was plenty of basketball in the preliminary game between the Fords and D. L. L. K's. It was a warm scrimmage all through. Redding and Koehl starred in this contest. The result was a 11 to 8 victory for the Fords.

The line-up and summary for the main event was:

C. C. H. S., 27.		Alumni, 6.
Logan-
Hergenroether	L. F.	Reuss
Doriot	R. F.	Gordon
Suelzer-Logan	C.	Kinder
Bushman	L. G.	Centlivre
McLaughlin	R. G.	Clifford

Summary—Field goals—Logan, 4; Hergenroether, 3; Doriot, 2; Suelzer, Reuss, Gordon, Kinder. Foul goals—Logan, 2; Hergenroether.

WAYNES BRING BACK SCALPS FROM HARLAN

Local Basket Ball Team Get Twice as Many Baskets as Independents.

The Wayne Athletic team journeyed to Harlan Friday night; played a game of basket ball with the Independents, the champions of Springfield township, and beat them so bad that the individual members of the Harlan team won't be able to sleep for a week. It was a terrible slaughter. It was the team work and the accurate shooting of the Wayne athletes that told so prominently against the Independents.

The township boys started well, in fact they had determined to rush things and get it over with just as quick as they possibly could, and at the very first they started by caging a pair from the floor. Then that boy Diffonderfer stepped in and Platt, a guard mighty hard to beat, asserted himself and Harlan found It was a hard fought first half and at the end the score stood equal, 12-12.

This much of the game succeeded in warming up the Wayne team and almost at the beginning of the second half they started things. They didn't stop scoring until the end when they had piled up enough baskets to multiply by two the total score of the Independents.

The story would not be complete without special mention of Hamilton who succeeded in shooting nine goals from the field and Forker, both of the W. A. C., who was a close second with seven. Hudson of the Independents distinguished himself through his good work for the Independents. The line-up and summary:

W. A. C., 42.		Harlan, 21.
D. Hamilton	F.	Hudson
Forker-Keplinger	F.	Lampe
B. Hamilton	C.	Jump
Diffenderfer	G.	Scoby
Platt	G.	Gession

Summary—Field goals—Hamilton, 9; Forker, 7; B. Hamilton, 6; Fry, Hudson, 5; Lampe, 2; Scoby, 2.

RIFLE CLUB QUITS.

The tournaments which were arranged by the Fort Wayne Rifle and Revolver club have been discontinued for an indefinite time. The reason is that the General Electric company is remodeling the indoor range where these meets were formerly held. It is xpected that it will take at least three weeks to complete the job, after which the club will continue holding these tournaments.

A CHALLENGE.

The Wayne Street M. E. Basket Ball team is out with a challenge to play any team in the city whose weight does not exceed 135 pounds. This team seems to pick particularly the Ford's, Herald's or Trinity Juniors. Phone 2376 red, between 6 and 7 o'clock any night and ask for the manager.

W. A. C. CHALLENGE.

The Wayne Athletic Basket Ball club which has a number of open dates are desirous of arranging games with the best teams of Fort Wayne and vicinity. Write Herschel Platt, 1327 Huestis street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ODDS AND ENDS

Weeghman and That $250,000 Check.

From the best reports to be gained there is $190,000 left of that Weeghman check to strengthen the Cubs—$60,000 he expended for Alexander and Killifer—and there has been a procession following the president of the Chicago Cubs ever since he flashed it as long as a sweet girl's dream. The latest devotee—to the $190,000 is no less a personage than Ban Johnson, president of the American league. What need Ban has for money is not understood; but he is there and undoubtedly with a purpose. Wonder if he wents to sell the American league to Weeghman? Every sporting writer in Chicago is up in the air about the deal. Weeghman has been trying to get Johnson to lunch with him and Johnson has been trying to do the same thing with Weeghman, and still there has been block after block seperating them. It is known that there are a good many things to be settled in the matter of claims of the deposed moguls of the defunct Federal league. Baltimore is suing for a claim of some $600,000. Weeghman go from under the avalanche when that base ball organization began to ski, and it may be that Ban feels the pangs of remorse and would suggest to Weeghman to let go part of that remaining—$190,000—as salve to wounded base ball aspirations.

Hoblitzell a Game And Patriotic Fellow.

Dick Hoblitzell is flat on his back in a Cincinnati hospital and must lie practically still for three weeks. He went through a very severe surgical operation a few days ago, so that he may be fitted to enter the army. That is surely true patriotism. He was easily exempt because of his affliction, due to a base ball injury. He heard his country's call and he felt that he could not face his fellow man unless he responded to the call and so he is going. There are many of the base ball stars which have answered the appeal of Uncle Sam, but there is no case where true patriotism was better exemplified than in the case of Hoblitzell.

M'Gill Withdraws His Options.

News comes from Indianapolis that J. C. McGill had withdrawn the option he had given on his American association club and also the option he had put on his Manager Jack Hendricks' contract, and that he has decided not to sell. He sends word that he will return soon from Los Angeles and will begin plans with Hendricks for another season as a magnate in the American association. Another angle to the report is that the efforts to form a syndicate to buy out McGill failed, in spite of the fact that President Tom Hickey put in a week working on the job.

Jeffries Is Sure Jockeying.

All hail to the king of all pugilists, Willard, and hail while hailing is good. In a year from today it is expected that he will have passed ingloriously from the limelight leaving behind him the worst ring record in the history of boxing. There is no doubt about it, Willard has no stomach for boxing. Two years ago last April he knocked out Jack Johnson in the twenty-sixth round. Since then he has fought one lone fight, with Frank Moran at New York, March 25, 1916. Willard has used his championship for the sole purpose of making money. All right, we wont' blame him for that. But when he absolutely refuses to defend his title against all comers he does not deserve the support of the public. If Johnson had followed such tactics Willard would never have been champion. To make matters worse now comes the champion prattling like a silly schoolboy, with the offer if he is allowed to conduct all business affairs he will fight any aspirant to championship honors ten rounds to no decision, and the entire receipts to be turned over to the Red Cross. What champion in all history of the prize ring ever made such a ridiculous offer? The most prominent fighter of all the heavies, Fred Fulton, claims to have beaten Jess Willard in a fourteen-round exhibition bout at Rochester, Minn., on March 14, 1915, just prior to the big battle in Havana. Willard has never denied the statement, but Fulton's story seems true when it is considered that Willard flatly refuses to fight longer than ten rounds and then a no-decision bout. All that Willard did say regarding the bout was: "Well, if Fred thinks that way about it, let him go ahead." It is certain that Willard would never have consented to meet Fulton at all if the Minnesota boy had not so relentlessly pursued the champion. Fulton stands in the forefront of all the heavies. Fred has $1,000 forfeit up which Willard has never covered. The time expired December 20, 1917. On that date he declared that he would claim the world's championship and defend it against all comers. Willard never paid the slightest attention to this and was with his circus down in Florida, where he had some kind of a contract with the government. He even allowed it to be said that under such conditions he was a man "working for the government in war time." The stings of criticism had no effect. He continued to bask in the warm sun of Florida, and then wen a majority of the sporting writers began lambasting him he rushes to Chicago and sends forth his ridiculous challenge. Such tactics won't do for a champion. Come clean, Willard.

GIRL TEAM TO ROLL AGAINST PENNSY FIVE

There is a team of ten pin rollers composed all of girls at the Edison Lamp works. They have proved so adept that the belief is paramount that they are as expert as any team of mere men. They are going to try to defeat the Pennsy copper shop five Sunday evening. The young ladies have been in constant practice for some time and rumor has it that they can shoot as straight as anyone. They have been piling up high scores in practice games.

LIMAN ROBERTSON DIES IN NEW YORK

Former Resident of Antwerp, Ohio, Passes Away at Syracuse.

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Antwerp, O., Dec. 29.—A letter to Samuel Sunday, of this place, from Mrs. Ivah H. Wilcox, at Syracuse, N. Y., announces the death of a former townsman, Lyman Robertson, at that place Saturday, Dec. 1. He was 78 years of age. Lime, as he was familiarly called here, where he spent quite a large part of his life, was well known by almost everyone, and everybody enjoyed his acquaintance as he was jovial and a true friend. He for many years was a stave cutter for the Hub & Spoke Co. and after that institution quit business he went into the cabinet business in a shop on East River street. Ill health and a discontented mind caused him to dispose of the shop, and he went to Syracuse, N. Y., where he had made his home, Mrs. Wilcox being his daughter, and who will be remembered by Antwerp folks. He had other relatives also living there, and had their loving care during his last illness, which was of short duration. Cause of death was Bright's disease.

Antwerp Brief Notes.

Mrs. Albert Lindemuth and daughter, Mrs. R. J. Coats, were visitors at New Haven Thursday, where they spent the day as the guests of Miss Emma Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Armstrong, of Fort Wayne, were the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Zuber and Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Armstrong and families, the forepart of the week.

Harry Busby, of Lima, O., visited here the first of the week with his father, Geo. W. Busby, and wife.

Mrs. Pearl Cotterell and son, Ralph, went to Fort Wayne Thursday, where they will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Ritche, and family for a few days.

Elmer Bruner, who is employed in a paper mill at Kalamazoo, Mich., was a visitor at this place over Christmas, the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bruner, southwest of town.

Several from this locality have drawn a seat on the grand and petit juries the coming term of common pleas court, among those so fortunate as to be chosen being Harry Snook, Peter Schmunk, jr., and Grant Winans, who will be on the grand jury, while George W. Murphy and A. J. Sobin, will have to be contented with a seat on the petit jury.

Miss Frankie Cramer, of Paulding, after an absence of three years, is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Cramer. Miss Cramer has enjoyed a successful career during this time in vaudeville, having just closed a prolonged engagement with Eugene Vial's Meloday Maids at New York city, the company also having made a very successful tour of eastern cities. On January 6 she will go to Columbus, where she will join the Helen Gould-Wallack Co.

North G. Sunday, contractor, is building a barn on his premises on West Daggett street in which to store his machinery used in contract work.

The friends of Miss Eva Perkins, who formerly resided here, will be surprised to know she was married at Adrian, Mich., Monday, the lucky man of her choice being Lee Knight, of Addison, Mich., to which place they went for a visit with his parents, after which they will make their home at Adrian.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX OFFICER AT ALBION

One Will be Sent There to Assist Taxpayers of Noble County.

[Special to The Sentinel]

Albion, Ind., Dec. 29—Collector of internal revenue, Peter J. Kruger, announces that a federal income tax officer will visit Noble county during January with an office in the postoffice building at Albion where he will assist all those subject to income tax, complete their returns without remuneration for his services. Married persons living with wife or husband who have net incomes of $2,000 or over and unmarried with incomes of $1,000 or over will be caught in the meshes of whom the collector places at 800 in the county. These returns must be made before March 1, 1918, and because many don't fully understand the law the officer will assist in properly filling out the forms. A penalty of from $20 to $1,000 and jail sentence will be imposed upon those who fail to report to the government. The wise will act accordingly.

Albion Short Items.

Fred Phillips of Toledo, returned to his home Thursday, having spent Christmas with Albion relatives.

Rev. O. W. Bowen conducted funeral services for Harrison Norris at the Bonham Undertaking rooms Wednesday.

Mrs. Loomis Lee and children will temporarily reside with relatives at Rome City, while Mr. Lee is finishing his course for the ministry at McCormick Theological seminary, Chicago.

Mrs. Clara Marshall, daughter Ellen, and niece, Ioua Roscoe of Norwalk, O., are guests of Miss Ella Marshall of this city and other relatives arriving Wednesday.

Mrs. Velma Durfee and son, George, are visiting relatives and friends in Fort Wayne.

Dr. J. W. Morr, wife and daughter Evelyn, attended the funeral of Joseph Koch, father of Mrs. Morr, at St. Joe, Ind., Thursday.

Homer Black of Rochester, Ind., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Black of this city for a few days.

Raymond Bidwell is visiting his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Webber at Garrett.

Miss Muriel De Camp of Indianapolis is a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. O. DeCamp, southeast of town during the holiday vacation. Miss DeCamp is engaged as retoucher in a large photographer's studio in the capital city.

A wooden water pipe 10,440 feet long and twelve feet in diameter, supplied by aSeattle company, will be used in a power development project in New York state. Douglas fir staves equivalent to 1,800,000 board feet of lumber will be used in the construction of the pipe line.

PENNSY SHOP FOREMEN'S TRIBUTE TO REPORTER

Present Shafe Melsheimer With Magnificent Alaskan Sealskin Cap.

(Written by A. L. Moeller.)

As a token of their esteem and affection upon the eve of his retirement from active service as industrial reporter for The Sentinel, the general foremen of the Pennsylvania shops this morning presented S. D. ("Shafe") Melsheimer with a beautiful sealskin cap, the presentation speech being made by M. W. Kemp, foreman of the east car shops.

Mr. Melsheimer was called to the office of Master Mechanic E. E. Griest this morning by the message that there was a story awaiting him. Upon his arrival he found all of the general foremen assembled in Mr. Griest's office, and was informed by that gentleman that Mr. Kemp would tell him the story which had been prepared.

In his address Mr. Kemp paid many beautiful tributes to the faithfulness, kindliness and justice of the veteran newspaper man, who has been visiting the railroad men since the late eighties. That Mr. Melsheimer holds the esteem and affection of every man whom he has come in contact with was shown in Mr. Kemp's talk.

With tears in his eyes Mr. Melsheimer arose to reply to this tribute, the gift being evidently absolutely unexpected. With a few simple words he expressed his appreciation of the present, and the feeling toward him, and stated that the esteem was heartily reciprocated. After hearty handclasps and repeated invitations to return to the shops at least for a visit, Mr. Melsheimer was permitted to leave with his toque, but not until a fitting proved that the cap was of the right size.

The men who had a part in the gift and who were present at the exercises were: Master Mechanic E. E. Griest, who introduced the speaker; Assistant Master Mechanic Walter G. Hamilton, Chief Clerk F. S. Doriot, General Car Shop Foreman H. U. Diem; Chief Shop Clerk J. H. Hobrock, Division Storekeeper J. B. Fowler, General Foreman B. F. Sarver, of the boiler department; General Foreman John P. Leach, of the erecting shop; General Foreman F. A. Opatz, of the blacksmith shop; General Foreman M. W. Kemp, of the old car shops; General Foreman G. E. Graham, of the paint department; General Foreman E. B. Hughes, of the roundhouse; General Foreman W. B. Madara, of the machine shop; General Foreman Daniel Fetgen, of the tin and pipe department, and others.

NOT MAKING WAR MUNITIONS AT G. E.

F. S. Hunting Makes Statement to That Effect, Disappointing Job Seekers.

General Manager F. S. Hunting, of the Fort Wayne works of the General Electric company, this morning issued a statement to the effect that the local plant, contrary to general belief, is not making munitions of war. Hundreds of munition workers from various cities throughout this state and other states have made application at the local plant for jobs, believing that the company was employing men for this work.

The applicants for places at the local plant have flocked in from Muncie, Anderson and other small cities near here, led here by the report that munition workers might gain good places at the great factory. All of these men have been turned away disappointed. Many other men from the east and from other factories have either written or applied in person, and the office force has been kept busy writing replies to these people.

All work now being done by the local plant is along its regular line of electrical manufacture. Absolutely no shells or appliances for shells or parts of guns are being turned out at the Fort Wayne works.

PAINTERS ELECT OFFICERS.

Complete the Roster After Dividing Election in Two.

A month ago the Painters' union held a part of its election and at a meeting Wednesday night completed the work, the term of office of the newly elected ones extending from January 1 to June 30. The officers elected at the first meeting were: W. Flickenger, president; F. H. Marlatt, vice president; C. O. Harris and C. Gerber, trustees, and E. T. Drew, business agent. Those elected at the meeting this week were: George Bopp, recording secretary; W. C. Hollomon, financial secretary; H. Volmerding, treasurer; E. E. Kirchner, trustee, for eighteen months; E. T. Drew, S. W. Burgoon, George Deck, William Ramer and A. A. Thomas, delegates to the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor.

EACH HAD A FINGER INJURED.

H. D. Geise, a car builder at the Pennsylvania east shops, had a wrist sprained this morning. He was removing a side plate and when he pulled it upon the scaffold on which he was standing, the scaffold board broke, allowing him to fall to the ground with the side plate. Fortunately no bones were broken. Another victim was R. E. Neireiter, a machinist's helper in the erecting shop, and he was engaged in removing a spring hanger when it fell upon his hand, crushing one of his fingers. He will be unable to work for some time.

REVIEWED PAST, PLANNED FOR THE FUTURE

Small Motor Foremen and Employes at G. E. Mix Pleasure and Business.

Fifty-seven men from the small motor department of the General Electric works, including the foremen, assistant foremen and the operators enjoyed a banquet at the Hof Brau last night, which was a brilliant social success and of benefit in an educational way to all present. The menu was seasonable, including turkey, fish and various kinds of meats, vegetables and fruits. S. E. Uncapher, foreman of the fractional horse power department, was the toastmaster and in a masterly way called upon various participants at the banquet for speeches. Among the replies were speeches from A. A. Kaiser, superintendent of section A; H. L. Maden, chief inspector of the small motor department; O. A. Ramsey, foreman of the special machine department; Frank Brown, inspector of the small motor assembling department and others. Mr. Brown represented Foreman G. A. Obenchain who is confined to his home by injury sustained in an automobile accident. Mr. Kaiser reviewed the past year in the shop and suggested some changes in work methods which those who heard him recognized as good ideas and determined to put them in practice. Prof. Fred LaDelle, of the department, who is a slight of hand performer of experience and exceptionable attainments, gave exhibitions which pleased and mystified the audience, and Joseph Waike, a member of the G. E. band, sang several selections. This was the third annual gathering of its kind, each excelling in every feature its predecessor.

TRAINS DELAYED BY SNOW.

Pennsylvania Traffic From Chicago Tied up by Great Drifts.

Drifts of snow from eight to ten feet deep on the tracks along the lake shore a few miles east of Chicago, are holding up passenger and freight traffic from Chicago on the Pennsylvania lines today. At Chicago snow is nearly three feet deep on the level, and has drifted in some places to the depth of ten feet.

Train No. 138 due in this city about 3 o'clock this morning, had not yet been able to leave Chicago at noon today. The traffic is being held up by a freight train which became snowed in last night and normal schedule will not be resumed until the obstruction is cleared.

RANGE CLOSED TEN DAYS.

Improvements at G. E. Works Puts Stop to Target Practice.

The Fort Wayne Rifle and Revolver club will not have any more contests for ten days at least. The indoor range in the warehouse building basement is undergoing a change and has been closed until the improvements are completed. The south wall has been taken out and connection made with the basement of the addition to the big building now nearing completion.

TEMPORARILY TRANSFERRED.

Foreman Jacob Trautman, of the small motor department of the General Electric works, has temporarily transferred several of his men to the stock department to assist in taking the inventory. R. J. Scott is the clerk and those transferred from assemblers to the stock room are C. C. Baker, Thomas Cole, Philip May, Floyd Herrick, Otis Brewer, John Thomas and Frank Graffe.

Y. M. C. A. COLLECTION GOOD.

General Secretary E. W. Peirce, of the Y. M. C. A., said this morning that 50 per cent of the Y. M. C. A. war fund had already been paid in and that the payments for the January and the April installment would be promptly met. The amount, subscribed in Allen county is between $48,000 and $49,000.

SHOPMAN HAS HAND HURT.

While at work in the east car shops of the Pennsylvania yesterday, J. J. Gronau had the third finger of his right hand bruised painfully and had to call upon the company's surgeon for treatment of the wounded digit. The accident was caused by a piece of metal falling upon his hand.

After being absent from work for several days to attend to personal business, W. D. Wilder, passenger engineman for the Pennsy, reported for duty this morning.

Machinist L. E. Byrle, of the Pennsylvania vise department, has been called to Richmond, Ind., on account of the serious illness of his son-in-law.

Pennsylvania Blacksmith U. E. Treece and Mrs. Treece have gone to Warsaw, Ind., where they will spend the week end and New Years with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. A. White have gone to Marion, O., where they will spend the week end and New Years day with relatives. He is employed as boilermaker in the Pennsylvania shops.

Train Baggageman B. A. Brown, of the Pennsylvania, who has been unable to go out on his run for a week because of illness, returned to duty this morning.

M. S. Willson of the engineering department of the General Electric is confined to his home by sickness. He has been unable to get down to his office for two or three days.

E. D. Ehrhart, chief lumber inspector for the Pennsy lines west of Pittsburg, has returned from Effingham, Ill., where he spent several days on company business.

Chief Tie Inspector A. Roth, of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, who has been at St. Louis for a few days in the interests of the company, has returned to his office here.

P. A. Meyer, who is engaged in inspecting construction work for the Pennsylvania, is here to spend the holiday with his family. He called at the local shops this morning to see the "boys."

BATTLE IN DARK WAS MAINLY A MISTAKE

Army Officer and Police in Pistol Combat, Soldier Getting Hurt.

El Paso, Texas, Dec. 29.—Captain Wylie J. White, of an artillery regiment; Lieut. St. Clair, deputy provost marshal, and Edward Mebus, a city detective, were seriously wounded last night in a three handed pistol fight at the home of Captain White, near Fort Bliss. According to the report of the affair given out at police headquarters Lieut. St. Clair, Detective Mebus and a number of policemen and soldiers were hunting illegal liquor sellers operating in the vicinity of the army post.

Informed that soldiers had been seen leaving the White home and being ignorant of the identity of its occupants, they knocked at the front door. Receiving no reply the officers sought to raise a bath room window when they were greeted with a volley of shots from a pistol in the hands of Captain White. Lieut. St. Clair was shot through the hip and right hand. Detective Mebus received a bullet through the right shoulder and Captain White was shot through the right lung. His condition is critical.

The White home was visited by burglars on Christmas night and when the captain heard some one opening his bath room window he opened fire. At the base hospital where he was taken, he lapsed into unconsciousness after making a statement that he had shot at burglars.

NO DANGER OF MILK ADVANCING IN PRICE

Dealers Are Prohibited From Raising the Present Price, Says Haffner.

There will be no change in the price of milk. Talks and rumors have no foundation. If an individual dairyman desired to raise the price of his product it would be necessary for him to get a permit from the state food administrator. This is in accordance to a statement made by County Food Administrator George M. Haffner Saturday.

The food administration of the state has been very much interested in this phase of the food question. They have made a very careful investigation of prices and cost of production and the above is the stand the commission has taken in the matter.

Here the matter rests and with this understanding the thousands of poor who are starving for an existence due to the high prices of food commodities may rest easy so far as the milk proposition is concerned.

GIVES UP VISION OF WESTERN LIFE

Rollo Burros Decides That Home Isn't Such a Bad Place After All.

Visions of a spirited bronco and a big six-shooter appealed too strongly to the imagination of Rollo Burrows and as a consequence he left his Pittsburg home to seek the wilds of Wyoming. The lad followed his will-o-wisp to Whiting, Ind., where the grim reality of cold and hunger crowded out the visions of the western life. The lad claims to be 17 years old, but looks much younger. He asserted in police court that he was on his way back home via the box car route when arrested by a Pennsylvania officer. The lad was sent to the washroom and proved himself an exception when he appeared a few minutes later with not only a clean face, but a clean neck as well. The police department will place him in a position and as soon as he has earned enough money will be on his way to Pittsburg.

Continued Cases.

Joseph Kinsley, arrested and brought to Fort Wayne for stealing a large sum of money from the Westinghouse-Church-Kerr Construction Co. last summer, drew a continuance until December 31. The case of John Garvey, arrested on a loitering charge, was also continued. John Sweeney staggered all over the courtroom and was given a chance to sober up by having his case continued until December 31.

FOOD CONSERVATION SHOW FOR CHICAGO

Chicago, Dec. 29—Practical instruction in preparation of 250 dishes, prepared from receipes made under direction of the government food administration will be given at a patriotic food show in Chicago January 5 to 13. One hundred women, in addition to army cooks from various cantonments will show how to cook the different dishes. The work will be under the direction of federal food administrator of Illinois, government bureaus and the University of Chicago. The show will be for patriotic purposes and though hundreds of concerns will have exhibits they will not be allowed to sell anything or to distribute any advertising literature.

The object of the show is "to teach the women of western states how to do what the government has asked them to do," a member of the state council of defense said today.

SEVERE COLD WAVE HITS NEW ENGLAND

Boston, Dec. 29.—The most severe cold wave experienced in New England since 1914 swept in from the northwest early today and caused widespread suffering because of the general lack of fuel. From a maximum reading of 37 degrees yesterday, the temperature dropped to 4 degrees below in Boston at 7:30 o'clock this morning and held close to that mark an hour later, with little indication, weather bureau officials said, of any rise during the day. There was no promise of immediate relief for bureau reports showed that the cold would continue over Sunday.

ABANDON EFFORTS TO SALVAGE AMERICAN SHIP

Halifax, Dec. 29.—The shift of the wind into the south and east today resulted in the abandonment of efforts to salvage the American steamer ashore at Pennant. Yesterday afternoon high seas commenced to roll in Gallant inlet and all hands left the steamer in breeches buoys. Almost a thousand tons of cargo had been removed from the ship and the work of sealing up the damage to her bow was proceeding favorably when the wind changed. Should the storm increase, it was feared the steamer would go to pieces.

SCIENTISTS GATHER IN GREAT CONGRESS

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 29.—One thousand scientists from all sections of the country are here attending the seventieth annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the initial business session of which will be held today.

Thirty other organizations, affiliated with the main association, are also meeting in Pittsburg. The sessions will continue until Wednesday of next week.

Discussions of scientific subjects and appliances having direct relation to the world war, will feature the convention.

SNOW HOLDING AMERICANS OUT OF THE BATTLE

[By The Associated Press.]

With the American Army in France, Friday, Dec. 28—Still another day of howling snowstorm—the fourth—saw virtually the entire American expeditionary force within the army zone abandon preparations to battle the Germans and begin a fight to keep from being snowed under.

All last night and throughout today the flakes fell, choking the roads and badly delaying traffic. By nightfall the roads were in such shape that plows were brought out to keep the way clear. Soon after dark the sky cleared and a full moon came out, bathing the entire country in light almost as brilliant as daylight and making conditions ideal for aerial operations. There were low hanging clouds on the horizon, giving promise of more snow.

Virtually all training work was called off today, but will be resumed tomorrow unless more heavy snow makes it impossible.

EDDYTORIUL ON "INVENSHION."

Last wk Eb Simpson one of our most respeckted cittizens & not only that but also one of the biggest inventive genuses in this end of the co give out the word at Hen Weathersbys store that he had went and invented perpetchool moshion.

Some of the more ignorunter of our cittizens who was present when Eb made this a nouncement diddent apreshiate the importants of his invenshion of course but that was becuz they probly diddent know that great inventers has all been a trying to invent perpetchool moshion ever sinst the world started and jest to think that Eb Simpson of Bingville should be the one to do it and git all the honner for hisself.

Eb invited them as was interested to vissit his woodshed where he had his perpetchool machine set up. He explained that it was a contrapshion like a clock whitch while it was running down furnished power to wind itself up and therefore would run on forever and a day. Eb said he started it goin two days before and it hadent stopd sinst and never wood.

Well, several of them at Hens store inclooding ourself accompanied Eb to his woodshed and when he opend the door and we all walkd in there was the perpetchool moshion masheen allright settin on a bench as pert as ennythink. The only falt Eb or enny of the rest of us had to find with it was that the blamed thing had stopped! Outen that it was satisfacktory in every respeckt.

Eb was so ding-busted mad to think that his perpetchool moshion masheen had stopd on him speshially when he had invited a crowd to come and see how slick it was workin that before he reulised what he was a doing he pickd up a hammer and busted it all to splinters cussin very perfane. Eb said hed give it a cause to stop if that was the way his invenshion was goin back on him and now Eb has dropd perpetchool moshion and has started in to invent a mouse-trap whitch will ketch mice without ketching the fingers when a person sets the trap. He says he expecks to have it perfeckted in about a wk and that it will fill sitch a long felt want that no home will be complete without one.

A yr or so ago Eb started in to invent a pr of wings to strap on hisself and workd over em for several wks. Finally they was finished and Eb invited the hull town of Bingville to witness a demonstrashion of flying.

When all was assembld Eb strapd on his wings and clim up on the pick of his buggyshed roof, from whitch dizzy height he made a very elokwent speech to the crowd whitch lissend with baited breth. Eb said in substants that whilst steam cars flew over the land and ships flew over the sea he was a going to fly thru the air and be the 1st man in histree to conker the upper regions. He said he would soar a few times around Bingville and would then fly to the co seat and back and astonish evrybuddy.

Then with a whoop Eb jumpd offen the roof and begin to flap his wings. It was a critikal minnit. For some reason or other the wings diddent work proper. At any rate Eb come down heels over head and lit with a dull sikkening thud all snarld up with broken wings and like to of broke his fool neck. As it was he broke his leg and after that Eb give up flyin with wings.

But Eb says that the flyin masheens whitch we read about today is all copied after his idees for whitch he dont git no credit as the inventer.

We simpythize with Eb in his failures to invent great invenshions but it ort to comfort him to know that all great inventers who has ever invented ennythink has had their ups and downs and discurridgements.

Take a corn-sheller for instants. A corn-sheller is a good thing but no corn-sheller has ever been invented that wouldnt ketch a felers fingers if you dont be keerful. Then theres the tellyfone—your liable to git struck by lightnin if you talk into one of them things during a thunder storm. The ottymobeel is a great invenshion, but theyre liable to upset or blow up and bust.

All great invenshions has their drawbacks no matter what they be and our advice to Eb is to keep right on inventin things. Hell get it some day.

Country Correspondence

There Aint Enny

SPESHIAL NOTIS—This is to inform the readers of the Bugle that owink to the fackt that the snow has drifted along the roads outen Bingville four ft deep in some places and clean over a horses head in others and as a result there aint been no mail arrove in Bingville sinst we went to press with the last ishue of the Bugle.

This being true we aint heerd from our correspondents in surrounding towns whitch is the only excose we have for not persenting enny 'Country Correspondence" at this time. If we aint got no "Country Correspondence" we cant persent any can we? Answer. No—and ennybuddy would be a fool to expeck it. Praps by next wk we will have some. Look sharp for it.

Big Black Bear Tuk After Old Dad Henderson & Ketched Him Too!—Narrer Excape for Dad & the Bear Also!—Exsiting Partickulers Below!

Old Dad Henderson one of our most respeckted cittizens had a turrible awful experients last Thursday forenoon whitch he wont soon forget no matter how long Dad lives and we calkilate the next time Dad meets up with a black bear he'll give it a wide birth instid of up and shootin at it like he done in this instants.

On the morning afore mentchioned Dad went out to his henhouse whitch stands at the end of his back lot to see if the hens had laid enny eggs (they haddent) and jest as Dad was a going to open the henhouse door he seen somethink big and black over the fence and a little ways down in the holler cyant the henhouse.

Dad paused in his tracks and put on his fur-away specktakels so he could ee better and tuk another lookk.

"By nighty," says Dad to hisself, 'its a black bear!"

Shure enuff there was the bear jest wo over the edge of the holler and it peard to be pawin at somethink in the snow. It ockurd to Dad that if he could kill that big black bear what a turrible lot of bear meat it would make also bears grease whitch is turrible good for roomytiz to say nothink of the bears pelt whitch ort to be worth $10 or $15 and with great presents of mind Dad snuk back to the house as quick as he could snuk and grabbed his ole muzzle loader shotgun whitch was loadened with birdshot and hurried back to the henhouse. The bear was still there where Dad has last saw it not havink mooved skeercely a tall.

Well, Dad with his heart in his mouth crawld thru a hole in the fence and crep up tords the bear on his hands and knees thru the snow until he got within about 50 ft of the critter then Dad cocked his shotgun, wiped the frost offen his glasses, took keerful aim right at the bears vitals and puld the triggerr.

What follerd almost beggars descripshion!

Instid of the bear droppin down dead like it ort to of did it give a turrible yell of angwish and jumpd about four feet into the air and when it come down it lit on its hind feet and come right straight for Dad standin up and runnin jest like a burning beink!

Course Dad diddent have no time to load the gun agin so he throwd the gun into the snow jumpd to his feet and with a loud yell of derishion started as fast as he could jump for the hole in the fenct after he got thru whitch he intended to keep right on going until he got inside the house and lockd the door behint him.

When Dad looked back over his shoulder he seen to his horrer and amazement that the bear was gainin on him every jump and Dad buckeld down hardern ever, but before he reachd the hole in the fence the bear overtuk him and hauled off and kickd Dad with sitch vilents that he was lifted clean offen his feet and landed all sprawld out into the snow about fifteen feet further on.

Dad said afterward it was a awful big surprise to him being as he never knowd a bear could kick like that with one of its hind feet whitch almost felt as if had a boot on. Before Dad could excape the bear was right over him and jerkd him to his feet and shuk poor Dad until his false teeth flew outen his mouth.

Old Dads feelings can better be described than imagind when he looked into the bears fase and realised that instid of a bear what he had shot was Wes Woodruff our expert hunter & trapper who with his old bearskin coat on had been settin some rabbit snares in the holler behint Dads back lot.

"What in gorramashion did you shoot me fer?" says Wes still holdin onto Dad.

"Ime turrible sorry," gasped Dad. "I thort you was a bear!"

Then West shuk Dad agin hardern ever and told him he ort to have sense enuff to know the differents betwixt a man and a bear and besides bears was all dend up this time of yr ennyhow & furthermore ennybuddy who calkilated he could kill a bear with birdshot was a fool being as his bearskin coat had stopd all the birdshot but two whitch had went thru and stung him considable in the legs.

Wes threatend to bring suit aginst Dad for shootin with intent to kill but Dad pleaded so hard that Wes finally let him go and went on with setting his rabbit snares.

If you want to hear old Dad cuss jest ask him if hes shot enny black bears lately.

Lokal Jottings

Sleighing still continues good in our midst and straw ride parties in bobsleds is very poplar amongst our yung fokes. There mite of been a time when we thort it was a pleashure to go out and git frostbit when the thermometer was below zero in our yunger days but we have got over it.

Gid Johnson informs us that he has three bu of cranberries and considable celery whitch he will sell cheep. This seems ruther pecooliar becuz when fokes tried to buy cranberries and celery from Gid a munth or so ago he wouldnt sell enny. LATER—We have lernt on good orthoritty that Gids cranberries and celery was froze during the last cold snap.

Eph Higgins our accommodating P. M. of the Bingville P. O. says that the sale of stamps has fell off somethink awful as far as he is concernd sinct the guvverment boosted the price of two-cent stamps up to three cts. Eph says lots of folks in Bingville has stopd writin letters as a result of this increase in the price of stamps and unless the batch of 3-centers whitch he has on hands sells faster hes a going to set down and write a P. M. General at Warshington a sharp letter telling him if he dont reduce the price of stamps back to two cts he'll resign as P. M of Bingville. Eph Higgins is a purty determind man when he gits his dander up.

Sammie Perkins who is a great big awkward growd up boy of 20 yrs went to the co seat to vissit his uncle Henry Perkins last wk for two wks but only stayd two days. This is the 1st time Sammie has ever been away from home over nite and he got so homesick that he cried all the time and had to be sent home. Sammie is a awful baby for his size.

Ham Wilson whilst out hunting for one of his cows who excaped from the barnyard seen a fox west of town whitch Ham says was twict as big as enny four foxes he ever seen. Whilst Ham was standin there watchin the fox and wishin he had a gun blamed if the fox diddent run right up to him and wag its tail. It was Rufe Snyders old shepperd dog instid of a fox.

Take Notis, Jerushy

We understand on reliabul othoritty that Jerushy Perkins who in the past has now and agin left a pie or a cake or somethink or other to ete on our deskk when we was out with her compliments had a jelly cake to fall tother day while it was in the oven baking.

We understand Jerushy who prides herself on being one of the best cake bakers in Bingville was awful put out becus the cake fell. We mite add in this counnekshion that we allus perferd a jelly cake whitch has fell in baking to one whitch has riz up light and if Jerushy sees fit to persent this fell cake to us we will devour it with great relish.

Personal Breefs

"Personal Breefs" aint what you might call so numerous this wk that its amazing.

Miss Phoebe Hilderbrand our fashionable dressmaker left church service last Sabbath morning right in the middle of the sermon. We lernt later that it was becus she had on stays three sizes too tite for her. Phoebe lookd awful neat, but probly no huming beink realised what she sufferd. Phoebe has returnd em by parselpost to the co seat for stays whitch is bigger and more comfortable.

We desire to call Deacon Andrews attenshion to the facks that the sidewalk in front of his house is as slippery as a eal. We like to of fell and broke our blamed neck there tother day and if we had of did that the Deacon would of had a damage suit on his hands. Unless the Deacon sprinkels his sidewalk with ashes he'll haft to take the consequences as well as them who falls and damages theirselfs.

Si Petersby the only cobbler in Bingville says that business has briskd up like everything with him being as hes so bizzy putting on heels and taps for folks that he aint got time to haffsole his own boots or them of his wife neither. Si says if cobbling was as good in the summer as tis in the winter hed be satisfide but it aint. A good many Bingville folks goes in their bare feet in summer.

Deacon Butterworth has been going around town for a wk or more with a awful sad fase on him. We diddent lern why the Deacon was so melancholly until we found out that there wassent a drop of hard cider left in his barl whitch he made last fall. Well, the Deacon ortent to repine being as he made it fly and was happy while it lasted. Also he cant say he diddent drink it all hisself neither. That ort to be some consolashion to him.

If you diddent begin the New Yr right by subscribing for the Bugle do so now.

Big Mystery!

It has allus been a awful big mystery to us whenever we pause in our tracks to think it over, whitch is quite frequent of late, why we don't git more advertising in the Bugle than we have had for a spell back?

We have thort about this so mutch that there has been times when we have almost brung on a nervus headake, but still we can't anser it. Can you?

To begin with the Bingville Bugle is the best advertising medium in this end of the co. If you have enny doubts about this all we haft to do is to state the fackt that the Bingville Bugle is the only advertising medium in this end of the co. In other words there aint no other choice to pick from exsept us. We aint got no competishion and we don't want enny.

Our circulashion praps aint as big as it might be, but considern that for every bony fide subscriber we have five or six of his nabers boorries and reads his paper we have a considable army of readers.

It pays to advertise in the Bugle. It pays us and it pays you. If you want to buy anything advertise for it. If you want to sell anything, ditto.

We are also ready at all times (exsept press day) to do any and all kinds of fancy & artistick job work at rates that seem reasonable to us & we trust they will to you.

If you want results advertise in the Bugle. If you don't want results advertise in the Bugle anyhow. We aim to please everybuddy and give you what you want. Yours for bizness,

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy, costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations, can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Waiter in Daytime, Editor at Night, Is This Spaniard

WAITING on diners at a downtown hotel by day and being the fearless editor of a trade union newspaper at night, is the basis for the claim by friends that Manuel A. Sanchez is the busiest man in the country.

Sanchez admits that he works twenty hours out of twenty-four days in each month at his dual occupation, but insists that he likes both jobs so well that he cannot persuade himself to quit either.

"I could live on the income from either work, but I could not thoroughly enjoy life without the excitement both furnish," Sanchez said when interviewed. "My Spanish blood is the stimulant, I guess, that makes me relish hard work as long as it is interesting, and I have been busy in two fields or more since I was 16 years old."

Sanchez is as nearly a human dynamo as a man can well be, and he typifies the "never-say-die" spirit in his work.

Born with a silver spoon in his mouth in Las Chaves, N. M., forty years ago, his wealthy father was assassinated when Manuel was 7 years of age. His mother, Mrs. Barbara Chaves de Sanchez, spent a large part of the family treasure attempting to bring the assassin to justice through the courts of the territory. Patrocinio Gavaldon was convicted of the crime and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, after a protracted legal duel in distant courts. Gavaldon managed to get himself pardoned almost immediately, however, and became a justice of the peace at Las Chaves, the village bearing the family name of Mrs. Sanchez.

One day the storm broke when Justice Gavaldon met Mrs. Sanchez on the highway near her home. There were bitter words exchanged, and the justice, it is said, applied an epithet to Mrs. Sanchez in the presence of her eldest son, Ignacio 20 years old. Ignacio fired a bullet through the neck of his father's slayer. His hot Spanish blood mounted, and he attempted to fire again at his prostrate enemy, but Mrs. Sanchez interfered and said: "That was God's bullet, my boy, do no more."

Youth Sets Forth Into World.

Gavaldon lived a cripple the balance of his days, and Mrs. Sanchez spent the balance of the family fortune defending Ignacio, who was never penalized for his act. There was little left to the widow but some land claims and the wonderful old Spanish house, a villa of more than 100 rooms surrounding a typical patio.

Ignacio remained at his mother's side to comfort and provide for her, and Manuel at the age of 16 went forth into the world to restore the family fortunes. How he made a small fortune of $50,000 and lost it in the game of business is only one of the interesting things about the career of the editor-waiter who is now working out his destiny in St. Louis.

When he left the maternal roof, young Manuel went to San Francisco and cast about for a job in the metropolis of the West. Nobody seemed to require the services of a 16-year-old lad, who had no experience at any kind of work. Manuel walked the streets many days and many nights in search of a place to begin building his fortunes, and never weakened in his resolution, despite his many disappointments

He was amazed at the grandeur of of the big buildings and the brightly lighted streets of Frisco. The Palace Hotel, famous from coast to coast, made an especial hit with young Sanchez. Many an evening he lounged in front of this palatial resort and watched the swells of Frisco enter its brilliant portals to dine and dance in its radiant halls. Finally he decided that it would be just as easy to get a job in a wonderful place like that as in some of the dingy factories and office buildings at which he had been applying.

He mustered up courage and went to the night clerk one evening, a man who wore an air of importance that made Sanchez think he was approaching some foreign potentate. He smiled at the night clerk with that winning smile that has delighted so many hotel diners in St. Louis in the past few years, and asked for a job. The night clerk in his turn was impressed, and asked what kind of work the young man followed. "Any kind," came the prompt reply. "Can you wait on a table?" asked the clerk. Sanchez remembered the way the house servants at home used to wait on his family, and eagerly replied in the affirmative.

Fears for the Soup.

"Well, I guess we can find out by trying you," the clerk replied, and Sanchez's heart leaped with the realization that he had at last made a start.

Back to the helps' hall they whisked him and he soon emerged in the full regalia of a waiter, which was not a perfect fit because it was made for a much older man. The maitre d'hotel shook his head dubiously as he looked young Sanchez over, and a smile flickered over his features as he sized up the ill-fitting garments. In the Palace Hotel everything was de rigeur, and the head waiter did not like to assume the responsibility of trying out a novice who might trip on his long trouser legs and possibly spill a plate of soup on the president of a railroad or a multimillionaire mine owner. But he was short a man and decided to risk it.

He gave a few instructions to Sanchez, and found that the lad was well educated and a quick thinker. The head waiter was a real artist at his profession, and he impressed upon Sanchez that he must carry himself like a gentleman and show courtesy in every move and word. That happened to be second nature with Sanchez, due to the careful training of his mother, who was more of a stickler for gentlemanly manners than even the head waiter.

Sanchez was a success on his first job when he served his first dinner at the famous Palace Hotel. He made a hit with everyone who patronized his table, and in a few weeks enjoyed the friendship of many of the big men and best brains of Frisco.

William Randolph Hearst at that time was in the habit of taking his evening meal at the Palace, and Hearst became as interested in Sanchez as the lad became in Hearst.

It was shortly after Mrs. Phoebe Hearst purchased the San Francisco Examiner as a toy with which her son might amuse himself, now that college days were over. Young Hearst, however, surprised the family and his friends by wading into journalism with unflagging passion.

After boon companions had abandoned him for the evening, Hearst would sometimes confide in young Sanchez that those chaps did not know how to enjoy the excitement of life. He would philosophize on the joys of setting things right that were wrong and helping the helpless through the medium of a great daily newspaper.

These little talks fired Sanchez with determination to some day be a publisher. As one of the working men of the nation, his sympathies were naturally with the plebians, and he was painfully conscious that these people, like himself, needed help and guidance and sympathetic, strong hands to get them along through the world as it was.

With the dream of restoring the family fortunes to gladden the heart of his mother, young Sanchez mingled new aspirations to be an editor of a powerful paper that could turn the limelight of publicity on all the dark, festering corners of the world and drive out the evil conditions that existed.

But Mrs. Sanchez could not buy him a newspaper plant, fully equipped, to begin his great crusade against the powers of evil. He realized that at his present rate of progress he must spend many a weary month and years at work before he could hope to have a controlling voice in such a plant.

Young Sanchez, with an inborn love of work, buckled down to his first avocation, and did nobly. In eighteen months he was maitre de hotel, and if that distinguished gentleman had died or resigned in the next three years Sanchez would have been maitre de hotel in fact, on the word of John Fitzpatrick, the manager of the Palace Hotel.

Took Side of Unions.

But the maitre de hotel enjoyed life and his job too well to quit either, so the impatient Sanchez decided after five successful seasons at the hostelry to gather up his savings and move to a new field—the far East.

Sanchez' idea of the East at that time was Chicago, and therefore he hiked to the Windy City, which was several times as big as Frisco, a fact that forced Sanchez to expand his plans in proportion.

He was not yet ready to become a newspaper publisher, he realized, so he decided to follow his work as waiter until he got better acquainted with the big city on the lake. He looked over the swell hotels and cafes of Chicago and picked on Rector's as the one that pleased his fancy most. He applied for a position, and when he described his experience at the Palace, was placed at work.

He made money and saved some of it, and made himself popular with not only the patrons of this place but with other cafe managers who saw him at work and appreciated his methods. The catering firm of Kunz & Remmler, operating several first-class cafes in Chicago, offered him inducements to join their forces. He did well in his new berth and made himself almost indispensable to his employers.

In 1905 a general movement was started to organize the waiters and other employes of hotels and cafes in labor unions. The movement was resisted in every manner by the employers. Sanchez' sympathies guided him to the side of the unions, and he enlisted under their banner in the struggle for better wages and improved working conditions. His employers offered to make him a full partner in one of their cafes if he turned his back on the labor union and refused to walk out on a strike that was declared in every hotel and cafe in Chicago of any consequence.

Sanchez chose the labor union to this fine opportunity to establish himself in business, and went out with the strikers. They remained out eight days, and the strike was lost by the unions at the end of this period, because the employers had found substitutes for the strikers and were able to get along without the old help.

Sanchez had cast the die and was now a martyr to his principles. He realized more keenly than ever what it meant to fight the battles of his fellow man in addition to paddling his own canoe. He had lost in his first big fight, and the newspapers with its attendant fortune seemed many years further away than ten days before.

Becomes a Proprietor.

While comforting himself with the reflection that he had lost in a just cause, and through no fault of his own, there came a cheering message from his former employers. The offer was still open, they said, to make him a partner in a cafe at 195 La Salle street. Sanchez jumped at it and went to work as a proprietor for the first time, but did not lose his interest in the cause of the workingmen and women for a minute. His management was a success from the start and the cafe began to produce larger and larger profits for the owners every month. At the pinnacle of his management, Sanchez had more than $40,000 in bank and a small amount invested in realty.

Matilda Armijo, his childhood sweetheart now lived in Chicago, where fate had evidently guided the steps of her parents. Sanchez renewed his suit and they were married. Everything was roseate and the young business man had reason to believe that he had at least laid the foundation for the restoration of the fortune his father had left at his untimely death.

Then the pendulum swung. Business fell off in spite of anything that Sanchez could do to hold it. Old 1907 arrived, and everybody tightened up. Most of the savings went back the way it came and Sanchez pulled up stakes before he went flat broke and came to St. Louis to start afresh, his confidence unshaken.

He returned to his old trade at the Jefferson Hotel in 1910, and made good again. In 1913, another strike loomed in his path. The Waiters' Union, Local No. 20, in which he carried a card, succeeded in having one cafe after another recognize the union. The hotel managers feared it would be their turn next to recognize the Waiters' Union, so they beat the union to it, as they say, in the vernacular, and one June evening, every large hotel in the city notified the white waiters, union and non-union, that their services were no longer required.

Keeping Up With News.

Sanchez head fell beneath the ax with all of his union associates. It fired the old Spanish blood on him, and he offered his services to the union officials as an active campaigner against the step.

His thoughts flew back to the old Palace Hotel and the talks he used to have with Hearst. Now was the time, if ever, to launch his newspaper, when the enemy was pressing hard. He had a few thousands left in hand and he resolved to throw it into the enterprise and stand by the result.

The lockout was only a day old when the busy Sanchez got out the first issue of The Unionist, a tiny paper that came out spasmodically for the next month, as occasion required. In one day of rioting about a downtown hotel Sanchez got out three issues in order to keep up with the latest news. The newspaper proved a great factor in winning the fight for the white waiters who were locked out. It denounced the police roundly for treatment of white pickets who walked before the cafe in question, distributing handbills.

The police arrested about 120 men, many of whom went to the police station via the City Dispensary. The men were all exonerated in Police Court the next day and in a test case carried to the St. Louis Court of Appeals, the judges held that the union pickets were lawfully entitled to picket any business establishment, provided they did not disturb the peace or blockade traffic by their actions.

This was the gospel spread by The Unionist during the strike. Its energetic editor not only wrote the copy and locked up the forms as it went to press, but he would rush to the scene of the daily melee with the damp copies under his arm and give away the paper to the interested public, in defiance of the squads of police on guard.

Sanchez made a hit, not only with his union colleagues and the public, but with many of the police who were detailed to "take care" of the union pickets. They never once used a club on him, nor did they arrest such a fire-eating picket. The picketing ended in a clean-cut victory for the union waiters, and today every hotel recognizes them and seems to be pleased with the service the union men furnish.

Free Papers Didn't Pay.

It was in this campaign that Sanchez was dubbed by his friends the "fearless editor." He wrote for his paper just what he thought about the police and the strike opposers, and he did not shrink from circulating his poor opinions of both under their very noses.

When the strike ended Sanchez discovered that giving away newspapers that do not carry paid ads. is an unprofitable business, and his bank account was seriously depleted. Local No. 20, rising spontaneously to a motion to that effect, voted to open the treasury to reimburse Sanchez for his invaluable services to the cause.

He suspended publication of The Unionist after it had accomplished its purpose, but two years ago he launched a monthly publication, The St. Louis Independent, which was indorsed a year later by the Labor Press Association of the United States, with the exclusive franchise in St. Louis.

Sanchez is still the fearless editor, as indicated by his action in the October edition.

The United Railways Company is today seeking to settle its differences with the city government in order to renew its franchise for fifty years and raise new capital to make needed extensions and take up maturing obligations.

The United Railways applied to another St. Louis union labor publication for advertising space in which to put before union men the company's reasons for urging the enactment of pending settlement bills. The labor paper refused to publish the ads., thus cutting off the company's opportunity to present its arguments.

The company then applied to the St. Louis Independent and the editor surprised it by announcing that he would carry any statement the company chose to make to union readers, marking it "paid advertisement."

The company officials accepted and told him of their experience with the other labor paper. Sanchez unlimbered his editorial wrath upon the contemporary sheet, charging it with unfairness and disloyalty to the union labor principle of arbitration.

Sanchez says he is in love with both his occupations. He holds that waiting is an art that requires almost as much study and intelligent application to perfect as does editing a paper. They are both forms of work, he says, and are worthy the best efforts of any man who essays them. The rewards of each are about equal, he says, so far as he can determine from his own experience, although he is convinced that as the proprietor of a newspaper, he may eventually accumulate more wealth than by waitering.

Sanchez frequently arises at 5 a. m. in order to report for duty at his hotel at 6 o'clock, and is not finished with his hotel work until 8 p. m. that evening. It frequently happens that he must "make up" his paper for the presswork between 8 p. m. and midnight, and sometimes he has worked on his paper until 2 a. m.

"Suppose you get tired out some night after working all day as a waiter, and your paper must go to press?" he was asked.

"I can't get tired out that night, because I have to make the edition," he replied, just like a regular newspaper man.

OBJECT LESSONS FOR TROOPS.

A large proportion of the pictures made in the European war are not intended for public exhibition. A rigid censorship is exercised over all photographic work by the governments, exactly as in the case of the mails and printed matter. The films may be developed in the field or in near-by cities, but they are not permitted to leave the country until they have been passed upon. A Board of Censors sits in a darkened room at headquarters and scans every detail of the movies as they flash past. Should some secret valuable in any way to the army, be revealed, it is erased or the film is destroyed.

The presence of the moving picture men in such numbers at the front does not mean that the governments are going into the show business. The photographs thus secured, at enormous expense, become matters of official record, and are, of course, invaluable.

In no previous war has such complete photographic reproduction been possible, and the government officials have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity. It is estimated that upward of 10,000 films have been prepared by the army movie men in Germany alone. They are intended mainly for educational work in the military training schools.

As illustration for text-books and lectures, the war movies will have a unique value in the classroom. A lesson in strategy, for instance, may be illustrated by a moving picture, showing the advance or retreat of troops in an actual engagement. Every phase of military instruction may thus be illustrated.

family, succeeded his uncle, King Charles in October 1914, King Charles having died at Sinai on Oct. 18.

Rumania declared war on Austria on August 27, 1916, and King Ferdinand took personal command of the army shortly thereafter.

King Ferdinand is the son of Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen and two of his brothers are generals in the German army. He was born at Sigmaringen, August 24, 1865.

Crown Prince Charles was born Oct. 3, 1893 and is an officer in the Rumanian army. He is numarried, although early in 1914 it was reported that his betrothal to the then Grand Duchess Olga of Russia had been arranged.

Queen Marie of Rumania, who was a duchess of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria of Great Britain and was married to King Ferdinand on January 10, 1893. Since Rumania's entrance into the war, more than two thirds of her territory has been overrun by the enemy. The royal family fled from the capital, Bucharest, in the fall of 1916 and since that time has been at Jassy.

so weak that lines had to be passed under their arms to haul them aboard. One man was in such a condition that he could not even hold the line thrown him. Chief Pharmacists Mate Elzer Harwell and Coxwain Francis G. Connor jumped overboard after this man and secured a line under his arms. When he was hauled aboard, every effort was made to resuscitate him, but he died in a few minutes. The four officers of the submarine and the 35 members of the crew were all taken prisoners.

Were They Downhearted?

"After being taken on board the prisoners were given hot coffee and sandwiches. Though kept under strict guard they seemed contented and after a short time commenced to sing. To make them comfortable the crew of the destroyer gave them their warm coats and heavy clothing.

"The German officers said the first depth charge had wrecked the machinery of the submarine and caused her to sink to a considerable depth.

"The submarine bore no number nor distinguishing mark. She was, however, identified by lifebelts and by statements of an officer and men of the crew. One of the lifebelts, the reports said, had 'Kaiser' marked on one side and 'Gott' on the other.

"The Fanning proceeded to port and transferred her prisoners under guard. As they were leaving in small boats the Germans gave three cheers. The commanding officer of the Fanning read the burial service over the body of the dead German sailor and the destroyer proceeded to sea and buried him with full military honors.

"In his report the commander of the Fanning praises the conduct of his officers and crew and gives particular credit to Lieut. Walter O. Henry, officer of the deck, and to Coxswain Loomis, who sighted the periscope. He also commends Pharmacist's Mate Harwell and Coxswain Connor, who jumped overboard to save the drowning German.

Praise From British Chief.

"The British commander-in-chief, under whom the destroyers were operating said this in his report to the British admiralty:

"'The whole affair reflects credit on the discipline and training of the United States flotilla' and added that the incident showed that the Fanning is a man of war in the best sense of the term well disciplined and organized and ready for immediate action. He also praises her commander, Lieut. A. S. Carpender and comments Lieut. Henry Coxswain Loomis, pharmacist's mae Harwell and Coxswain Connor. The Briish admiral also commended the prompt action of the Nicholson, which he says completed the success of its sister ship. The Nicholson was commanded by Lieut. G. H. Fort. The British admiralty sent a telegram to the commander in chief, directing him to express to the commanding officer, officers and men of the Fanning its 'high appreciation of their successful action against the enemy submarines.'

"Vice Admiral Sims commanding the American forces operating in European waters, commended the officers and men of the Fanning and Nicholson. Coxewain Loomis was advanced to the next higher rating in recognition of his vigilance in sighting the periscope."

the air. The enemy vessel was not seen again.

There has been no resumption of the Austro-German attack on the Italian mountain front. On the contrary, the Italians have been the aggressor, attacking near Monte Tomba, between the Brenta and the Piave. Berlin reports that the assault broke down under the Austro-German fire.

Great Britain's destroyer fleet suffered a considerable loss on the night of Dec. 22. The admiralty announced today that three British destroyers were sunk during foggy weather off the Dutch coast on that night through torpedo attack or striking mines. Altogether 193 officers and men from the destroyers were lost.

directed its progress from the very beginning to its conclusion. I must speak personally in this hour, because this house of God is the visible, tangible reality, the material consummation of a deeply felt interest. As now I look about me and realize how out of the process of the builder's work, apparently fragmentary and disjointed; how out of the placing of the stone here and there, and the piling of brick upon brick, and the joining of wall into wall; how out of a multitude of materials in the process of orderly construction, there has finally been evolved what we now see and enjoy, a beautiful temple of God, the wonder of it all is overpowering and a sense of awe and reverence is upon me.

The time has come when this building ceases to be merely the consummation of plans and specifications. The hour has arrived when it no longer is to be conceived as merely the beautiful creation of the workman's hands, a building of brick and stone, beautiful, stable and symmetrical. As we are assembled here in this first hour of worship the though comes home to me as to the patriarch of old, that now "this is none other than the house of God." Tonight these bricks and stones are sanctified and these walls, by your presence within them, to reverence the name of Israel's God, are consecrated to the noble and uplifting cause of religion. Here you and I shall continue, under God's grace, to assemble in search of the things that are higher and better than material realities; the things of the spirit, that shall uplift and sustain us, that shall enrich us with the power to find spiritual joy in the varied experiences of life, and strengthen us to meet bravely and hopefully its sorrows and trials. Here we shall endeavor to stand face to face with God, for now does His spirit abide here, for now is this His house.

"We have builded it for Him and to the glory of His name. You who look about are doubtlessly struck by the simple, dignified beauty which greets your eye. The beauty which the eye sees is good, but it is not enough. That was enough up to this hour, but tonight, when this place is consecrated into a place of worship, the beauty of materiality must be eclipsed by the beauty of holiness, with which our worship this night and succeeding times must invest it. And once the beauty of holiness abides within these walls, it shall and must be to us, unless we have labored in vain; must be the retroactive, spiritual power, bringing home to us the recognition of its deeper demands, and widening our vision to see and fulfill its practical applications.

The eye can see, but the gift of physical vision, the one of God's greatest blessings, is but one small factor in the truly fruitful life—the life consecrated to high ideals. Your eyes, for instance, can see the ideas written into the memorial windows of this room. They represent the contest of the faith which is yours today by inheritance from a glorious history. Unity it preaches to you, the unity of God in His universe, the unity of mankind on this earth, for behold, "Have we not all one Father; hath not one God created us all?" Peace it proclaims to you.

"Peace, peace be to him who is far and to him who is near." "Let men beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks and let nations know war no more," was the fervent prayer of the ancient prophet, and today it is Israel's prayer, too, for Israel's mission is peace, the peace, the security and the safety of mankind, even if it be necessary to fight and die under the banner of right and justice to attain it. Justice cries out that faith to you. "Let justice roll down as waters and righteousness as a mighty stream." Let man deal justly with his neighbor, and what is hateful unto himself let him not do unto another. Justice, Israel has preached; justice it has demanded for itself; for justice it has suffered and died, and still it cries out to the whole of mankind, justice, justice! Righteousness is its appeal to you. Let the gates of righteousness be opened up to you. Walk with God in humility and sincerity within the sacred precincts of the soul. "For by righteousness does the Lord judge the world and nations by His truth."

Truth it demands of you, "for the Lord is God, who keepeth truth perpetually." To be true to one's deepest and sincerest convictions of right, seeking in spiritual communion, the sanction for those convictions. To hold fast to our spiritual heritage, with due regard for the faith of others. To live the truth as God gives us power to see it. Wisdom it enjoins upon you, not the mere gift of knowledge, not the power to marshal in the mind the myriad facts of wordly understanding, but to learn that knowledge is power; when it teaches us to reverence God and refrain from evil. Sinai's commands that historic faith thunders down to you today as it did of old, for "the commandment is a lamp and the law a light to guide thee in the path of life."

These things constitute the Torah Israel's book of life, Israel's instructions for living. The law of Israel it is, a vast storehouse of religious, and moral inspiration and guidance. This is the story which is symbolized in the windows of this room. These are the ideals to which this building is consecrated. These are the ideals to which we, one generation after the other, in the life of Israel, must also be consecrated.

Let the eye behold them! Let us consecrate ourselves to fulfill them. Let us worship God here in the beauty of holiness. Let that beauty enter into the deepest recesses of our hearts, illuminating them with the light of love and glorifying us with the sense of divine fellowship. Let it animate us with a newer and deeper sense of obligations. Let it find expression in the words of our mouths, in the meditation of our hearts and in the accomplishment of our hands. May God be with us and bless us. Amen.

The new temple was erected at a cost of $90,000 and is one of the finest synagogues in the country.

PROHIBITION FOR SAMMIES

prevailing in France, which caused it to be drawn as it was.

Some Difficulties.

"The question of prohibiting the sale of all intoxicants to American troops is under discussion with the French government," said Gen. Pershing, "but of course there are difficulties here in France that do not exist in the United States. The general order issued Dec. 18 was a long step toward the prevention of drinking among our men.

"It was not by any means intended to convey an injunction to the American troops to drink light wine and beer, but quite the reverse. It was drawn to conform to French regulations on the subject.

"It stated that light wine and beer only would be permitted and prohibited the purchase of and acceptance of gifts of whisky, brandy, champagne or similar beverages. It ordered that all drinking places where such articles are sold be forbidden American soldiers. It is the same regulation made in France by the British army and by the French.

Situations Different.

"Although I am heartily in favor of prohibition for the American expeditionary force, the situation in France and the United States is not the same. Comparatively few French people drink water as we do; they drink wine instead. This is partly because the French water supply is not as pure as ours. French wine is light and much less intoxicating than is generally supposed. An intoxicated Frenchman is a rare sight indeed. French beer is also by no means as strong. The French government issues to its soldiers a regular wine ration. Obviously there are obstacles to forbidding wine shops in the zone of the army to do business at all, which practically is what the French would have to do. Local sentiment will play a large part in the determination of the question.

The Social Evil.

"The same order which forbade soldiers taking strong drink contained the most rigid regulations to prevent the spread of the social evil. The questions are connected closely. Thus far the record of the army in both respects has been most excellent. It is highly gratifying to me and is a testimonial to the high character of the American soldier. Everything possible is being done to protect his morals and his health and honor to himself and countrymen."

DEMAND OF THE BROTHERHOODS FULLY REFUSED

the railroads had refused the brotherhoods demands it was learned that the railway workers had decided not to press their request for a perio of at least thirty days or until it is seen just what the railroad situation will be.

McAdoo Gets Started.

Director General McAdoo spent today assembling a staff of advisers and executive officers to assist him in administering the railroads as a national unit. He conferred with John Bartone Payne, counsel for the shipping board, and Inter-state Commerce Commissioner Anderson. An announcement of plans is expected soon. The railroads' war board went to work on a general scheme of operation. A few reports reaching here today told of first efforts by local railway officials to haul freight by shortest routes, as requested by the director general in his first telegram to railway heads.

A cold wave accompanied by snow in many localities probably would prevent a noticeable improvement in freight congestion under government operation for a week or more officials said. It was understood that Mr. McAdoo would use the various departments of the inter-state commerce commission to execute most of his orders and in addition would form an advisory cabinet including representatives of the war and navy departments, the shipping board, the fuel and food administrations and the federal trade commission.

Studying Legal Phases.

Legal phases of government operation have been studied carefully by the legal bureau headed by Jos. W. Folk, chief counsel of the commission, and many questions remain to be threshed out between the railroads and government before a smooth working plan is developed. The interstate commerce commission has nearly 1,800 employes, including several hundred experts on specialized lines, to be placed at the disposal of the director-general and carry out his orders. The senate interstate commerce commission today decided to continue its plan to investigate the railroad situation under the Cummins amendment. Members of the committee agreed that the investigation would be purely academic, but decided that any information obtained would be of benefit in considering legislation to carry out recommendations of the president in his forthcoming address. What scope the investigation will take was not decided upon, but members of the interstate commerce commission as well as representatives of the railroads will be called.

ACTUAL FEDERAL OPERATION.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Actual government operation of the railroads began today with the railroad war board continued in charge under orders from Director General McAdoo to direct traffic over the most convenient and expeditious routes.

The board, composed of five of the nation's foremost railroad executives who have been in control of roads since April, now will be enabled to effect the pooling of traffic heretofore impossible under the anti-trust laws.

The board's retention as operating head of the railroads for the present was announced yesterday after the five members had conferred with Director McAdoo, who instructed them to continue their functions and submit immediately a plan for directing traffic. Later McAdoo issued his first formal order designed to speed up the freight movement. He instructed all railroads to move shipments by the shortest routes, and ordered them to continue operations of their lines to conform with President Wilson's proclamation putting them under government control.

way as to render useless the torpedoes in which the gyroscopes were installed.

"Not only would these torpedoes have been worthless as weapons but it is possible they would have proved engines of destruction for their own users," said the district attorney.

Henning came to the United States in 1908 and was naturalized in 1916. Naval inspectors, it was stated, have had him under close observation for several weeks, imperfections in the parts of the gyroscopes which were assembled in Henning's department having aroused suspicion.

The gyroscope which has been termed the "brain of the torpedo" is of such intricate construction, authorities say that a defect which could be detected only by an expert would divert the missel from its course. In the indictment which was returned yesterday by a federal grand jury and kept secret until today it is charged Henning "maliciously and traitorously aided Germany" by equipping torpedo gyroscopes with imperfectly fitted bearings and wheels which were found to be cracked. District Attorney France declared enemy dust, an abrasive which would disable the delicate gears of the gyroscope also was found among the assembled parts.

Henning, authorities declare, is a highly skilled mechanic and holds American patent rights on a number of torpedo control and propulsion devices. One of Henning's sons, it was said, has been interned as an alien enemy at Ellis island. When arranged before Federal Judge Veeder in Brooklyn today, Henning, in an accent which was unmistakably German, pleaded "not guilty." He was ordered held without bail until January 2 when a date will be set for his hearing.

mand, it is likely to be a serious stumbling block to further negotiations.

Allied residents in Petrograd, according to the Post's correspondent, like the ordinary public, have been six weeks in complete ignorance of what is happening in allied countries. The ordinary postal service stopped working long ago. On the other hand there is plenty of German newspapers and information.

Capital Full of Germans.

Petrograd, the correspondent adds, is full of Germans who, quite at ease speak the Berlin dialect loudly, the Russians not protesting. In general he says, the feeling of the allied residents in northern Russia at the present moment finds its nearest parallel in that of the European residents in Peking during the Boxer troubles. He quotes a representative of one of the allies as saying to him last week: "We shall put up with any affront to keep Russia in the war."

The Posts' correspondent adds that affronts to the allied diplomats have not been lacking. It is reported that the Bolsheviki are trying to establish a rival Ukrainian rada to be composed of workmen and peasants.

A Rival Rada Set Up.

A congress of workmen's and soldiers' delegates held in Kharkhov has declared itself the supreme power in the Ukraine, deposing the Ukrainian rada.

The Ukrainian military commander at Kiev has requested Ensign Krylenko, the Bolsheviki commander-in-chief, to release a number of Ukrainian officers and soldiers he arrested at Minsk, Pskoff and elsewhere. A reply was demanded within 48 hours.

DETECTIVES ARE AT WORK

Thursday morning at her home in Milford with three bullet wounds from a twenty-two calibre revolver, two in the head and one in the thigh.

Bartholomew, the husband, who was arrested on Thursday on a warrant issued by Coroner Kelly, still insists he is not guilty. He does not seem the least disturbed and says he is confident of the outcome of the investigation now being so vigorously pursued.

Nothing is being left undone in an effort to place the guilt for the woman's murder for there is no longer any doubt but that she was murdered and did not commit suicide as neighbors at Milford at first thought.

The coroner's inquest was resumed today and it is not likely a verdict will be reached until late this afternoon or on Monday. The finger print expert from Plymouth has taken the impression of Bartholomew's fingers, and will make comparison today with the prints found in the room where the woman was murdered. He will report his findings to the coroner's jury.

No New Clues.

No new evidence has been uncovered, Bartholomew is being held because of his peculiar conduct and not because of anything tangible the officers have been able to get against him. If Bartholomew is guilty he must be given credit for wonderful acting for he has said nothing and has done nothing while in jail that would involve him.

There is one thing greatly in Bartholomew's favor. He has always borne a good reputation and has never before been in any trouble whatsoever. Citizens at Milford regard him as a man of good habits and a hard worker.

He will be given a preliminary hearing before Justice Graham on Monday.

Body Partly Under Bed.

Mrs. Bartholomew's body was found about one-half under the bed. The post-mortem examination showed that one of the three bullets that struck her entered the brain and certainly in itself caused instant death. This fact alone, with that of the three revolver wounds, is believed to be sufficient to disprove the unfounded rumor of suicide. A report was circulated in Milford yesterday that Mrs. Bartholomew was a "dope" fiend. This is emphatically denied.

Born in Noble County.

Mrs. Bartholomew was born in Noble county and at the time of her first marriage resided in Goshen. She was married twice prior to her marriage to Bartholomew, the first time to Archibald Ogle, of Chicago, and the second time to Angus Morrison, also of Chicago. She was separated from both former husbands. Nothing has developed that would in any way involve the former husbands.

The murdered woman was married to Bartholomew one year ago last October, since which time they have resided in Milford. It is a matter of rather common report there that Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew were not compatible. It is generally known that some time ago they separated and lived apart for quite a period. A reconciliation, however, was effected a short time ago.

A report has been circulated in Milford that Mrs. Bartholomew owned considerable property in Chicago and that she also has been accustomed to being careless with money and jewelry which she left around the house. No strangers, however, have been seen in Milford for several days, officers there declare.

THOUSANDS OF PARTS IN MODERN AIRPLANE

Government is Trying to Simplify Construction of Fliers.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Amazing figures as to the number of parts and amount of material entering into construction of an airplane have been assembled by army aviation officials in an effort to simplify construction as a means of hastening production.

While the present program cannot be delayed for the result of this investigation it appears likely that a way will be found later to reduce greatly the number of parts and kinds of material now needed.

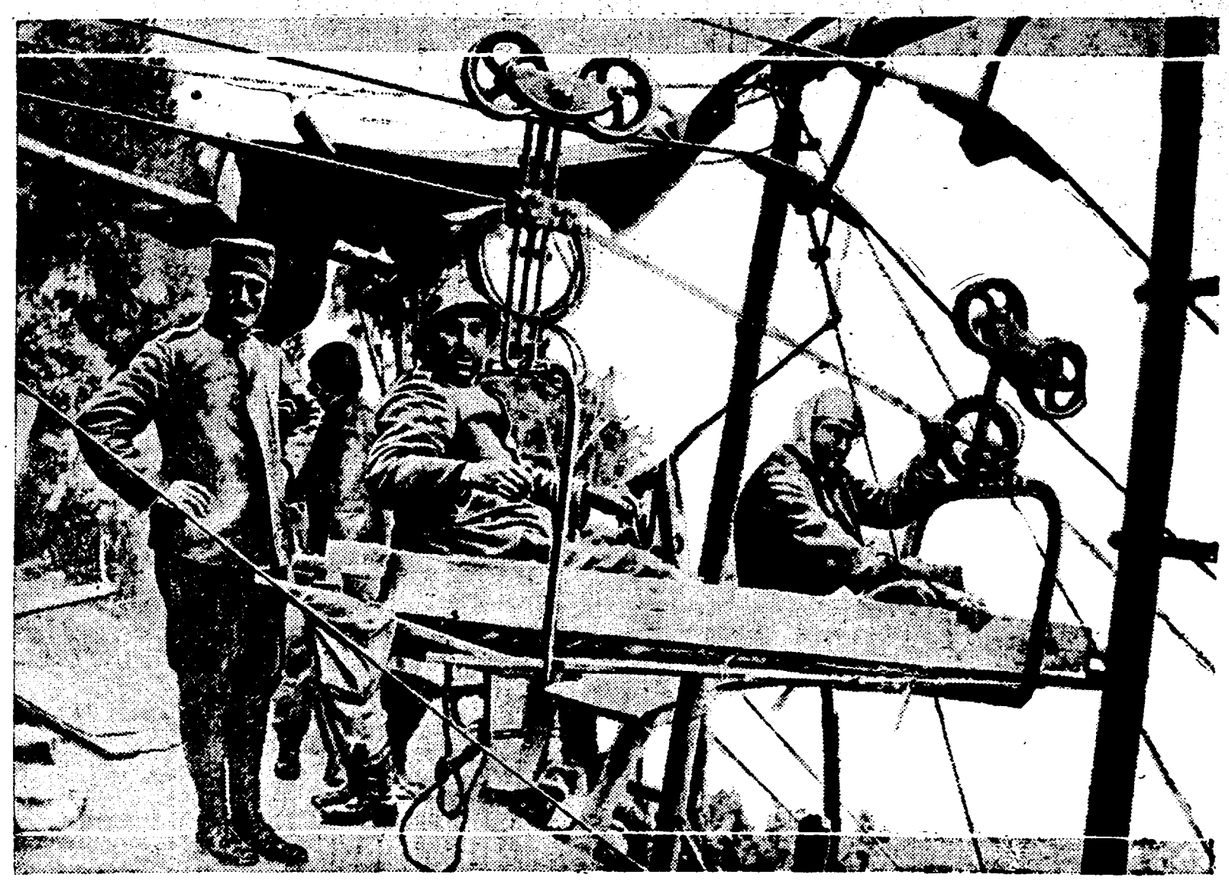

Exclusive of the engine there are hundreds of parts in the structure of an airplane and even when built up sections of the frame are regarded as single parts, there remain nearly 200 separate pieces to be assembled in a complete machine. That is exclusive of screws, nails and similar things. These are the things necessary to build a machine without its engines: Nails, 4,326; screws, 3,377; steel stampings, 921; forgings, 798; turn buckles, 276; veneer, 37 square feet; wire, 8,262 feet; varnish, 11 gallons; dope (for dressing wings), 59 gallons; aluminum, 65 pounds; rubber, 34 feet; linen, 201 square feet; spruce, 44 feet; pine, 50 feet; ash, 31 feet; hickory, 1½ feet.

THE AERIAL TROLLEY ROUTE TO THE HOSPITAL

It's a long trip from the heights in the Trentino to the hospital—on the ground. But the Italians have solved this by making a carriage for wounded soldiers which can be used on the aerial trolleys built for moving big guns and other war supplies. It's short work, by use of this trolley, to get a badly wounded soldier into the hospital.

THE MARKETS

CORN HARDENS ON THE DIFFICULTY OF MOVING

Grain Takes Upshoot and Oats Reach Best Figures of Season.

Chicago, Dec. 29—Corn prices hardened today on account of unfavorable conditions for the movement of grain. Opening prices which ranged from unchanged figures to ¼c higher with Jan. $1.26½ to $1.26⅝ and May $1.24⅝ to $1.25, were followed by a slight general upturn.

The corn market closed steady at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜c higher with Jan. $1.26⅝ and May $1.25⅜.

Oats advanced to the highest point yet this esaon.

WALL STREET ADDS FURTHER TO GAINS

Short Session Gives the Stock Market Another Nice Boost.

New York, Dec. 29—Gains of the last two days were added to in the first half of today's stock market. Much of the advantage was lost at the end of active selling for profit. Minor rails were 1 to 2 points higher at their best and munitions and the motor group also developed marked strength. United States steel moved fractionally over and under yesterday's final price. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 450,000 shares. Liberty 4's sold at 97.14 to 96.98 and the 3½'s at 98.50 to 98.42.

LOCAL MARKETS

FROST HURTS THE FLORIDA ORANGES

Green Stuffs Plentiful With Prices Firm—The Local Markets.

Frosts during the last four weeks in Florida have caused considerable damage to oranges and jobbers have raised the price. Florida crops were damaged to some extent by these frosts, but the heaviest loss fell on the orange crop.

Green stuffs from Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana are plentiful, but prices hold steady and firm. Potato prices hold steady, but receipts are falling off in quality. Commission men say they know of no reason for this unless it is delay in transportation.

The top price for hay continued at $26 today. Fifteen loads were brought to the city. Three loads of corn sold for $1.15 to $1.20 and oats at 72 to 75 cents.

DESTROYERS AND A MERCHANT SHIP DO WELL-MANAGED JOB

CREW IS RESCUED BY HARD EFFORTS

Washington, Dec. 29.—Full details of the destruction by American destroyers of a German submarine and the capture of its crew made public today by the navy department show that the destroyers Fanning and Nicholson were the warships engaged. The incident was reported Nov. 24, but few facts were given at the time.

The submarine was sunk, the navy department's story of the affair indicates, as it was preparing to attack a merchantship flotilla convoyed by the destroyers.

The navy department's full story of the incident follows:

"At about 4:10 p. m. while escorting a convoy, Coxswain David B. Loomis, lookout of the Fanning, sighted a small periscope some distance off the port bow, extending about a foot out of the water and visible for only a few seconds. The Fanning immediately headed for the spot and about three minutes after the periscope had been sighted dropped a depth charge. The Nicholson also speeded to the position of the submarine which appeared to be heading toward a merchant vessel in the convoy and dropped another depth charge. At that moment the submarine's coning tower appeared on the surface between the Nicholson and the convoy and the Nicholson fired three shots from her stern gun. The bow of the submarine came up rapidly. She was down by the stern, but righted herself and seemed to increase her speed. The Nicholson cleared, the Fanning headed for the U-boat firing from the bow gun. After the third shot the crew of the submarine all came on deck and held up their hands, the submarine surrendering at 4:28 p. m.

U-Boat Goes Down.

"The Fanning approached the submarine to pick up the prisoners, both destroyers keeping their batteries trained on the boat.

"A line was got to the submarine, but in a few minutes she sank, the line was left go and the crew of the U-boat jumped into the water and swam to the Fanning.

"Although the crew wore life preservers," the statement continues, "a number of them were exhausted when they reached the side of the destroyer. As the submarine sank five or six men were caught by the radio aerial and carried below the surface before they disentangled themselves. Ten of the men were Already Germans Are Filling Up Petrograd and Getting Ahead.

London, Dec. 2r.—Special dispatches from Petrograd bearing date of Thursday, aim to give an impression of how the German peace reply was received there, but the statements are inexplicit and seem to be based partly on surmise. The reply, according to the correspondent of the Daily News, created a favorable impression generally, and he believes that if the Bolsheviki convene the constituent assembly now they will have Russia almost solidly behind them. Representing the people as dispirited and indifferent, owning to the miserable conditions of life, including the food shortage, the correspondent of the Morning Post says that as far as northern Russia is concerned, it will accept peace on any terms the Germans may like to impose. How the remainder of Russia will act, he adds, is another question.

A Bolsheviki Setback.

The correspondent of the Times is of the opinion that the Bolsheviki are disheartened over the German refusal to allow nationalities hitherto without political independence to decide their own future. He says that as the Russian delegates will adhere to this de-

NEW MONARCH IS A YOUNG OFFICER

Abdication is Probably Result of Disturbed Political Conditions.

Petrograd, Friday, Dec. 28.—There are persistent rumors here that King Ferdinand of Rumania has abdicated in favor of Crown Prince Charles.

Disturbed conditions in Rumania were reported in a dispatch from Petrograd dated Monday. It was said that news of a revolutionary plot against King Ferdinand had been received at the Bolsheviki headquarters in Petrograd. Other reports, it was added, tended to confirm indications of a political crisis. Except for this there has been little news from Rumania since the Rumanian army was forced to agree to an armistice on the eastern front. It had been reported that Bolsheviki and German propagandists were at work among the Rumanian troops. King Ferdinand, who is a member of the Hohenzollern

QUIET NEW YEAR'S EVE

No Hilarity is Planned at the Hotel Cafes and Restaurants.

WILL BE TAMEST IN MANY YEARS

Revelers Who Waste Food in Their Celebrations Are Denounced.

The New Year's eve celebration in Fort Wayne this year is likely to be a tame affair, compared to the revels of former years.

Inquiry at the various hotel cafes and restaurants Saturday indicated that practically no preparations are being made, as in the past.

Denunciation of revelers who waste their food in their celebrations is made in a statement by H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator. George M. Haffner, county food administrator, is expected to see that the rules for food conservation are strictly observed. Chief of Police Lentz will probobly see that drinking is restricted to the smallest possible minimum.

Federal Food Administrator Barnard was most emphatic in his criticism of any person who eats an extra meal at midnight because they waste the food and thus give aid and comfort to the enemy in the time of war. Barnard's denunciation amounts practically to branding such revelers as disloyal, and it will be interesting to see who will be willing to accept that designation by indulging in the kind of performance that Barnard refers to.

Many dances are planned for New Year's eve, as well as the usual number of watch parties.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP IS NEXT STEP

Washington, Dec. 29.—The railroads have definitely refused the demand of their organized employes for forty per cent. increases in pay and have turned the responsibility entirely to the government.

The railway executives here today inletting their decision be known, made no concealment of their feeling that government operation is a step toward government ownership and made clear they felt the public and the stockholders would demand it.

One of the plans under consideration for hauling railroad finances is the formation of a government corporation under the director general of railroads to buy and market railroad securities.

NEW EDIFICE IS DEDICATED

First Sermon in Jewish Temple is Delivered by Rabbi Weinstein.

Special Services Continued Saturday Morning and Sunday.

Special services which began Friday evening marking the dedication of the magnificent new temple at Wayne street and Fairfield avenue of the Achduth Vesholem congregation, were continued this morning. Services also will be held on Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

The new temple was crowded to its full capacity Friday evening, notwithstanding the extreme cold weather. A special musical program was rendered by the choir. The dedicatory address was delivered by Rabbi Philippson, of Cincinnati, one of the prominent rabbis of the country.

In the first service in the new edifice Friday evening the lighting of the perpetual lamp was in charge of Helen Freiburger. Isador Lehman, chairman of the building committee, presented the key, which was accepted in a few appropriate remarks by Marx Frank, president of the congregation.

Consecration Sermon.

Rabbi Weinstein delivered the consecration sermon, which was the first sermon to be delivered in the new building. He spoke as follows:

It is my privilege this evening to preach the first sermon in this new house of God. It is a time when words alone are altogether inadequate to express the emotions that one experiences who has helped to conceive and plan the structure which now rears its dome toward heaven, and who has watched and

GERMAN JUNKER PRESS ANGERED BY PEACE PLAN

Amsterdam, Dec. 29—Pan German newspapers angrily condemn the peace terms of the central powers. The Taglische Rundschau, of Berlin says: "Never before have we given up so completely everything we so dearly bought with the blood of hundreds of thousands, with the sweat of millions, with the deprivations of our children, with our own hunger."

The Deutsche Zeitung says that the entente has won the greatest victory of the war and that diplomats have destroyed all that has been fought for.

The Koelnische Zeitung on the other hand, regards the conditions as opening the road to peace advantageously to all sides. The Lokal Anzeiger thinks that the German answer to Russia will not be much to the taste of people with military leanings, but adds: "The outlines, however, are drawn wide enough to give scope for demands of justice. Definite judgment upon the peace work at Brest-Litovsk depends on how far this possibility is utilized in later negotiations."

ROYAL LADY IS PUNISHED AS A FOOD HOARDER

Geneva, Dec. 29.—The Princess von Wrede, wife of a chamberlain in the entourage of the king of Bavaria, has been condemned by a court at Vevey to pay a fine of 100 francs and costs for buying up and storing large quantities of foodstuffs in her villa at Territel, contrary to Swiss law. The princess, sometimes accompanied by the prince, is said to have scoured the country around Montreux in an automobile purchasing food, which has been confiscated b ythe authorities.

DAY'S WAR SUMMARY.

[By The Associated Press.]

King Ferdinand is reported to have abdicated the Rumanian throne in favor of Crown Prince Charles, according to persistent rumors in Petrograd. Official confirmation, however, is lacking.

Unsettled conditions and a political crisis in Rumania were reported early this week in dispatches from Petrograd and the Bolsheviki government received information that there had been a revolutionary plot against Ferdinand. The Rumanian army has been inactive since the Russian armistice and peace negotiations forced it to suspend hostilities. Bolsheviki and German propagandists have been reported working among the Rumanian troops.

Russia, Leon Trotsky told the council of workmen's and soldiers' delegates, would be forced to conclude a separate peace with Germany unless the entente allies join in the peace negotiations within ten days. The Bolsheviki foreign minister announced that he officially will ask the entente powers whether they will join in the peace negotiations. An advance guard of German peace emissaries has been observed in Petrograd. England and France, through Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Minister Pichon have replied informally to the peace proposals enunciated by Count Czernin for the central powers. The German terms are declared to be insufficient. The British national labor conference has voted to continue the war to make the world safe for democracy in the future. Foreign policies of the French government were approved by the French chamber of deputies.

Only in Palestine has there been marked fighting activity. North and northwest of Jerusalem, British troops after repulsing four Turkish attacks, attacked the enemy and pushed them back two and one-half miles on a front of nine miles. Turkish losses are reported to have been heavy and among the prisoners taken were Germans. Artillery duels occupy the opposing armies on the Italian and western fronts. On the front in France the German artillery fire has been heavy around St. Quentin and in the Ypres sector. A German attack in Lorraine was broken up by French gun fire.

A shell fired by an American passenger steamer is believed to have sunk a German submarine near the British isles, Thursday. Gunners and passengers saw the periscope of a submarine and the second shot from the gun exploded and threw debris from the submarine into

Failure to Buy Wool at the Right Time Cost U. S. $150,000,000.

WAR INQUIRY IS HAVING RESULTS

Cloth Scrap Sorting Graft is Brought Up for Some Further Airing.

Washington, Dec. 29—The profitable "scrap sorting contracts" in connection with making army uniforms which testimony at the senate committee investigation of war activities has led into the committees of the council of national defense came up again at today's hearing while Quartermaster General Sharpe was still under examination. It developed that Samuel Kaplan, a member of one of the supply committees had protested against cancellation of a sorting contract in which his brother was interested and it was further developed that his brother was treasurer of the Millbrook Mill company owning one of the Connecticut Woolen mills commandeered by the government.

The Brother Act.

Senator McKellar asked whether Emmanuel Kaplan, treasurer of the Millbrook Mill company, was not a brother of Samuel Kaplan, a member of a supply committee. Gen. Sharpe said he thought so. Last Saturday, Gen. Sharpe said Samuel Kaplan and other members of the council, supply committee came to him and protested against canceling of wool scrap sorting contracts given the Base Sorting company of New York. Senator McKellar said that Ira A. Kaplan, president of the sorting company which Gen. Sharpe said stood to make $400,000 a year under the contract recently annulled because it was regarded as excessive, was related to the council member.

"We had to follow the advice of the council committee," said Gen. Sharpe, explaining that Charles Eisenman, head of the supply committee, had approved the contract.

Senator McKellar assured Gen. Sharpe that the quartermaster general's faith and good intent in the situation was not questioned.

Usurpation of Authority.

"My purpose is to show that the council of national defense has usurped authority of the quartermaster general's office and is largely responsible for the shortage in clothing supplies," said Senator McKellar.

Senator Weeks brought out that on April 3 Boston wool dealers offered all their wool to the government at prevailing prices but the offer never reached Gen. Sharpe, being referred to the general munitions board.

When orders were given to prepare to clothe one million more men Gen. Sharpe said, soaring prices, rather than a shortage was the worst factor in the situation.

Cost Government $150,000,000.

"I was told by a responsible man that the failure of the government to accept the Boston wool men's offer of April 3 has cost the government $150,000,000," said Senator Meeks, "and I want to find out who is responsible for delay in its acceptance, and also who is responsible for delay in beginning purchases. I, for one, am somewhat dismayed by the length of time it takes in the war department to do things. Apparently injection of the council of national defense makes for further delay."

Senator Wadsworth said that on June 6 the treasury authorized the war department to buy wool, but that no considerable amount was bought until September. Gen. Sharpe insisted that there was no necessary delay and that the council had to study thoroughly the new subject and organize, necessitating great care and consideration.

Gen. Sharpe said that if the Boston wool dealers' offer of April 3 had been accepted promptly "it would have been very advantageous, as wool advanced after that." He reiterated that the offer never reached him, being referred by Secretary Baker to the munitions board.

Motor Truck Shortage.

The alleged shortage of motor trucks testified to by General Greble came up again today. It is not intended, the quartermaster general said, to deliver motor trucks to the training camps until the troops get ready to go abroad. The committee members expressed surprise.

"How are the men going to get experience in handling trucks?" asked Senator Hitchcock.

"I don't know," said General Sharpe. "Those are the orders. I think any surplus not needed by General Pershing should be sent to the training camps."

Berlin, Dec. 29.—An Italian attack against the Austro-German position on the heights of Monte Tomba broke down yesterday under the fire of the Teutons, it was announced officially by the German war office.

HAIG REPORTS NOTHING.

London, Dec. 29.—"There is nothing of special interest to report," says today's official communication.

CHURCHES TO SAVE COAL.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 29.—Indianapolis churches of all denominations are planning to take steps to conserve fuel, it was announced today. The plans contemplate union of Sunday evening meetings of each denomination instead of separate meetings in each church, holding home prayer meetings and whenever possible meeting in smaller rooms of the churches instead of the large auditoriums.

SUSPICIOUS ELEVATOR FIRES.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 29.—Fire which early today threatened to destroy the elevator of the Union Depot Elevator company, was extinguished before it reached the main grain bins. About 750,000 bushels of wheat, corn and oats were saved. The loss was $25,000. Officials of the company said the blaze was of suspicious origin. Seven fire companies and a fire boat kept the flames from spreading.

A PATRIOTIC SUBSTITUTION.

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 29.—The annual banquet which for eleven years has been given to 2,500 employes of the Southern Power company and affiliated units has been cancelled and the $5,000 which would have been spent was donated to the American Red Cross by a vote of the men.

NO GAMBLING SQUEEZE.

Chicago, Dec. 29—To avert any chance of a last-of-the-month squeeze in values, board of trade directors this afternoon fixed a sliding maximum price on the December delivery of oats here. The limit was defined as not exceeding five cents a bushel above prevailing quotations for the May option.

ARMY BALLOON RUNS AWAY.

Laredo, Texas, Dec. 29.—The army balloon manned by Captan McCullough and eight soldier aviators which left San Antonio yesterday afternoon and lost its course, landed at Hidalgo, Mexico, 40 miles up the Rio Grande river from Larado at 9 o'clock last night.

WHITE SLAVE HUNTER HAS LOST HER PERMIT

New York, Dec. 29.—The authority to investigate white slave conditions in this city conferred upon Mrs. Grace Humiston several months ago, after she solved the mystery of the Ruth Cruger murder when the police had failed to do so, was today revoked by Police Commissioner Woods. Recently Mrs. Humiston carried her investigations into nearby army cantonments and sensational charges she made drew her into sharp controversy with the army authorities.

The police commissioner in revoking her license, withdrew from Mrs. Humiston's control a number of detectives assgined to assist her.

WINSOME WEE MARY AND HER MA MATCH SMILES FOR THE CAMERA

This shows where Mary got that million-dollar gloom dispeller. Ma Pickford knows how to register joy and sunshine as well as her celebrated daughter, as this recent photo of both shows. Mary had just finished leading a U. S. Marine corps recruiting parade in San Francisco when her mother challenged her to match smiles. Mary will do well to look to her laurels when Ma's around. Perhaps that's why she doesn't have Mrs. Pickford in the picture more often.

CHARLES POTTER DEAD.

Well Known Resident of Butler Victim of Pneumonia.

Butler, Ind., Dec. 29.—Charles Porter, aged 69 years, passed away at his home on East Main street Friday morning at 12:30 o'clock after a two weeks' illness of pneumonia and other complications. Mr. Potter came to Indiana from Fulton county, Ohio, when a small child and lived on a farm in Franklin township until he grew to manhood. He engaged in the carriage and wagonmaker's trade and was in partnership with Lou Burgett for several years. Later he went to work for the Lake Shore Railroad company and for about forty years was employed as night ticket agent. It was while performing his duties in this office that he was taken sick with grip, which terminated in his death. He was a member of the local Order of Maccabees and was well known throughout this county. He is survived by his widow, one brother, Ed Potter, of near Butler, and a sister, Mrs. Flora Gail, of Wenatchee, Wash. Funeral services will be held from the home Monday afternoon.

GIVEN MASONIC PASSPORT.

Butler, Ind., Dec. 29.—Friday evening after the work of installation of the officers of Forest chapter, O. E. S., and Forest F. A. M. orders, Guy Cosper, a member of Battery F, 330th Field Artillery, was presented with a Masonic passoprt and a leather belt in which the passport is to be carried. Mr. Cosper is a member of the Masonic order of this city and is home on a short furlough. He left early Saturday morning for Camp Custer, Mich. Passports and belts were sent to three other soldiers belonging to the Butler lodge. They are Tom Maxwell, of Fort Funston; Dr. E. E. Frisbee, of Camp Jackson, South Carolina, and Guy Apt, somewhere in France.

REPUBLICAN ADMINISTRATION.

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 29.—M. J. Finnand A. Crites have paid the city waterworks department $50 and $15 respectively for alleged irregularities in connection with their water meters. It was alleged a piece of iron was found in the cogs of the meter at the Finn home last spring by an inspector, and recently it was found that Crites had taken his meter entirely off, it was alleged. Finn protested innocence, and Crites says his meter froze up and he took it off to fix it. Both were threatened with arrest before they made payment.

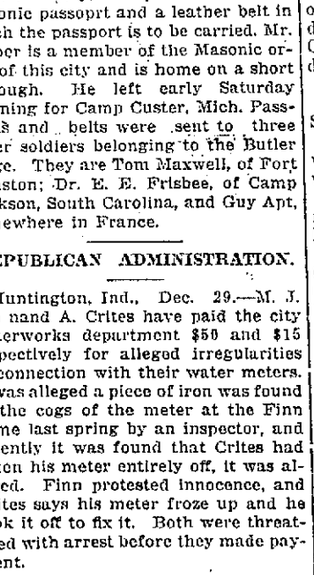

ROBERT RUGGLES DEAD.

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 29.—Robert Ruggles, age seventy-five, a civil war veteran, died of paralysis Thursday at Mt. Etna. The widow, two children, three brothers and a sister survive.

BRYANT WOMAN DIES.

Portland, Ind., Dec. 29.—Mrs. Sarah Hadley, of Bryant, died today at the age of seventy-three. She was born in Jay county on February 9, 1844.

What Do You Make, Now, of the Baron?

BARON VON KUEHLMANN

Has he a mole on his chin or what? Every picture you see of German Foreign Minister von Kuehlman is one of these "Thinker" poses. Kuehlman has been designated by the kaiser to talk peace with the Bolsheviki. This Kuehlman seems had to figure out. He's a bosom friend of old Wilhelm and yet every once in a while he breaks out in a most democratic sort of interview. Mebby it's all in the game—an out-and-out kaiser man who talks enough the other way to be useful in dickering with persons who have anti-kaiser ideas, eh what?

HURT IN AN ACCIDENT.

John Smith, 1125 Elmwood avenue, is confined to his home with a broken rib, a serious gash in the head and numerous cuts and bruises as the result of an accident Friday afternoon. Smith was driving in his buggy when he was run into by George Ray, a jitney driver, living at 1015 Oneida street. Smith was thrown from the buggy sustaining the injuries. He was taken to his home. Ray claims that the accident was due to the slippery pavement, the car skidding into the buggy.

The Atrocities in Armenia; Refugees Escape Massacre at Hands of Turks, But Die of Hunger

Thousands of Those Who Fled the Desolated Country Die of Starvation, Says Dr. Haggard in Another Installment of His Story of the Unspeakable Fate of the People of Armenia.

(This is the fifth of six articles on the horrors in Armenia, told by an American authority on the subject. Dr. Fred P. Haggard has spent much time investigating the atrocities of the German-dominated Turks, and is head of the Armenian and Syrian relief work in the United States.)

BY DR. FRED P. HAGGARD,
Secreary, American Commission for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

(Copyright, 1917, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

There is a terrible aftermath to the German-inspired Turkish brutality, that, after having disposed of from one to two million Armenians by massacre and starvation, drove the remaining unfortunates out of their home land.

Tens of thousands of human beings who managed to escape the Turkish massacre found their way, after enduring the most terrible hardships, through the mountain passes into the Russian Caucasus.

Many perished by the wayside, but the miserable exiles who reached Russian territory are now in daily danger of starving to death.

Thus, through the brutality that inspired the horrors against the Christian inhabitants of Turkey is confined to Turkish lands, the destitution and suffering resulting from it has spread to the surrounding countries.

Lucky as are the refugees who managed to escape over the Russian border, or south into Egypt, or perhaps across to Greece, in comparison to the people left behind, still their plight has been desperate indeed.

The bulk of those refugees who managed to escape the horrors of deportation, the desert, the wild Kurds, or the Turkish harem, found their way to Erivan and other cities in the Caucasus.

Here the Russian government was ready and willing to do all in its power to relieve their immediate needs, but there was lack of funds or time to consider the problem of rehabilitation.

Relief societies, however, sprang up almost over night, notably the American Society for Armenian and Syrian Relief, which has had men and stations there almost since the beginning of the war.

In this region alone, there are between fifteen and twenty thousand orphans, gathered in orphanages or "farmed out" to families who will care for them in return for a slight government grant, or a regular sum promised by a relief society.

Armenian-American girls in mourning costume appealing for aid for their native land.

Here it is a case of trying to provide not a "supplementary meal," as was asked for Belgian children, but one essential meal each day.

Without it the helpless youngsters were dying by hundreds in the streets.

Tens of thousands of refugees who escaped to the Caucasus had nothing but the clothes on their backs. They lay in the open under the burning sun by day and the chilly air of the night, with no change of clothing, almost no food.

Typhus and disentery broke out, and for a week in many centers hundreds died daily.

Very slowly, little rooms or rough shelters were found, and many families were quite extinguished before aid could be given them.

Relief workers have done wonders, but lack of funds hampers the work.

It has been a case of choosing out of a multitude, all at the point of destitution, those who are to be helped; the children, of course, have come first.

One of the workers, Dr. G. C. Reynolds, speaking of a little fellow of six, says:

"He was bereft, at a blow of his parents and two sisters. The family lived in Van and fled with the rest in the retreat of 1915. They reached Echmiadzin, where is situated the head of the Armenian church, but conditions were no better there than elsewhere, and due to exposure, hunger and disease both parents and the sisters died, leaving poor little Varazted alone in the world. His aged grandmother is trying to care for him, but she must have financial help."

Estimates place the number of Armenians and Syrian refugees in the Russian Caucasus alone at 250,000, and in eastern Turkey the number is 100,000. This total is being increased each day by newcomers. Nearly all are without employment. The larger proportion are women and children.

FEDERALIZED RAILROADS.

What advance may be made toward completely and permanently federalized railroads in the United States as a result of the establishment of government operation as a war measure will depend upon the public advantages demonstrated. For years radicals have demanded government ownership of the railroads as a part of the program of political and economic extremism, but in very recent times that demand has not been confined to the extremists. Many of the big railroad executives and financiers have been declaring with the utmost candor that only through government operation of the railroads could there be a return of efficiency to the country's rail transport.

This view is predicated, of course, upon the assumption that there will be no recession from the progressing policies of government in the control of interstate commerce. The anti-trust laws and other measures of control have well-nigh pitched the railroads into chaos. The present breakdown of transportation is due in great part, though certainly not wholly, to the trammels the federal enactments and the interstate commerce commission has set upon the operation of the railroads. There has not seemed to be any way around this except in abandonment of the anti-trust policies of government as enforced during the past dozen years. Railroads are harder put to it trying to obey the law than they are attempting to take care of the country's increasing traffic. The prodigious growth of traffic during the past two or three years has simply broken down the transportation system of the country. Since the war began and the government's own needs in transportation have become tremendous and imperative the breakdown is almost disastrous. This is seen in the multiplying difficulties of the past half dozen months getting coal distributed to the people and to industry.

To step around the law that hampers transportation the government has been forced to take control of them and operate them under its own authority. Whatever processes may now make for efficiency can be employed without let or hindrance. The government is not ruled by the laws and the decisions that have been made for the control of the corporations that own the railroads. Wherever it can handle more traffic or speed up traffic or cheapen operation or in any wise or by any means improve efficiencies and make the transportation of the country perform its work the government can form its own rules and adopt its own practices without any reference to anti-trust laws, interstate commerce regulations or rate controls.

The experiment will be watched with an absorbed and critical interest. The future of the greatest single industry the country has save its agriculture is perhaps bound up in the success of federal operation of the railroads. If the vast efficiencies that theoretically have been promised, if the prodigious economies that have been predicted, if the superior service that is hoped for shall together issue from this essay of the government to administer transportation during the war and shall be fully realized the public will be pretty much of one mind as to what should be the future of the railroads. And this assumes, of course, that the abuses and political dangers that have always stood rather portentously and affrighting in the forefront of all proposals for federalized railroads shall be escaped or at the least be seen as not necessary concomitants of government ownership.

In any event, it has become clear to reasonable minds that the federal policy toward railway finance and operation must be altered in some respects. The roads have come to the present breakdown through causes for which they are not altogether responsible. This is shown in the necessity of the government to take hold of the railroads as the only alternative to radical changes of policy toward corporate ownership and operation. It may be doubted if there is a practicable way to alter those policies to meet the situation after the war's stresses upon transportation have ended, when a return to the private operation of the roads would be the logical step. The theory of government ownership is undeniably having its trial in practical operation and in it is invested the future of the railroads of America.

Discovery that the mayor-elect of Michigan City is not a citizen and probably is ineligible to hold the office to which he was chosen serves to emphasize what many thoughtful persons have for a good while contended should be done in this state to establish definite and rigid qualifications both for the exercise of the franchise and the holding of civil office in Indiana. An alien may vote upon the evidence of his declaration of intention to become a citizen and by that same qualification may hold certain offices. It is not enough. Complete citizenship should be made prerequisite to any exercise of the political functions of citizenship. Not many years ago it was discovered at the death of a man long resident in Fort Wayne, where he served in both elective and appointive municipal office, that he was not a citizen and had been wholly ineligible to serve in public capacities where he had acquitted himself well. He did not himself appear to have known that he was not a citizen. The ballot is made too easy a privilege in Indiana and it ought to be more severely qualified than it is.

The new police administration will find itself provided with plenty of cut-out work when it takes hold in a few days. Whether or not it will know what ought to be done and how to do it we can't say, but we have hopes. An entire new policy of police administration is necessary to any radical improvement of efficiency and morale in the department and we trust the new administration will see and appreciate that. A common sense view of police organization and work—such a view as would be taken of a private business matter—will bring a transformation in the department. There are, of course, some restrictions as to "hiring and firing," owing to civil service restraints, but even these trammels need not be fatal to discipline and efficiency if the board of safety will put trust in its chief and then decline to meddle in and muddle his affairs. Matters in the department cannot be completely remedied in a day, but they can be straightened out in due time if an intelligent and experienced chief be given half a show to make good with his job.

The bolsheviki government in Petrograd is treating the diplomatic representatives of the allied countries very much as though they were interlopers, meddlers, hostiles and downright no-goods. What the Prussian peace tricksters are likely to fasten on Russia will have the whole land screeching for help before the war has been ended a twelve-month. Half-baked puddings like Lenine and Trotzky will fare badly dealing with the Prussian diplomats of the Machiavellian school. When Russia again needs help democratic nations will think at least twice before helping.

There no longer is any manner of doubt of the failure of the Zeppelin as an engine of offensive warfare and if the conflict goes on for another year the submarine will be sent to keep the German air monsters good company on the scrap heap. Count Zeppelin did not live long enough to see his life's greatest work go definitely into the discard, but he did not die before having understood its limitations even if not its almost complete failure.

Not far ahead lies a new year. So swear, swear, swear with care, but swear off. It is better to have sworn and welched than never to have sworn at all. Getting from New Years day to Candlemas with a good resolution is some better than the average record and who does that does well if not nobly.

It will be noted with satisfaction and interest that since the congressional inquiries into war matters began there has been a more or less increasing train of reports from the big camps and cantonments that the stores of overcoats and blankets are improving nicely.

The people of this country are ready for government ownership or any other kind of a deal in railroading that will bring from the mines enough coal to keep them warm.

For the little irritation of late trains you will now please do your cussing to the government.

As a strong man Brother Sylves has nothing to speak of on Mister McAdoo.

The brick we call our daddy?
Mother!

Who teaches Nell the surest ways
Of making pulses flutter,
And holding suitors in a daze
Till binding words they utter?
Mother!

When Billy's bent with bitter woe,
Who steels his drooping spinal,
By telling him that woman's "No"
Is rarely ever final?
Mother!

Who makes the men dissatisfied
With lasses free to marry,
But gently scatters from her side
The chaps inclined to tarry?
Mother!
—Terrill Love Holliday.

Who now-times takes a lump of coal,
And treats it so, by glory!
It yields from its shi-blackened soul
Its very last calorie?
Mother!

Who is it knows the cost of meals,
But never lifts a holler?
Who chokes the eagle till it squeals—
The eagle on each dollar?
Mother!

Who is it darns and patches late,
When no one is the wiser?
It is that strong right hand of Fate,
The girl who will lick the Kaiser!
Mother!

The Artsetic.

(An Engineering School for Women has been started in Scotland.)

What if my lady should appear
In a mechanics grimy gear?
I shall not squeamishly decline
To figure at her shrine.

If Vulcan's smoky sway precludes
An assignation in the woods,
I shall not linger less elate
Outside the foundry gate.

When she knocks off at eventide
I'll flutter fondly to her side, and demonstrate that grease and oil
Can't loosen love's sweet coil.

Most tenderly my tongue shall wag
To Amaryllis on the slag.
Whilst I endeavor to confine
Her horny hand in mine.

I often wonder as I see
Your name in papers many,
Where you come from, and where you go,
What rights you have, if any.

TRYING TO DRIVE HIM IN.

Sees Fall of the Bolsheviki.

By A. J. SACK,
Director of the Russian Information Bureau in America.

The rule of the bolshiviki is tottering and we may expect their downfall in a very short time. But, whether they fall tomorrow, or even today, they have already committed their greatest crime against Russia and the allies: they have disorganized and demoralized the once so-glorious Russian army. While Mr. Trotsky is pathetically exclaiming that the bolsheviki will not kneel before the kaiser, and that in case Germany offers Russia "offensive peace terms," the bolsheviki will declare a "revolutionary war" on Germany, while playacting so in the midst of the Russian tragedy which the bolsheviki have themselves created, the truth of the situation is plain: the damage the bolsheviki have already done the the Russian military machine is almost irreparable; there is probably no longer a Russian army in existence and the roads to Russia are open. A separate peace between Russia and Germany, under present conditions, would be a peace on Germany's terms. Russia, under these terms, would become practically a vassal of Germany.

It should be understood that a separate peace with Russia, on the terms which Germany is now able to dictate, resorting probably to some pseudo-democratic camouflage, would be a realization beyond the wildest dreams of Prussian junkerdom. This victory would strengthen the political position of the German militarists and justify for the population of Germany their sacrifices during the war. Germany extending her rule over Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Turkey, Rumania and Russia, with the possession of the resources of these countries, with access to every kind of food, metal and raw material, becomes almost unconquerable. At best, the war between Germany and the allies, under such circumstances, will last for another several years, until a military decision favorable to the allies is reached. At worst, the war may end in some sort of compromise, leaving in existence two antagonistic forces: the German autocracy with her vassals, bound to her militaristic chariot, on the one side, and the union of democratic nations on the other. Such will be the case if peace is attained by Germany yielding every possible concession in the west in exchange for a free hand in Russia. Sooner or later such a situation would bring another war, another world's tragedy with millions of dead.

Hope for the great allied cause, under the present difficult conditions, lies in the national movement against the bolsheviki, already active in many parts of Russia, the movement which will turn against any attempt of Germany to destroy the newly organized centers of the Russian democracy and to conquer Russia economically. The recent movement, which began after the bolsheviki revolt and which resulted in a final "separation" of many parts of Russia, such parts as Siberia, the Caucasus, the Cossacks' regions and the Ukraine is very significant. It is a remarkable expression of the instinct for self-preservation, which is still very powerful in Russia.

After the provisional government disappeared and the role of the central government was usurped by the bolsheviki, many parts of Russia decided to live, temporarily at least, independent of central government, and to work out their local problems through their own properly organized local governments. This movement is significant not only because it solves one of the most important problems confronting the new Russian democracy—the problem of organizing the local governments—it is also a sign that centers for future opposition to Germany have already been organized.

The psychology of the Russian people must be properly understood. Russia is longing for peace, but a separate peace concluded on the terms Germany will dictate will act on the country as the lash of a whip. Russia's losses in the war, up to date, are about 8,000,000 men. Every Russian home is in mourning. There are in Russia now about 40,000,000 or 50,000,000 men and women who have sacrificed the blood of their children, husbands and brothers in this war. Now can you imagine how Russia will feel when the Germans appear, practically rulers in the country, and from day to day the news will be coming that German troops released from the Russian front, through the treachery of the Bolsheviki, are concentrating their endeavors in the west, threatening the very existence of the French, English, and American democracies?

In this Russian psychology lies hope for the Allies and the Allied great cause. The signs of a national movement against the Bolsheviki and the Germans have appeared in Russia, and this movement will grow with every endeavor of Germany to impose her rule on democratic Russia. The main task of the Allies, in case separate peace is concluded, must be an active support of this national movement. The allied democracies must make a definite distinction, once for all, between the Bolsheviki and the Russian people. Whatever the Bolsheviki do, the betrayed Russian democracy should feel that the allied democracies are with her at this critical moment of her life. It should be realized that even if Russia is out of the war, she still remains an important factor in the world situation. The Russian situation is critical but not desperate, and whatever happens, not everything is yet lost for the Allied cause in Russia.

The consolidation of the democratic forces and the establishment of a staple must be properly understood. Russia in Russia's life, after the present chaos. The more thoroughly the Russian democracy is organized, the more powerful the central and the local governments are, the stronger will be the anti-German movement in our country, the movement which will be most useful for the Allies, even with Russia out of the war.

President Wilson has repeatedly stated that one of the Allied war aims is the democratization of Germany. The democratization of Germany is impossible if German Junkerdom is permitted to crush democracy in Russia. On the other hand, the democratization of Germany is inevitable if democratic institutions are firmly established in Russia, and Germany finds herself in an iron ring of great democracies, all fighting the rule of her militaristic clique. This makes the support of the Russian democracy, in her struggle for existence, one of the most important allied tasks, regardless of whether Russia stays in the war or drops out because of exhaustion.

A GOOD WAR YARN.
(Chicago Evening Post.)

One of the neatest war stories that are going about these parts is attributed by Chicago Commerce to Mr. Lee Nichols, the London soldier, who has made a name for himself by his war lectures. The story needs no word to point its delicate compliment to America.

Nichols says:

"I was at Rockford a short time ago looking around your camp, and a boy came up to me in uniform, of course, and said:

"'Say, you are English, aren't you?' I said 'Yes.'

"'Say, have you been in the war?' 'Yes.'

"'Pretty tough out there, ain't it?' 'Yes, pretty tough.'

"'Say, what do you have to do out there? You work in the trenches for 10 days and then go back for five months, don't you?' 'Well, if you reverse it you might get nearer the truth.' I said. So he said, 'Tell me what you do in the trench.' I said, 'Oh, when you are on guard at night you will have to put your head over the top for two hours out of every six and keep it there.'

"'Say, is there anyone there to see you do it?'

"So I thought, so this is the material that the great national American army is made up of! Then I said to him, 'Where do you come from?'

"'Oh,' he said, 'I come from London.'"

ACCUSED.
(Leslie's.)

When you pay the extra one-cent stamp on your letter, blame the kaiser.

When you pay that extra Pullman and railroad fare, blame the kaiser.

When you pay from five to fifty cents more to go to movies or to the theater, blame the kaiser.

When you pay that extra tax on your club dues, blame the kaiser.

When you pay the extra cost for parcel post, for your telegram or cablegram, blame the kaiser.

When you send a Christmas box to your boy on the firing line, or on the battleship, blame the kaiser.

When you read of homes in Belgium, in Serbia, Rumania, France and Italy, devastated by war and the suffering and slaughter on the battlefield, blame the kaiser.

When you read of the Zeppelin raids in London and the murder of innocent civilians, school children at play, the aged and infirm in hospitals or wounded in care of the Red Cross, blame the kaiser.

And when you say your prayers at night, pleading with the good Lord above for all His tender mercies, bear in mind that He has said: "Vengeance is Mine. I will repay."

GERMAN INFLATION.
(New York Sun.)

Inflation is the order of the day in Germany. Inflated war bonds, inflated bank loans, inflated credit, inflated paper money, inflated prices despite every rigorous measure Prussia can apply. German finance is like the bag Zeppelin. A puncture will be fatal.

Here, how inspiringly different! Here we have no flood of worthless I. O. U.'s issued by a crumbling government. Here we subscriber dollars redeemable in gold on demand, dollars saved by the people and put in the hands of their government and by their government disbursed to them in a hundred thousands ways.

When the people of the United States subscribe a billion they subscribe something better than the digit followed by three groups of ciphers, which is the beginning and the end of thei renemy's efforts.—New York Sun.

FROM THE SENTINEL PAGES 25 YEARS AGO

The formal opening of the new Wayne club will probably occur about the 15th of next month. The carpenters and painters will finish their work this week and the carpets and furniture will be placed in the club rooms the latter part of next week. FIVE BELOW ZERO PREDICTED TONIGHT

No Warmer Weather is in Sight, Declares Forecaster McDonough.

With the mercury down to zero last night and with the prospects good for its going as low as 5 below tonight, there is little relief in sight from the present cold snap. "It won't get much warmer at least until after New Year's," was the word given out this morning at the weather observatory.

The light fall of snow last night will remain as the mercury will not go above 32 any time in the next few days.

In Hattiesburg, Miss., where many of the Fort Wayne soldiers are in training, the mean temperature yesterday was 30 above and at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., the mercury stood at 10 above.

First American to Fire on German Sub

Matthew C. Sullivan.

"Sailor of Fortune" is broke, but rich in memories. It was Matt's eagle eye and timely shout of warning that sent America's first shot of the war smashing into the conning tower of an enemy U-boat.

Matt landed in Seattle the other day from Kobe, Japan, after a globe-circling tour as a seaman. All he had in money was an American nickel, a Chinese nickel and two American pennies.

Sullivan was the lookout on duty on the steamship Mongolia, which, after his cry of warning, with a single shot sank a German submarine in the English channel.

"We were about forty miles out from Dover when I sighted the submarine," said Sullivan. "I shouted to the officer on the bridge and the order to fire was given. There was nothing to it. That one shell did the business for the U-boat."

Society

It has certainly been many years, if there were ever a time when the holiday season was so quiet as this one of 1917. Only the boys and girls find their spirits rising to the occasions of real party giving or attending, and though there are gatherings of families and of intimate friends every now and then, it is with work bags and knitting or Red Cross sewing, or a talk on the various situations and possibilities of the war over cigars or maybe a game of cards. There were many Christmas trees though not many of them were lighted brilliantly, as patriots were conserving electricity. But the children found as much delight in useful presents and a limited quantity of candy as they did formerly in pounds of sweets and some extravagant gifts.

Many people are to be at home on New Year's eve and day. From some homes have gone invitations to close friends to call during the day, but on the whole it is not going to be a festive time aside from gatherings of home folks. Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Bechtel and children are going to have a reception for their friends on Tuesday afternoon.

MILITANT AND MILITARY IS THIS COSTUME THAT HAS JUST APPEARED

This ordinary pleasing young person is shown in a costume that startled Fifth avenue. There have been many hilitary fashions, but not one of them ever came near this for a militaristic appearance. This feminine piece of apparel is patterned in many ways after the uniform. The coat is more full, and the collar has long points, which are practically the only differences. Swinging from the shoulders is a military cape that adds to the style of the costume. When the wearer smiles, she looks less like Lord Kitchner.—Copyright Underwood & Uunderwood.

Celery Vinegar.

A bunch of fresh celery, or one-fourth pound of celery seed; one quart of the best vinegar, one teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of white sugar. Cut up the celery into small bits, or pour the seed into a jar. Scald the salt and vinegar, dissolving the sugar with them, and pour over the celery seed or stalks. Let it cool and put it away in one large jar, tightly corked. In a fortnight, strain and bottle in small flasks, corking tightly.

The Wrong She Suffers

Almost every woman composes a book a year: WRONGS I HAVE SUFFERED.

Most husbands and lovers get the book in installments. And fortunate indeed is the man whose serial runs in weekly or monthly rather than in daily chapters.

Woman meditates on her bleeding heart in silence while she rocks the baby or composes chapters of her work as she pushes a flat iron. And she never wastes a line of her literary product. When it is perfected to her satisfaction, she springs it on the one man who must be made to pay, somehow, for her sorrows.

The wife's art is directed toward her husband's uplift. The maiden's complaint is designed to make her lover appreciate her sensitive disposition. Daughter's woes are such as father can solace quickly with a bank note.

For an over-irritated and desperate lover or father there is escape in flight but a husband has simply got to listen to the end of the chapter about—

"What I have to go without—"
"If I hadn't married you—."
"If your sister don't stop telling me how to raise my Johnny—."
"If I were a man in your shoes I'd ask the boss for a raise today—."
"I'll not risk the children's lives in that car again unless you run slower—."
"I'd never slave this way if it wasn't for my babies—."
"Why can't my husband get home to supper on time like all the other men in this street—?"

Few husbands find these quotations unfamiliar. All husbands know that they lose their effect when repeated too often.

So there isn't much harm done provided "Wrongs I have Suffered" remains a de luxe edition with a circulation limited to the family.

But real tragedy arrives when a wife is indiscreet enough to take her narrative to her relatives and neighbors. Their thoughtful censorship soon advertises her domestic tribulations to all the world. Thus are half of the country's divorces promoted.

In the cause of marital peace, there ought to be a dictagraph in every home into which the wife with the bleeding heart could whisper her woes. Then in some chance mood of greater contentment, she could listen to the record of her wrongs—could hear her very words thrown back to her in her own accents—haply to discover that husband is about right when he treats it all as simply silly, haply to decide that she would better not repeat such stuff to Mrs. Neighbor.

MOTHER OF GOVERNOR GOODRICH PASSES ON

Aged Woman Native Daughter of Randolph County, the Place of Her Death.

Winchester, Ind., Dec. 29.—Mrs Elizabeth H. Goodrich, mother of Governor James P. Goodrich, died here early today at the governor's home. She has been ill a long time. Gov. Goodrich had been at her bedside since Thursday. Mrs. Goodrich was born in Randolph county Indiana, Oct. 19, 1840. She had lived in the county the greater part of her life. In 1859 she married John B. Goodrich. Six boys were born, five of whom now are living. After her husband's death in 1872 she moved to a farm near Winchester and raised her family there. By her own work and the assistance of her sons she accumulated considerable property. Last June she had a severe attack of heart trouble but rallied considerably.

SOME EXPERIMENTS IN ESTABLISHING A UNIFORM FOR WOMEN

BY WINONA WILCOX.

Woman has always standardized her clothes more than she has realized. In any circle of dress, mat of its apparently great differences have been pure camouflage.

Rob dress of its color and strip it of its furbelows and its lines would remain straightfront, or hipless, or hourglass or bouffantly bustled, according to the date of making.

Women has always insited on wearing her skirts long or short, scant or full, just as the designers decide for her. She has left it to the corsetmakers to determine whether her waist should be wasp or natural, high or low.

She has put on silk or wool, cotton or linen, velvet, fur or chiffon, exactly as the commercial interests of the country have dictated.

Therefore any lightning change should be easy for her, even to a national uniform, should war impose that duty.

But probably it will be considerably easier to popularize a standardized wartime frock that it will be to design one.

The classic simplicity of primative art inspires most dress reformers. An early and artistic type of national feminine attire must be credited to the Greeks. What is considered an exact reproduction of this ancient universal fashion was woven recently by a group of New York artists. The design is interesting as proving the antiquity of the one-piece dress.

Agitation for dress reform in the United States was begun by Dr. Mary Walker half a century ago. Dr. Walker's idea of a uniform for women was trousers and a frock coat, a modernized version of which leads today's art suggestions.

But no matter what the model may be, a woman cannot put it on in the morning and wear it all day, at all kinds of occupations, in man's careless way. She must always have one kind of a dress for the kitchen and another for out-of-doors.

The national food conservation authorities recently invented a regulation kitchen garment which fastens with a single button and is conveniently finished with detachable collars and cuffs. This type becomes a very smart street dress when developed in cloth with collar and cuffs of fur or velvet.

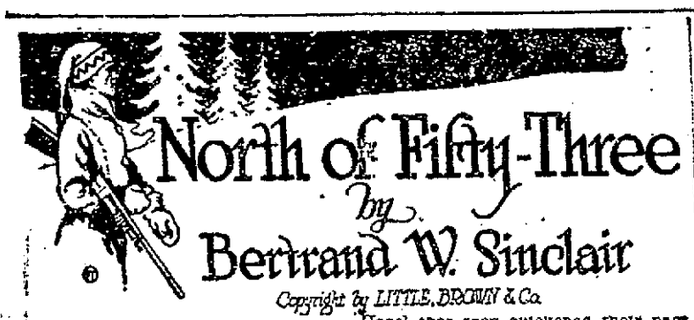

The Polymuriel, or reversible dress for which a prize of $150 was given in a nation-wide contest a year ago recognizes woman's general need of different dresses for different occasions. It is a triplet dress, a three-in-one combination, and it is dull or gray, as it is worn wrong or right side out. By omitting the skirt, it becomes a practical rainy day costume consisting of a Russian coat and trousers.

A true uniform is already in existence in some schools for girls. Whether made up in white cotton for summer or blue serge for winter, its lovely lines follow the figure in a way which suggests the ancient Greek pattern.

If the war actually makes necessary a uniform for women, it will doubtless also determine what the garb shall be like.

Thousands of women are already wearing olive drab military coats and capes, some with skirts and some with breeches and puttees. The color is compulsory for women who drive ambulances or work in other ways in the war zone. As a war exigency, the color may become fashionable for all civilians, but what the cut of the cloth may be remains the secret of some futurist designer.

A national uniform cannot, however, depart conspicuously from some one of the costumes herewith outlined.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story opens in the town of Granville, Ontario, where Miss Hazel Weir is employed as a stenographer in the office of Harrington and Bush. She is engaged to Jack Barrow, a young real estate agent, and the wedding day is set. While walking with him one Sunday they meet Mr. Bush, Hazel's employer, who for the first time seems to notice her attractiveness. Shortly afterward, at his request, she becomes his private stenographer. After three months Mr. Bush proposes marriage, which Hazel declines, and after a stormy scene in the office Hazel leaves her employment, Mr. Bush warning her he would make her sorry for refusing him.

CHAPTER II—Bush makes an effort, by a gift of flowers, to compromise Hazel in the minds of her friends. She returns them. The next day Bush is thrown from his horse and fatally hurt. He sends for Hazel, who refuses to see him before he dies. Three days afterward it is announced that he left a legacy of $5,000 to Hazel, "in reparation for any wrong I may have done her." Hazel recognizes at once what construction will be put upon the words. Bush had his revenge.

And then she flung herself across the bed and sobbed hysterically into a pillow.

Through the night Hazel dozed fitfully, waking out of uneasy sleep to lie staring, wide-eyed, into the dark, every nerve in her body taut, her mind abnormally active. Grief and anger by turns mastered her, and at daybreak she rose, heavy-lidded and physically weary.

The first thing upon which her gaze alighted was the crumpled photo in its shattered frame; and, sitting on the side of her bed, she laughed at the sudden fury in which she had destroyed it; but there was no mirth in her laughter.

She gathered up the bits of broken glass and the bent frame, and put them in a drawer, dressed herself, and went down to breakfast. She was too deeply engrossed in her own troubles to notice or care whether any subtle change was becoming manifest in the attitude of her fellow boarders. The worst, she felt sure, had already overtaken her.

She had a little time to spare, and that time she devoted to making up a package of Barrow's ring and a few other trinkets which he had given her. This she addressed to his office and posted while on her way to work.

She got through the day somehow, struggling against thoughts that would persist in creeping into her mind and stirring up emotions that she was determined to hold in check. Work, she knew, was her only salvation.

And so she got through the week. Saturday evening came, and she went home, dreading Sunday's idleness, with its memories. The people at Mrs. Stout's establishment, she plainly saw, were growing a trifle shy of her. She had never been on terms of intimacy with any of them during her stay there, hence their attitude troubled little after the first supersensitiveness wore off. But her own friends, girls with whom she had played in the pinafore-and-pigtail stages of her youth, young men who had paid court to her until Jack Barrow monopolized her—she did not know how they stood. She had seen none of them since Bush launched his last bolt. Barrow she had passed on the street just once, and when he lifted his hat distantly, she looked straight ahead, and ignored him. Whether she hurt him as much as she did herself by the cut direct would be hard to say.

When Sunday noon arrived, and the phone had failed to call her once, and not one of all her friends had dropped in, Hazel twisted her chair so that she could stare at the image of herself in the mirror.

"You're in a fair way to become a pariah, it seems," she said bitterly. "What have you done, I wonder, that you've lost your lover, and that Alice and May and Hortense and all the rest of them keep away from you? Nothing—not a thing—except that your looks attracted a man, and the man threw stones when he couldn't have his way. Oh, well, what's the difference? You've got two good hands, and you're not afraid of work."

She walked out to Granville park after luncheon, and found a seat on a shaded bench beside the lake. People passed and repassed—couples, youngsters, old people, children. It made her lonely beyond measure. She had never been isolated among her own kind before.

A group of young people came sauntering along the path. Hazel looked up as they neared her, chattering to each other. Maud Steele and Bud Wells, and—why, she knew every one of the party. Hazel caught her breath as they came abreast, not over ten feet away. The three young men raised their hats self-consciously.

"Hello, Hazel!" the girl said.

But they passed on. It seemed to Hazel that they quickened their pace a trifle. It made her grit her teeth in resentful anger. Ten minutes later she left the park and caught a car home. Once in her room she broke down.

"Oh, I'll go mad if I stay here and this sort of thing goes on!" she cried forlornly.

A sudden thought struck her.

"Why should I stay here?" she said aloud. "Why? What's to keep me here? I can make my living anywhere."

"But, no," she asserted passionately. "I won't run away. That would be running away, and I haven't anything to be ashamed of. I will not run."

Still the idea kept recurring to her. It promised relief from the hurt of averted faces and coolness where she had a right to expect sympathy and friendship.

The legal notice of the bequest was mailed to her. She tore up the letter and threw it in the fire as if it were some poisonous thing. The idea of accepting his money stirred her to perfect frenzy. If she could have poured the whole miserable tale into some sympathetic ear she would have felt better, and each day would have seemed less hard. But there was no such ear. Her friends kept away.

Saturday of the second week her pay envelope contained a brief notice that the firm no longer required her services. There was no explanation, only perfunctory regrets; and, truth to tell, Hazel cared little to know the real cause. Any one of a number of reasons might have been sufficient. But she realized how those who knew her would take it, what cause they would ascribe. It did not matter, though. The very worst, she reasoned, could not be so bad as what had already happened—could be no more disagreeable than the things she had endured in the past two weeks. Losing a position was a trifle. But it set her thinking again.

She stopped at a news stand and bought the evening papers. Up in the top rack of the stand the big heads of an assorted lot of Western papers caught her eye. She bought two or three on the impulse of the moment, without any definite purpose except to look them over out of mere curiosity. With these tucked under her arm, she turned into the boarding-house gate, ran up the steps, and, upon opening the door, her ears were gladdened by the first friendly voice she had heard—it seemed to her—in ages, a voice withal that she had least expected to hear. A short, plump woman rushed out of the parlor, and precipitated herself bodily upon Hazel.

"Kitty Ryan! Where in the wide, wide world did you come from?" Hazel cried.

"From the United States and everywhere," Miss Ryan replied. "Take me up to your room, dear, where we can talk our heads off.

"And, furthermore, Hazie, I'll be pleased to have you address me as Mrs. Brooks, my dear young woman." the plump lady laughed, as she settled herself in a chair in Hazel's room.

"So you're married?" Hazel said.

"I am that," Mrs. Kitty responded emphatically, "to the best boy that ever drew breath. And so should you be, dear girl. I don't see how you've escaped so long—a good-looking girl like you. The boys were always crazy after you. There's nothing like having a good man to take care of you, dear."

"Heaven save me from them!" Hazel answered bitterly. "If you've got one you're lucky. I can't see them as anything but self-centered, arrogant, treacherous brutes."

"Lord bless us—it's worse than I thought!" Kitty jumped up and threw her arms around Hazel. "There, there—don't waste a tear on them. I know all about it. I came over to see you just as soon as some of the girls—nasty little cats they are; a woman's always meaner than a man, dear—just as soon as they gave me an inkling of how things were going with you. Pshaw! The world's full of good, decent fellows—and you've got one coming."

"If you'd had my experience of the last two weeks you'd sing a different tune," Hazel vehemently declared. "I hate—I—"

And then she gave way, and indulged in the luxury of turning herself loose on Kitty's shoulder. Presently she was able to wipe her eyes and relate the whole story from the Sunday Mr. Bush stopped and spoke to her in the park down to that evening.

Kitty nodded understandingly. "But the girls have handed it to you worse than the men, Hazel," she observed sagely. "Jack Barrow was just plain crazy jealous, and a man like that can't help acting as he did. You're really fortunate, I think, because you'd not be really happy with a man like that. But the girls that you and I grew up with—they should have stood by you, knowing you as they did; yet you see they were ready to think the worst of you. They nearly always do when there's a man in the case. That's a weakness of our sex, dear. Well, you aren't working. Come and stay with me. Hubby's got a two-year contract with the World Advertising company. We'll be located here that long at least. Come and stay with us."

"Oh, no, I couldn't think of that, Kitty!" Hazel faltered. "You know I'd love to, and it's awfully good of you, but I think I'm just about ready to go away from Granville."

"Well, come and stop with us till you do go," Kitty insisted. "We are going to take a furnished cottage for a while. Though, between you and me, dear, knowing people as I do, I can't blame you for wanting to be where their nasty tongues can't wound you."

But Hazel was obdurate. She would not inflict herself on the one friend she had left. And Kitty, after a short talk, berated her affectionately for her independence and rose to go.

"For," said she, "I didn't get hold of this thing till Addie Horton called at the hotel this afternoon, and I didn't stop to think that it was near teatime, but came straight here. Jimmie'll think I've eloped. So ta-ta. I'll come out tomorrow about two. I have to confab with a house agent in the forenoon. By-by."

Hazel sat down and actually smiled when Kitty was gone. Somehow a grievous burden had fallen off her mind. Likewise, by some psychological quirk, the idea of leaving Granville and making her home elsewhere no longer struck her as running away under fire. She felt that she could adventure forth among strangers in a strange country with a better heart, knowing that Kitty Brooks would put a swift quietus on any gossip that came her way.

So that Hazel went down to the dining room light-heartedly, and when the meal was finished came back and fell to reading her papers. The first of the Western papers was a Vancouver World. In a real-estate man's half-page she found a diminutive sketch plan of the city on the shores of Burrard inlet, Canada's principal outpost on the far Pacific.

"It's quite a big place," she murmured absently. "One would be far enough away there, goodness knows."

Then she turned to the "Help Wanted" advertisements. And down near the bottom of the column she happened on an inquiry for a school-teacher, female preferred, in an out-of-the-way district in the interior of the province.

Then She Turned to the "Help Wanted" Advertisements.

"Now, that—" Hazel thought.

She had a second-class certificate tucked away among her belongings. Originally it had been her intention to teach, and she had done so one term in a backwoods school when she was eighteen. With the ending of the term she had returned to Granville, studied that winter, and got her second certificate; but at the same time she had taken a business-college course, and the following June found her clacking a typewriter at nine dollars a week. And her teacher's diploma had remained in the bottom of her trunk ever since.

Unaccountably, since Kitty Brooks' visit, she found herself itching to turn her back on Granville and its unpleasant associations. She did not attempt to analyze the feeling. Strange lands, and most of all, the West, held alluring promise. One thing was certain: Granville, for all she had been born there, and grown to womanhood there, was now no place for her. The very people who knew her best would make her suffer most.

She spent that evening going thoroughly over the papers and writing letters to various school boards, taking a chance at one or two she found in the Manitoba paper, but centering her hopes on the country west of the Rockies. Her savings in the bank amounted to three hundred odd dollars, and cash in hand brought the sum to a total of three hundred and sixty-five. At any rate, she had sufficient to insure her living for quite a long time. And she went to bed feeling better than she had felt for two weeks.

Very shortly thereafter—almost, it seemed, by return mail—Hazel got replies to her letters of inquiry. The fact that each and every one seemed bent on securing her services astonished her.

But the reply from Cariboo Meadows, B. C., the first place she had thought of, decided her. The member of the school board who replied held forth the natural beauty of the country as much as he did the advantages of the position. The thing that perhaps made the strongest appeal to Hazel was a little kodak print inclosed in the letter, showing the schoolhouse.

The building itself was primitive enough, of logs, with a pole-and-sod roof. But it was the huge background, the timbered mountains rising to snowclad heights against a cloudless sky, that attracted her.

She sat for a long time looking at the picture, thinking. Here was the concrete, visible presentment of something that drew her strongly. She found an atlas, and looked up Cariboo Meadows on the map. It was not to be found, and Hazel judged it to be a purely local name. But the letter told her that she would have to stage it a hundred and sixty-five miles north from Ashcroft, B. C., where the writer would meet her and drive her to the Meadows.

"What a country!" she whispered. "It's wild; really, truly wild; and everything I've ever seen has been tamed and smoothed down, and made eminently respectable and conventional long ago. That's the place. That's where I'm going, and I'm going it blind. I'm not going to tell anyone—not even Kitty—until, like a bear, I've gone over the mountain to see what I can see."

Within an hour of that Miss Hazel Weir had written to accept the terms offered by the Cariboo Meadows school district, and was busily packing her trunk.

CHAPTER IV.

Cariboo Meadows.

A tall man, sunburned, slow-speaking, met Hazel at Soda Creek, the end of her stage journey, introducing himself as Jim Briggs.

"Pretty tiresome trip, ain't it?" he observed. "You'll have a chance to rest decent tonight, and I got a team uh bays that'll yank yuh to the Meadows in four hours 'n' a half. My wife'll be plumb tickled to have yuh. They ain't much more'n half a dozen white women in ten miles uh the Meadows. We keep a boardin' house. Hope you'll like the country."

That was a lengthy speech for Jim Briggs, as Hazel discovered when she rolled out of Soda Creek behind the "team uh bays." His conversation was decidedly monosyllabic. But he could drive, if he was no talker, and his team could travel. By eleven o'clock Hazel found herself at Cariboo Meadows.

China's the Place Boys, Says Expert

"Why don't more young American men come to China, a land of wonderful opportunities—to try their fortunes?" asked Miss Clara Veisbehn, born in Russia and reared in Shanghai, upon her recent arrival at San Francisco. Why not, indeed! But wait, boys, don't crowd to make reservations for the Shanghai boat! Miss Veisbehn is going to keep that smile in the United States for some time while she acquires a college education.

NEW OFFICIALS TO TAKE OFFICE JAN. 7

Baker, republican, and the city's new official, and his council composed of three republicans and two democrats go into office Monday evening, January 7, after the old council and present Mayor Frank L. Myers close up the business for the year. The new mayor and council have already been sworn in. City Clerk Erdman, democrat, succeeds himself, and Treasurer Edward C. Binder will be succeeded by Reed N. Willits. Mayor-elect John W. Baker has announced he will re-appoint the present fire chief, Henry E. Romey, likewise the present city marshal, William K. Gregg. The new city board of health will be composed of Dr. D. S. Linvill, secretary; Dr. O. V. Schuman and Arthur Corse. The retiring city board is Dr. Ben P. Linvill, secretary and Jacob Overdeer and Lester Williams. Mayor-elect Baker will request that all the city police officers and the two men in charge of the fire truck shall wear uniforms.

Fort Wayne Man Brings Suit.

J. V. Banta, real estate dealer of Fort Wayne, who with two friends got into an altercation with his tenant, D. L. Aden and son Lawrence, last summer, east of the city on the Banta farm, and who was prosecuting witness in cases terminating in the fining of the younger Aden, has filed suit in the circuit court against the Adens, through Attorneys Gates & Whitcleather, asking that they be ejected from the farm, which they leased for a period of three years, expiring March 27, 1919. Banta avers in the complaint that he is not getting his half, according to contract, of the produce, and that he has been mulcted out of a certain share. He also claims other agreements in the contract have not been lived up to by the Adens, whose violence he further says he fears, if he attempts to enter his farm. In another action Banta sues the elder Aden for judgment of $600 on a note for $495.80, secured by mortage on chattels which Banta alleges Aden has been selling. In both cases receivers are asked to take charge of affairs, and liquidate, giving the defendant Aden that which is his within hi own right.

R. J. Jontz Dead.

R. J. Jontz, former hardware dealer of this city, and in earlier years a dry goods merchant at Churubusco and Columbia City, who with his daughter Miss Vera left Thanksgiving day for Blythesville, Ark., to visit his brother-in-law, W. W. Hollopeter, died there Thursday afternoon, following a relapse from kidney and heart trouble that he suffered shortly after his arrival. Accompanied by members of the Hollopeter family, his daughter, Vera, and son, Merle of Blythesville, as well as the two daughters, Mesdames Esta Goodrich and A. E. Erdman, who left this city for Arkansas several days ago. The remains of the deceased resident of this city arrived here late Friday evening and were taken to the home to await burial Sunday afternoon in the Masonic cemetery. Mr. Jontz was born near Silver Lake, 68 years ago. During his business career in this city he had amassed a comfortable fortune, and was until recently a heavy stockholder in the Harper Buggy Co. At the time of his death he was stockholder and director of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. The wife of the deceased, formerly Miss Flora Hollopeter, died in 1900, leaving the above mentioned children living. Surviving brothers and sisters are: John, of South Bend; Creel, of Silver Lake; Eugene, address unknown; Mrs. Leffal and Mrs. Reams, of North Manchester, and Mrs. John Sitton, of Silver Lake.

A Memorial to Justin Nelson Study

For Twenty-One Years Superintendent of the Public Schools of Fort Wayne

The resolutions and other expressions herewith appearing were evoked by the death of Prof. Justin Nelson Study, for twenty-one years superintendent of the public schools of Fort Wayne. They have been assembled in this form as a memorial to him and his work in Fort Wayne upon request of many of those who worked under and with him in the cause of public education in this city.

JUSTIN NELSON STUDY.

A Memorial Read at City Superintendents' Section of State Teachers' Association.

Justin Nelson Study, one of the charter members of this Association, died at his home in Fort Wayne at 6:40 o'clock on the afternoon of August 29th, 1917. His death followed a brief illness from heart trouble. For two weeks immediately prior to his death he had been away from his office. For the greater part of that time, however, he had attended to his mail and directed preparations for the opening of school at his home, and on the afternoon of his death, went over the assignment of teachers for the approaching school year, suggested changes and when completed expressed his satisfaction with the arrangement. A few minutes before his death he sent a message to Mr. Cook, a member of the Board, concerning the salaries of teachers.

At the time of his death Mr. Study was in his 72nd year. He was born on a farm in Wayne County, Indiana, February 25th, 1846, and received his early education in the schools of Hagerstown, Indiana. His university work was done in the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. From that institution he received his Bachelor's degree in 1871 and his Master's degree in 1874.

His professional life as a teacher in the Indiana Schools extended through practically a half century. For more than 46 years he served as Superintendent of City Schools in Indiana, being Superintendent at Anderson from 1871 to 1881, at Greencastle from 1881 to 1884, at Richmond from 1884 to 1896 and at Fort Wayne from 1896 until his death. While at Anderson he read law and was admitted to the Madison County Bar, but never engaged in practice.

Less than one month before his death he entered upon his twenty-second year as Superintendent of the Ft. Wayne City Schools and for a like period he had been exofficio a member of the State Board of Education. That he was faithful to every trust is evidenced not alone by common rumor and report but by the statements of those who worked with him and know most of his life and work. From Mr. Cook who for twelve years has been a member of his Board at Fort Wayne, we have the following statement:

"Mr. Study was a man of exceptional qualifications, possessing many traits of character that are seldom included in the requirements that go to make up a successful Superintendent of Schools. He not only possessed the necessary training but was a man of great executive ability. He was at all times diplomatic in his relations with teachers and while he was always firm in his convictions, he had a way of convincing teachers and those under him, that his way of thinking was better than theirs, and when he made an ultimate decision it met with the approval of the teachers collectively and time proved that his judgment was right. While he made no pretensions of being an orator whenever he had anything to say people listened, knowing that he knew what he was talking about and would have something to say that would prove of benefit to them.

Never an aggressive man, he was always watching for the best things that would have a tendency to improve the efficiency of the schools and was ready to adopt any new method and give it a fair trial. He was not a theorist nor a faddist but possessed at all times that sober judgment that brought him the reputation he had attained. Always pleasant and affable, his words of good will brought cheer to many a struggling teacher. His relations with his Board were always pleasant, and those who knew him best never forgot the pleasant and instructive hours spent with him."

Members of the State Board of Education have testified as to his ability and the high value of his work in connection with that work. The welfare of the children of the state was always upon his mind. In him their interests had an ardent advocate.

His standing in the community and as a citizen was ably set forth in the following editorial published in the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette the day following his death:

"The unexpected death of Prof. Justin N. Study, Superintendent of Schools, will impress the majority of the citizens of Fort Wayne as in the nature of a calamity to the community. For more than two decades this great educator has directed the public school system of the city. During the long period he has grown steadily in popularity and in the confidence of school patrons. A man of high educational ideals, possessed of the high constructive talent, impressed by progressive ideas, and gifted with more than ordinary executive capacity, he has impressed his influence indelibly upon the community. It has always been an influence for the good. His reputation has extended over the state and far beyond and his work as a member of the State Board of Education has been of the kind that has made him so valuable to the people of Fort Wayne. There is a story—we forget the author—of the appearance at some function of men of distinction. Most of the men were proud of the part they played, of the position they had attained. One was a great statesman whose name was on the lips of men. Another was a brilliant orator—the idol of the cheering multitude, and another was a scientist who had served mankind.

"And what have you done?" was finally asked of a quiet modest man sitting far back.

"I am a teacher—I taught these men." And the teacher was awarded the place of honor.

For in the final analysis of things no profession is of such vital importance as that of the teacher who molds the minds of the young, inspires them during their impressionable period with the ideals that are to dominate and direct their lives, and prepares men for citizenship.

In this profession none have stood higher in Indiana than Prof. Study. His splendid work goes on—for the harvest from his sowing is not all in. In a personal sense his loss will be deeply felt for he was a man of fine social instincts. He has impressed his personality upon the community and his memory will abide."

In addition to the above it has been our privilege to read resolutions by the Trustees of the School City of Fort Wayne, by the Special Supervisors in the Fort Wayne City Schools, by the Teachers in the Fort Wayne Public Schools, and by the Fort Wayne Principals' Club, all commending his life and his work in the highest terms and voicing their sympathy to his bereaved family and friends.

The home life of Mr. Study was of the highest type. In 1874 he was married to Miss Belle Wiggins of Hagerstown, Indiana. Two of his children, his only son and one daughter, died in infancy. Three daughters and the devoted wife are still living. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. His religion was a matter of daily practice in his relations to his family and to his fellow men. Much of his Christian practice was amid scenes to which the world was not a witness.

He was a thirty-third degree mason. His funeral was held in the beautiful Scottish Rite Cathedral at Fort Wayne. After the funeral his body was taken to Hagerstown and there in the beautiful little cemetery, amid the scenes of his boyhood and youth, he was laid to rest.

It is impossible in this brief way to estimate the influence of such a life or to fittingly express our appreciation of his work. He was a sympathetic co-worker in this association, a professional brother to us all. We can only give expression to our appreciation of a friend that is gone; tender our sincere sympathy to those whom his death has left especially bereaved and add this tribute to his memory.

Resolutions by the Heads of the Various Public School Units of Fort Wayne.

"Whereas, Justin N. Study died suddenly at his residence on Wayne street on Wednesday evening of August the twenty-ninth of this year, nineteen hundred seventeen, the members of the Principals' club, on this their first regular meeting after his decease, desire to adopt and place upon their records the following resolutions:

"Resolved, Inasmuch, as it has pleased our Divine Father, in His wisdom, to remove from our midst, in the height of his powers, Supt. J. N. Study to enter upon the happiness of an immortal existence, it is eminently appropriate that the members of this club pay their tribute of respect to their late distinguished superintendent, who reflected honor upon every association with which he was connected; who has left us a legacy to be cherished with gratitude and pride in the services he rendered to the cause of popular education, by preserving in a permanent form some of the numerous tributes to the memory of our trusty counselor and esteemed friend.

"Resolved, That our school corporation which has been so long blessed by his presence has sustained a loss which is justly regarded as a calamity, and which affects with unspeakable sorrow this entire community in which he had so long lived.

"Resolved, That as members of this club, we regret we are no longer to be assisted in our deliberations by his wisdom and experience in school affairs; by his prompt readiness to serve in all official relations;

"That we record our individual dependence upon him for advice and assistance in every emergency and in all good works.

"That Justin N. Study's highest happiness was in ministering to the welfare of the school.

"That throughout his long and honorable career he regarded the good of the child first.

"That in certain respects Justin N. Study was a very remarkable man;

"On all occasions he was a gentleman;

"At all times he bore himself with a quiet dignity, which was fit and appropriate;

"When smarting under misconstruction of his motives and acts he did not lose his dignity, nor indulge in harsh language;

"His keen sense of humor helped to tide over many a disagreeable situation;

"That in any good cause he was possessed of indefatigable industry and faithfully adhered to principles of justice and honor;

"That his merits as a school man were acknowledged throughout the state;

"That though sometimes called cold in his sympathies, the impression soon corrected itself when one came in direct contact with him, either socially or in the ordinary intercourse of business life;

"That no one ever went to him for kindness, sympathy or counsel and found him either cold or repellant but ready with cordial co-operation;

"That he administered his trusts as a personal duty;

"That he acted on no measure without thorough investigation;

"That he dignified his public station by private virtues;

"That his presence gave a peculiar dignity to our meetings which it will be difficult to replace;

"That it is probable the high-bred and in-bred courtesy we all so much admired may be an explanation of some of the things in his character which have received adverse criticism;

"Resolved, That while we little thought when we lately saw him that Justin N. Study was so soon to fall asleep, we bow in devout submission to the Divine Will and recall with gratitude his distinguished services and regard it as a pleasure and a benefit to cherish the memory of all that was fine, useful, and honorable in his life and character and make it an incentive in our hearts to a like fidelity. He had finished his course; he had lived his three score and ten years and cannot be said to have died prematurely and to us falls the privilege to hold his example in precious remembrance.

"Resolved, That we cordially unite with the Teachers' club in any movement to honor his memory or commemorate his name;

"Resolved, That the secretary of the Principals' club be directed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased and that they be entered upon the records of the club and that every member affix his signature.

JUSTIN NELSON STUDY.

In Memoriam—Adopted by Ft. Wayne Board of School Commissioners. October, 1917.

Justin Nelson Study, for twenty-one years the superintendent of the public schools of Fort Wayne and our esteemed associate in the management of the school system of our city, reached the end of a long, useful and honorable life on the 29th day of August, 1917. We, the undersigned members of the school board, desire the records to show our great appreciation of his services to the people of Fort Wayne and our tribute to his personal and professional character.

Justin Nelson Study was born of American parents of sturdy Christian character with a love for the things that are pure and of good report in this life and among them was their love of education and the Christian church. His early influences, therefore, laid the foundation for that purity of heart and that quickness of mind through which he won and held the respect and esteem of all with whom he ever came in contact. Now that he has left us and we realize the void, we know better than ever the sterling quality of his heart and the giant strength of his mind. We realize more than ever the splendid polish of his intellect and the profound depths of the knowledge his constant study had given him. No day passed without adding something to the wealth of his information. His mental habit was one of order and, therefore, what he knew he could impart,—and therein lay the reason of his success as an educator and a molder of the ideals of the young who came under his influence. It was a pleasure as well as an honor to be associated with him in his high calling.

As representatives of the educational interests of the city of Fort Wayne, we deplore the loss of his services, but it is a matter of profound satisfaction that he was spared to our people for more than a score of years. The city is to be congratulated that the schools had the benefit of his guiding hand so long. We believe it literally true that while he had passed the allotted score, the virile powers of the years which men call the prime of life ripened but did not weaken in him as age crept on. As it takes a beautiful character to grow old gracefully, it is proof of a strong character far beyond the ordinary that one grows old in years without loss of the powers and graces of his prime. Such a man was Justin Nelson Study.

We deeply sympathize with the wife and the daughters in their grievous loss. Their sorrow is profound but throughout life theirs will be the comfort that as husband and father no man ever measured to a higher stature. From whatever viewpoint the mind, heart and life of Justin Nelson Study may be studied, it will be found that he was a Stalwart American gentleman, whose death was a heavy loss to his family, to his city and to his state.

The secretary of the board is instructed to spread this tribute on the records.

A. L. RANDALL, President.
E. W. COOK, Secretary.
W. H. SHAMBAUGH, Treasurer.

IN MEMORIAM.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 15, 1917.

Once again we are reminded that the duration of life on this earth is uncertain and we are called upon to mourn the death of an esteemed and beloved Frater and Sir Knight. The ever living God gives us life and controls our destiny. His will is our guide: His love our support: His protection our faith and His promise our salvation. Let us be true and faithful to all the tenets of Christian Knighthood.

Eminent Sir Justin N. Study received his masonic degrees and orders as follows:

In Webb Lodge No. 24 F. & A. M.
Entered Apprentice March 24, 1886.
Fellow Craft, April 7th, 1886.
Master Mason, April 21st, 1886.
In King Solomon Chapter No. 4 R. A. M.
Mark Master, April 27th, 1888.
Past Master, May 25th, 1888.
Most Excellent Master, May 25 1888.
Royal Arch Mason, June 8th, 1888.
In Richmond Commandery No. 8 K. T.
Red Cross, May 11th, 1891.
Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, June 8th, 1891.
All at Richmond, Indiana.

He served as Master of Webb Lodge No. 24 F. & A. M. during the years of 1891, 1892, 1894, 1895 and 1896.

He was admitted to Fort Wayne Commandery No. 4 K. T. by demit from Richmond Commandery No. 8 K. T. January 15th, 1897, and served in the exalted position of Eminent Commander during the years of 1902 and 1903.

He was again honored by being crowned an honorary member of the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General at Boston, Mass., October 1, 1912.

Thus was he honored by his Masonic Brothers and Sir Knights.

As a civilian, he devoted his entire business life to teaching and public school work. For nearly thirty years he was Superintendent of Public Schools in Fort Wayne and during his administration of that office he gained a lasting reputation for efficient work and was recognized as one of the foremost leaders in his profession.

He was a man of strong character, patriotic and loyal in his service to his Country and the public; devoted to his family as a loving husband and a kind father. He was forceful and persistent in doing right. He was gentle, kind and sympathetic, and those who knew him best loved him most. Let us cherish his memory and imitate his virtues.

He was born in Wayne County February 25th, 1846, and died at Fort Wayne, Indiana, August 29th, 1917.

We wish he could have lived longer, but we humbly submit to the will of Him, who in His divine wisdom ruleth all things.

We extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy.

We recommend that these expressions of respect, love and sympathy be spread upon the records of our Commandery and that a copy be sent to the family of our departed Frater.

SYMPATHY EXTENDED.

Unanimous Expression of the Northern Indiana Superintendents' Club.

November 2nd, 1917.

Mrs. Justin N. Study, Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Dear Mrs. Study: On October 19th, 1917, the Northern Indiana Superintendents' club met at South Bend. One familiar face was missing, one very much respected and beloved member could not, in flesh, answer the roll call. Yet many times during the day he was most kindly remembered and mentioned. All thought of him as present in spirit. Certainly it is a consolation to know that the deeds and thoughts of good men live after them. With you and your children we mourn him as having departed from among us. With you and them we rejoice in the excellence of his deeds, the nobility of his thoughts and the sturdiness of his character.

By unanimous vote of the club, the secretary was directed to extend to you the sincere sympathy of each and all the members. May God's blessings rest upon you and your family.

Sincerely,
EDWIN N. CANINE,
Secretary Pro Tem.

FROM HIGH ASSOCIATES.

Memorial by Indiana State Board of Education of Which Mr. Study Was a Member.

The state board of education has learned of the passing away of its senior member at his home in Fort Wayne, Indiana, on the 29th of August, 1917.

Justin N. Study had been a member of the state board of education for twenty-two years. During this long period of service he missed very few meetings, and this only when incapacitated by illness or prevented by other unavoidable cause. He was prompt, regular, painstaking and conscientious in the performance of every duty devolving upon him as a board member. He was remarkably alert and attentive to every important question that came before the board for consideration and his judgment on all educational and practical subjects was sound and trustworthy.

Professor Study was a man of scholarly attainments, unusual business capacity and rare administrative ability. He was an intelligent, genial, companionable man with whom it was always a pleasure to be associated—a faithful official, a sincere friend and an exemplary citizen.

This board desires to bear testimony to the faithfulness and efficiency of Professor Study as an educator, to his usefulness and value as a member of the state board of education and to his uprightness and exemplary character as a citizen of Indiana and of the country at large.

To his family and friends this board tenders its profoundest sympathy in this hour of their desolation and loss.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by the Teachers of the Public Schools of the City of Fort Wayne.

The following resolutions upon the death of Supt. J. N. Study were passed by the teachers of Fort Wayne:

Whereas, It has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst, our beloved Supt. J. N. Study, our friend, whose personal interest, kindly advice and unfailing fairness have helped us over many a hard place and inspired us with deeper interest and greater efforts for the advancement of the common weal; whose strong influence will still be with us as a potent factor to help us attain the high ideals he ever held before us, and

Whereas, We feel his death is a great calamity to the city of Fort Wayne, as well as an irreparable loss to us, be it

Resolved, That we, the teachers of Fort Wayne, extend our sympathy to the family in this, their great bereavement, which is also our bereavement, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they be printed in the city papers.

Committee,
TEACHERS OF FORT WAYNE.

BY THE SUPERVISORS.

Resolutions Adopted by the Late Superintendent's Assistants in the City Schools.

To Mrs. J. N. Study and Family.

Resolved: In the death of Supt. Study, we, his supervisors, feel the loss of our best school friend.

That his trust and confidence in us blended our views into a unit of that until his desires came to be ours.

His place in our memory cannot and will never be filled, but as his interest and effort in the work of the schools placed these schools, at all times, before any personal consideration he had for himself, so we as a united body feel this same interest in carrying on, so far as is in our power, the work outlined by our revered superintendent.

To you, his family, we express deep sympathy and friendship, and reiterate the words, "He is not dead," and his work, the seed of which is so well sown goes on and on and on.

The supervisors,
WM. MILES.
ALICE E. HALL,
CARRIE A. SNIVELY,
HENRY MEYER,
O. L. ROGERS,
J. J. RITTER,
LOUISE N. WOLF.
GAIL CALMERTON.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by a Committee of the Principals, Supervisors and Teachers of Fort Wayne.

Whereas, it has pleased Divine Providence to remove from our midst our beloved superintendent and fellow-worker, Justin N. Study, a man with great steadfastness of character, strong executive ability, a high sense of justice and whose friendly personal interest endeared him to us all, and

Whereas, no man has done more to bring the school system of Indiana up to its present high standard, and no man stands higher in the educational forces of the state, and whose death is felt as a personal loss and a public calamity.

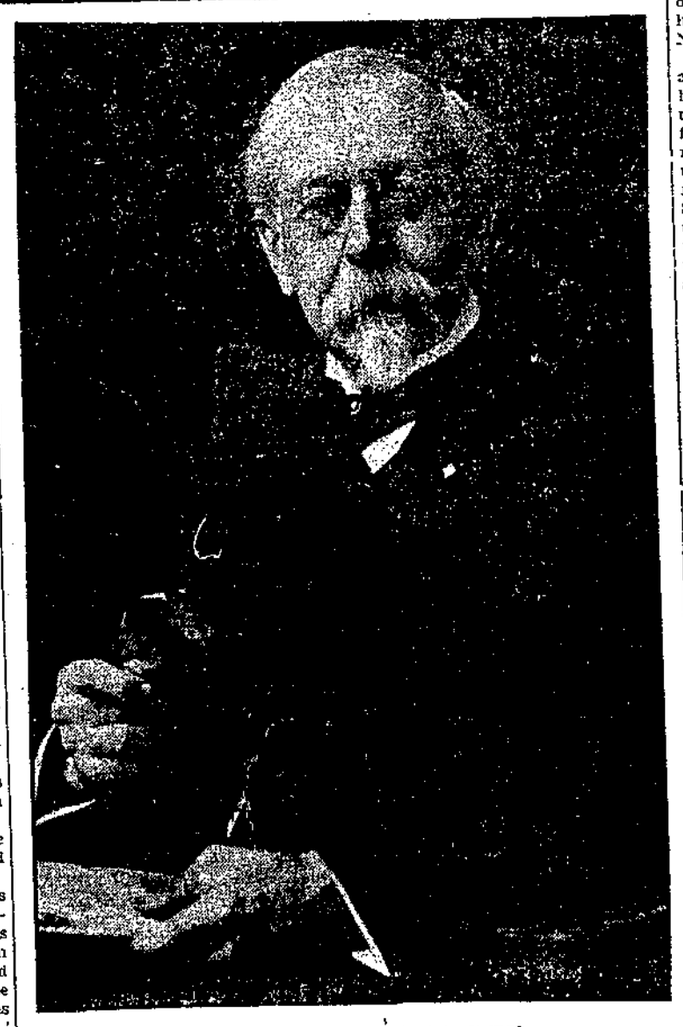

Therefore, be it resolved that we, the teachers of Allen county and the city of Fort Wayne, in the Allen County Teachers' institute, assembled, do extend our sympathy to the wife and family so greatly bereaved and to the community, where his loss will be so keenly felt, and

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and published in the daily papers.

The Committee of Principals, Supervisors and Teachers.

CARRIER PIGEONS SUCCEED WHERE TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH FAIL

When telephone and telegraph communication is cut off at the front the services of the military carrier pigeons is unvaluable. They are being used more in present day warfare, than possibly ever before. With almost every unit is a military motor car home for pigeons, and they always prove of great service.

LODGE NOTES.

KILBOURNE HONORED BY MIZPAH TEMPLE

Shriners Elect Him Potentate—Highest Office in Order.

At the Scottish Rite cathedral, Friday night, Mizpah temple, order of the Mystic Shrine, held its annual election and chose to the office of potentate—the highest within the power of the temple, E. H. Kilbourne. There was a large and representative crowd in attendance, many members being present from out of town, among the number many well known northern Indiana business men.

The following officers were chosen: Potentate, E. H. Kilbourne; chief rabban, Charles Gumpper; assistant rabban, Charles Meigs; high priest and prophet, E. A. Wagner; oriental guide, Walter Seavey; recorder, Charles E. Read; treasurer, George Pixley; trustee for three years, Charles Wilding; auditors, Sam Newell, Wade Bailey and Frank Rouzer.

The following delegates to the imperial council at Atlantic City next summer were named: Messrs. Kilbourne, Gumpper, Meigs and E. H. Merritt.

Postponed Meeting.

The scheduled meeting for inspection of S. W. Stirk circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., which was to have been Friday evening was postponed. A telegram was received late in the afternoon to the effect that Mrs. Dailey, the department president of Indiana, would not be able to reach Fort Wayne from Terre Haute. The postponed date will probably be set for some time in January. The annual installation of officers of Stirk circle will be held Friday evening, January 11. A social hour was spent in the quarters following the executive session Friday night. Refreshments were served. Members of the G. A. R. were present.

Will Distribute Rabbits.

There were distributed to the poor of Fort Wayne Saturday morning more than 150 rabbits. O. E. Mohler, secretary of the associated charities, supervised the work. This is the result of two days' drive by members of the B. P. O. E., which ended Thursday evening. The results of the drive were very satisfactory to all concerned when the unfavorable weather is taken into consideration.

New Year's Watch Party.

The B. P. O. E. will give a dance and watch party for their families and friends at the Elks temple Monday evening. In their announcement they say: "All who would win joy must share it; happiness was born a twin." Music for the occasion will be furnished by Jackson's orchestra and Jazz band from Anderson and the Gaston Bailhe orchestra of this city.

Public Installation.

Our home lodge, No. 881, I. O. O. F. will give a public installation January 4. Preceding this the regular meeting will take place at 7:30 p. m. after which the installation will be carried out. A short program will be rendered after the ceremonies in honor of the sixth anniversary of this lodge. All Odd Fellows and their families are cordially invited. Clarence Miller is the N. G.

W. R. C. MEET FRIDAY.

Mrs. Etta Bickel, the newly elected president of the W. R. C. of Sion S. Bass post, G. A. R., presided over a very enthusiastic meeting at Vordermark hall Friday. Arrangements were completed for the installation ceremonies which will be in conjunction with the veterans of the post which is to be held January 14. The ladies also accepted an invitation to attend the installation ceremonies of Lawton-Wayne post which will be held January 4. Mrs. Sutton, the retiring president, gave may little gifts to members as tokens of appreciation who had been unfailing attendants at the meetings throughout the year.

VALUE OF PUBLICITY.

London, Dec. 15.—(By Mail.)—Publicity given to two successful jewelry robberies about six months ago has resulted in an epidemic of such thefts in London, the police say. Among the latest victims are the Duchess of Marlborough and Lady Chesham. A diamond brooch valued at $5,000 was stolen from the duchess at a recent society bazar, while Lady Chesham lost a diamond ring worth $7,500 at a similar function.

INDOOR TENNIS TOURNEY.

New York, Dec. 29.—National indoor tennis titles were up for decision in the juniors' and boys' classes rede today. As the result of the semi-nals in the annual championship tournaments yesterday Edward M. Hendrickson, of Amherst college, and Harold L. Taylor, of Brooklyn Preparatory school, are the contendors for the junior title and Cecil Donaldson, of Brooklyn, and A. Bassford, III, of this city, for the boys.

AT THE MAJESTIC

Zallah and the "Tempters" at the Majestic Tomorrow.

As the burlesque season rolls on a few of the shows that make their annual visit seem far superior to the others in quality as well as in quantity. One of these is "The Tempters," a production that The Baker & Kahn Amusement company may well feel proud of in every way. The costumes are costly and of pleasing color and designs. The tights and stockings are of pure silk. The twenty-four chorus girls are the pick of New York as Mr. Baker has his office open twelve months in the year and the result is that only the best talent is selected for his four productions on the American burlesque circuit.

The principal fun-makers, Max Fields and Sidney Rogers are a couple of boys that know all the ins and outs of burlesque and guarantee the audience a laugh a minute. The balance of the cast includes such well known burlesquers as Harry Keeler, Eddie Healey, Ruth Everett, Evelyn Claffy and Anna Fink.

The really big feature of the show is Zallah, who is acknowleged to be supreme in her line of entertainment. At each matinee she wears a costume for the benefit of the ladies in the audience that was presented to her by the Shah of Persia several years ago while she was touring the far east. This costume is studied with sapphires and rhinestones and is a masterpiece of the Persian's art.

"The Tempters" and Zallah will be the attraction at the Majestic theatre for one day only, tomorrow, matinee and evening.

MOVIE GIRL.

Rollicking Musical Farce Heads Bill Opening Sunday at Palace.

It looks like a gala bill thats coming to the New Palace for the first four 'days of the week, opening Sunday matinee. For one thing there is the rollicking musical hit, "The Movie Girl," a toppy little girl act with nine people, most of them the type of girls one sees screened on the one dimension stage, when the directors want the "tired business man" to unscramble his mind and pay attention to what's coming off in the world.

Then there's Happy Jack Gardner in the greatest success this versatile comedian ever has had. "In the War Zone," in which Happy Jack is seen at his best. The skit affords him some splendid opportunities for it gives him a chance to do that wild boasting of his physical prowess and bravery at which Gardner is so clever. He is assisted by a Red Cross nurse. Sol Burns as "The Train Announcer" is a bit taken from life in which Burns does the shouting figure so familiar in every railroad station only a few years ago. Marshall Montgomery, the ventriloquist extraordinary assisted by Edna Courtney; Hattie Ritchner, the golden haired violinist and Pipifax and Panlo, comedy acrobats complete this bill.

The program featured by the lovely Albertina Rasch and her dainty ballet of eight sweet girls, closes this evening. Included in this bill in addition to the headline attraction are Creighton, Belmont and Creighton in some brand new nut comedy "The Mudtown Firemen; Page, Hack and Mack, two men and a girl in ten minutes of startling acrobatics; Bissett and Bestry, the singing and dancing duo; the singing novelty spectacle "The Girl in the Moon" and Lucille and Cockie, the singing parrots.

LASTING INFLUENCE OF SUBURBAN DAY EFFORTS

New Year to Open With Prospect of Growth of the Plan.

The merchants who form the Fort Wayne Suburban Day Trade association and who have issued their invitations to the outside people to come to their places of business to take advantage of special attractions during the fall and winter are united in the sentiment that the influence of suburban day is permanent and of untold benefit to both merchant and patron. All that has been accomplished in the formation of closer commercial and friendship bonds between the people of Fort Wayne and their neighbors in other towns and cities, as well as in the farming communities, will exert a strong influence upon the trade of the succeeding months and years. With the opening of the new year, many anticipate a still deeper interest in the plan.

Next Wednesday, January 2, the first suburban shopping day—in fact, the first day of the new year when any shopping can be done at all—inaugurates the 1918 series of midweek special shopping days.

MRS. CLARKE RESIGNS.

Mrs. A. B. Clarke, who came here a few days ago to take the position of superintendent of nurses at Hope hospital, has resignation. She has returned to Indianapolis and expects to leave soon for the east. Mrs. Clarke is a graduate nurse of the Pennsylvania hospital at Philadelphia.

HAS BUSY WEEK.

Jobs were secured for 134 persons during the past week by the free employment bureau in the court. Of this number were 125 men and nine were women.

DECATUR NEWS.

Decatur, Ind., Dec. 29.—Ernest, aged 22, son of Louis Worthmann, of northwest of Preble, caught a hand in a corn shredder at the farm, badly mangling it.

Mrs. M. E. Johnson, of Lagrange, who visited here with relatives, went to Monroe to visit with her nephew, Marion Watkins, who is at home from Camp Shelby.

William Murtaugh and Mary Roop were quietly married at Fort Wayne last Wednesday, but the parents of neither of the couple knew of the wedding until Friday when they read it in the paper. Miss Roop is a daughter of Nathan Roop.

Chauncey Brokaw and Miss Cordula Welland were married yesterday by the Rev. W. Paul Marsh.

The Royal Neighbors elected the following officers: Oracle, Mrs. Claude Burkhead; vice oracle, Mrs. Enoch Eady; past oracle, Mrs. William Roe; chancellor, Mrs. John Christen; recorder, Mrs. Will Biggs; receiver, Mrs. Goldie Closs; marsha, Mrs. Elmer Archer; inner sentinel, Celia Mayer; outer sentinel, Mrs. George Winters; manager, Mrs. Morris Hay; pianist, Mrs. Goldie Closs.

The funeral services for Marcus Jahn will be held Sunday morning at 10:30 from the Zion church at Honduras, instead of St. Luke's, as previously announced.

Dr. and Mrs. Stewart Niblick, Miss Annabell McLuckie, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Gandy, of Churubusco, have returned to their homes after a visit with the C. S. Niblick family.

Mrs. Catherine Brake and daughter, Louise, have returned from a visit in Chicago with Mr. and Mrs. John Brake and Minnie Braun.

Miss Clara Vian has gone to St. Henry, O., for a visit with relatives.

Miss Kate Sether and nephew and niece, Edward and Margaret Vian, are visiting with her sister, Sister Alvera, at Muncie.

Miss Flossie Manley, of Wren, O., went to Fort Wayne, where she is employed. She was accompanied to Fort Wayne by her mother, Mrs. Jeff Manley, who will visit there.

Henry Martz, well known aged man of Pleasant Mills, is quite ill of rheumatism and infirmities of age.

Raymond Kohne, who is at home from Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss., spent last evening in Fort Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Kalver were at Fort Wayne last evening attending the dedication of the Jewish temple. They will attend a dinner to be given Sunday evening.

Miss Mildred Dixon returned to Fort Wayne after a visit with the Arthur Mangold family.

"SUNLIGHT'S LAST RAID"

WITH MARY ANDERSON and ALFRED WHITMAN

Here is a rushing, gripping tale of the Western plains, of bandit battles, hard riding and wild living. The heart story of an Eastern society girl who falls in love with a Westerner, believing him a bandit.

A picture that will grip you to the very end with its realistic life of the Western wilderness.

WEATHER TO GET SOFTER

None of the Balmy Promised, But Relief from Zero Kind Coming.

STINGER HITS A TREMENDOUS AREA

Frost Wave Called an "Anti-Cyclone" is Doing Its Nicest Bit.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COMING WEEK

Washington, Dec. 29.—Weather predictions for the week beginning Sunday, issued by the weather bureau today are:

Ohio Valley—Fair and rising temperature first half of week. Snow about Thursday and again at the end of the week. No decided temperature changes last half of week.

Region of Great Lakes—Moderate Monday and Tuesday. Light snow middle of the week and again at the end of the week. Colder Thursday.

Washington, Dec. 29.—A great thick blanket of intensely cold air, lying sluggishly over the country from the upper Mississippi valley to the seaboard has plunged the whole eastern section of the United States into a cold snap from which the weather bureau sees no immediate relief. While record low temperatures may be shown in some places the cold generally does not equal that of the mid-December snap, but it is non the less effective as an agent of distress and suffering in many localities where there are coal shortages, intensified by the increased difficulties of transportation and communication.

In the language of the weather sharps an "anti-cyclone" is responsible for the change. This is nothing less than an extraordinarily high barometer, touching this morning as high as 31 inches, something seldom seen in winter weather. This condition prevailing over a great territory, means that an area of high atmospheric pressure, impregnated with cold, has suddenly settled down over the eastern section and by its superior weight and force had crowded out the low pressure which contained all the warmer air. Around the edges of the high pressure area there are rain and snow, but the whole great mass has settled so sluggishly, and gives so little disposition to move on and give place to warmer airs that the weather bureau warns the country it may not expect relief for three or four days at least.

RELIEF IN SIGHT.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Relief from the cold wave gripping the middle western states will come tonight or tomorrow, according to a bulletin of the weather bureau today. Although the temperature was at zero this morning, official reports told of 30 degrees below at Duluth. At Prince Edward, Sask., 40 below was registered.

BIG PACKERS CONTROL IN HIDES AND LEATHER

Boston, Dec. 29.—Control by the packers of the hide and leather industry, as well as the rendering business with its many branches, was indicated by the evidence elicited by the federal trade commission which closed for the time being its local inquiry into the country's meat industry today. As J. E. Maloney, of the Brighton Dressed Meat company, told of his selling hides to the American Hide and Leather company, Francis J. Heney, the commission's special counsel, asked if he was aware that there was a Swift concern.

The rendering company which took the waste of Mr. Maloney's company and the property owners he paid rent to, Mr. Heney said, were directly or indirectly in control of the Swifts. He said he did not know this.

Wm. McDonald, formerly an independent renderer in this city, who lost his health and property trying to meet his financial obligations, told of his experience. In adjourning the sessions to enable the commission to return to Washington this afternoon, Mr. Heney said the surface had only been scratched in New England and that he planned to return soon to finish the investigation.

COAL CONSERVATION.

Traction Company May Use Less Heat in Cars and Stations.

Fort Wayne's city street cars may soon be without heat if coal conservation plans formed at a conference of electric railway men with State Fuel Administrator Woollen and attended by S. W. Greenland, of the local traction company, at Indianapolis yesterday are put into effect. The propositions of not heating cars, stations, reducing the number or lights in cars and waiting rooms, and the consolidation of power houses were discussed and passed on favorably by the traction men. The plans will not be put into effect, however, until State Administrator Woollen deems such conservation necessary, and instructs the traction men to do so.

MILITARY NEWS

Brother of Mrs. Rosa Crist is Now at Fort Oglethrope, Ga.

Robert F. Frederick, brother of Mrs. Rosa Crist, 1216 Schilling avenue, wearing the chevrons of a sergeant at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., has written the following letter to his sister here. He is also a brother of William Frederick, foreman at the Fort Wayne Corrugated Paper company:

Chickamauga, Dec. 22, 1917.

Dearest Rosa:

I received your letter day before yesterday and your box last night, and I can't express my thanks. That cake was delicious, and those other things sure come in handy.

Rosa, you say we will have lots of music or noise if I ever get to visit you people, but if it is up to me I am afraid it will be more noise than music. Ha, ha!

Gee, Rosa, since I came here I have seen more snow than I have seen for three years; we have about four inches snowfall on the ground now and by the looks of things we will have more before tomorrow. I heard the other day that they had a blizzard in Hoboken; that is some lookout for us boys who are going there, isn't it? We are waiting for a telegram from there now; when we get it we will leave forty-eight hours afterwards. The biggest share of our ordnance has been shipped over to Europe now, so I guess it won't be long before we start. Yet I wouldn't care if we didn't go until next spring now.

Rosa, have you read what the Sixth field artillery is doing to the Germans? I read where they had a battle with the Germans and came out the winner with but small loss. That is the regiment Leo is in. Mother got a letter from him the other day saying he was all right and that is about all he did say.

Well, Rosa dear, about all I can do this year is to wish you a very merry Christmas and lots more of them, and the same to Mr. Crist.

Well, I must close. With love and best wishes, from your loving brother,

BOB.

DR. GILPIN ENJOYING LIFE IN THE ARMY

Word has been received from Dr. Gilpin to the effect that he has been transferred to the 316th Engineering regiment stationed at Camp Lewis, Washington. Dr. Gilpin expresses himself extremely well pleased with army life and is anxious for duty in France.

ARRIVES IN FRANCE.

Columbia City, Ind., Dec. 29.—Ensign Ralph Gates, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Gates, of this city, and assistant paymaster in the United States navy, has arrived in France and cabled his parents: "Arrived; Merry Christmas. Gates." He and Ensigns Barnes and Phillips have been sent there to explain government insurance to the United States soldiers an dsailors. On the same boat, the British fast mail steamer "Adriatic," Ensign Gates met Privates Ralph Weston and Ernest Erne, of this city, and Private Virgil Morgan, of Logansport, also formerly of this city. They are with the United States artillery.

Plymouth Co. Has 78 Men.

Major John E. Miller mustered in a company of Indiana State Militia at Plymouth last night, which has seventy-eight men and is one of the best appearing new companies it has been the good fortune of Major Miller to muster in this winter. So he said this morning. The new company has not fully decided upon a captain, the vote last night being a tie. The matter will be settled Sunday, possibly by appointment if the boys fail to vote one in.

RALPH BROWER IMPROVING.

Ralph Brower, the Fort Wayne boy who was injured while in training in an aviation camp in Texas, has been brought to Fort Wayne and is slowly recovering from his injuries. Brower sustained his injuries by falling from a truck and alighting on his head. The fall caused a temporary blindness and deafness but the young soldier is rapidly recovering from the ill effects.

SHORT COURSE.

Farmers' School at Monroeville Feb. 19 to 22 Inclusive.

At a meeting last night final arrangements were made for the Purdue farmers' short course to be held at Monroeville, Feb. 19 to 22 inclusive. Tom Sheehan, general chairman and Dr. Kaufman, publicity chairman have already started an extensive advertising campaign.

Purdue university will send eight speakers and a carload of live stock to the short course. It will be a duplicate of the school held at Harlan last winter. It is the first time in years that Allen county has had a short course twice in one year.

Missionary Meeting.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Wayne Street M. E. church will meet with Miss Katherine Jay, 328 West Jefferson street, on Thursday January 4, at 2 o'clock. All members and friends are invited. Miss Jay will be the leader.

EVERYTHING READY FOR NEW OFFICIALS

City Hall Have Cleared All Standing Business and Are Ready to Leave.

City hall employes whose places will be taken by newly appointed men are prepared to leave on a moment's notice. The board of works has completed its work and its members are ready to retire. Mayor Hosey and R. Kelly will rest upon their laurels while Frank Singrey will spend the next year in travels through the south.

Fred Hilgeman is as yet undecided, but it is probable that he will resume his duties as contractor and builder. Clerk Gus Boerger will confine his efforts to real estate and life insurance while Deputy Clerk L. Schwartz is as yet undecided as to what work to pursue in the future. Comptroller W. C. Baade will resume his duties in the Baade book store.

BEYERLE DISCHARGED FROM POLICE FORCE

Board of Safety Takes Action on Boseker-Beyerle Fight Firday Evening.

The board of safety at Friday evening's session discharged Harry G. Beyerle from the police department because of his attack upon Officer W. C. Boseker. Eight witnesses were called and all evidence indicated that Boseker did not incite the trouble nor did he at any time strike Beyerle during the melee. Beyerle's black eye was due to striking against the foot rail as he fell to the floor. The discharged officer has been on the police force for twelve years, and he is at the present a member of the board of trustees of the pension fund.

Officers Boseker will be returned on duty on January 1, the lay off being necessary to enable him to fully recover from his injuries. The two men seemed to be on the best of terms Friday evening.

NAME NEW FIREMEN.

Board of Safety Appoints New Engine House Force.

The board of safety has completed plans for opening the new fire engine house on Winter street on January 1. It is expected that all new equipment will be ready for service at that time. Fred Tieman will be captain. He has been in the service of the department since 1896 and has proven himself to be highly capable. Howard Garmen is named lieutenant. He is stationed at No. 4 engine house at the present time, and has been with the department for ten years. The other men will be taken from the various stations and placed at the new house. The following men will be placed in the department: William D. Stine, M. Laughlin, W. H. Hyatt, G. W. Hankey and C. J. Helser.

Singrey on Trip.

F. E. Singrey will celebrate his release from his duties as a member of the board of works by spending the remainder of the winter in Florida, Cuba and other points. Mrs. Singrey will accompany him.

GERMAN SOCIETIES WILL GIVE BENEFIT

Concordia, Saxonia, Kries Stolzenau to Give Affair At Turner Hall.

Under the auspices of the American Defense league, three German singing societies are planning an entertainment to be given at the Turner hall on January 31. The societies are the Concordia, Saxonia and the Kreis Stolzenau. The program will be an extensive and interesting one, and the proceeds will be donated to the American Red Cross.

Earl Thompson will give his services for several solos as will Prof. Koeppel. The Kuckkuck orchestra has signified its willingness to donate its services for the evening. Paul Richter has been appointed chairman of the affair while Henry Meyer will officiate as secretary.

NO REVISION OF COKE RATES FOR COMING YEAR

Washington, Dec. 29. —There will be no general revision of coke prices for the year 1918, Fuel Administrator Garfield today issued an order continuing in force the prices fixed last September.

In some outlying districts with comparatively small tonnage of coke production costs are unusually high and where a showing is made as to the importance of the production, exceptions from the standard of prices may be allowed to avoid shutting down the ovens.

MEET WEDNESDAY.

District Board to Consider Claims Under New Regulations.

Dr. Miles F. Porter, chairman of the second Indiana district conscription appeal board, has notified the members of the board to meet in his office next Wednesday. From then on the board will sit in continual session to consider claims for exemption on industrial grounds under the new regulations and appeals from the classification of the local boards. Hundreds of questionnaires have already been filed with the district board.

CONSUMERS COMPLAIN OF EXORBITANT PRICES

Commissioner Haffner Asked to Come to the Rescue —Grocers Blamed.

In the past few days County Food Commissioner George M. Haffner has been deluged with complaints from consumers regarding the excessive prices being charged by grocerymen for canned goods. In mentioning the fact to The Sentinel Mr. Haffner stated that cognizance would necessarily be taken and an investigation made in a very short time. In cases of flagrant infringement of the law, those grocers who are doing over $100,000 of business a year stand in danger of having their license revoked.

By December 31 it will be possible for grocers coming under the ban to show by invoices what they are charging and whether the price is excessive or not. They can remark their prices and if the profits are not excessive that will end the matter. But where it is known after an investigation has been made that prices on the different kinds of canned goods are too high priced, the matter will be immediately given to the state food controller.

It must be understood, and the sooner the better, that the government, state and county food controllers will not tolerate excessive prices on food commodities.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Will Attend Services at Christ Lutheran Church Sunday Morning.

Fort Wayne Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, have accepted a very courteous invitation from Rev. H. C. Hadley to attend divine services in honor of St. John's day at Christ Lutheran church, Jefferson and Webster streets, Sunday morning, Dec. 30, at 10:45 o'clock. The members of the commandery will meet, fully armed and equipped, at the asylum at 9:45 sharp.

It has been the custom of the local commandery to attend in a body the services of some church every Easter and the Sunday nearest St. John's day. The latter date falling on the 27th of December, the invitation of Rev. Hadley was accepted.

This is the firs ttime that any of the Fort Wayne Masonic bodies has been invited to attend divine services in a Lutheran church.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT.

The resignation of Mrs. A. B. Clark of Indianapolis, as superintendent of the nurses at Hope hospital has been accepted and she has been succeeded by Miss Sholta also of Indianapolis. COMMISSIONERS AND SURVEYORS IN TILT

Notice is Served That Bridge Superintendent Must Work by the Day.

The county commissioners and Surveyor A. W. Grosvenor cannot agree, the bone of contention being over the bridge superintendent. Saturday Surveyor Grosvenor served notice that hereafter Bridge Superintendent Bell must work by the day, instead of on a straight monthly salary of $100. He says he has the authority in such matters. The commissioners are investigating to ascertain just where the authority lays.

Since assuming of the office of surveyor, the commissioners claim that Grosvenor, who is an expert in bridge building as wel las in surveying, has been doing much of the work that heretofore has been done by the bridge superintendent and has charged accordingly. At the same time the bridge superintendent has also been receiving his monthly salary.

State Commissioners Here.

L. H. Wright, chairman, and R. F. Lee ,engineer, members of the state highway commission, who are making a tour of this section of the state, marking highways and locating roads for the government, capable of withstanding the rigors of heavy hauling, were here Friday in consultation with the county commissioners.

SPORTS

First Half a Thriller, After That Alumni Was Simply Outclassed.

There was no use in trying; it simply couldn't be done; the Varsity team, like the father who forgot to teach his boy a particular trick in boxing, stood pat and won. The game at Library hall Friday night drew out an audience which about filled that edifice. The game was between the Catholic Varsity and the Alumni. The latter squad had suffered defeat in a previous game, and it was up to them to get sweet revenge. And they played hard and in spots so furious that Referee Jules Doriot was forced to penalize such tactics.

The first half of the game would have suited the most critical. It was a thriller. It was one of those nip-and-tuck affairs in which both sides played to an equal advantage. It might have been that the Varsity was trying to feel out their antagonists; fiddling for an opening as the term is used in boxing, because in the latter part of the game they drew away seemingly, at will. The first half ended in 4 all.

It was the final period and the tactics of the Varsity that put a quietus on the hopes of the Alumni. It was at this period of the game that Referee Doriot was forced to penalize rough playing. It started with a rush at the very start with both sides fighting for every advantage. It was the middle of this half that the youngsters began piling up baskets. They were as plentiful as eggs in May. Suelzer had been slightly hurt and was taken out and Logan sent to center. This was the keynote for the slaughter and the final score resulted 27 to 6.

There was plenty of basketball in the preliminary game between the Fords and D. L. L. K's. It was a warm scrimmage all through. Redding and Koehl starred in this contest. The result was a 11 to 8 victory for the Fords.

The line-up and summary for the main event was:

C. C. H. S., 27.		Alumni, 6.
Logan
Hergenroether	L. F.	Reuss
Doriot	R. F.	Gordon
Suelzer-Logan	C.	Kinder
Bushman	L. G.	Centlivre
McLaughlin	R. G.	Clifford

Summary—Field goals—Logan, 4; Hergenroether, 3; Doriot, 2; Suelzer, Reuss, Gordon, Kinder. Foul goals—Logan, 2; Hergenroether.

WAYNES BRING BACK SCALPS FROM HARLAN

Local Basket Ball Team Get Twice as Many Baskets as Independents.

The Wayne Athletic team journeyed to Harlan Friday night; played a game of basket ball with the Independents, the champions of Springfield township, and beat them so bad that the individual members of the Harlan team won't be able to sleep for a week. It was a terrible slaughter. It was the team work and the accurate shooting of the Wayne athletes that told so prominently against the Independents.

The township boys started well, in fact they had determined to rush things and get it over with just as quick as they possibly could, and at the very first they started by caging a pair from the floor. Then that boy Diffonderfer stepped in and Platt, a guard mighty hard to beat, asserted himself and Harlan found It was a hard fought first half and at the end the score stood equal, 12-12.

This much of the game succeeded in warming up the Wayne team and almost at the beginning of the second half they started things. They didn't stop scoring until the end when they had piled up enough baskets to multiply by two the total score of the Independents.

The story would not be complete without special mention of Hamilton who succeeded in shooting nine goals from the field and Forker, both of the W. A. C., who was a close second with seven. Hudson of the Independents distinguished himself through his good work for the Independents. The line-up and summary:

W. A. C., 42.		Harlan, 21.
D. Hamilton	F.	Hudson
Forker-Koplinger	F.	Lampe
B. Hamilton	C.	Jump
Diffenderfer	G.	Scoby
Platt	G.	Gession

Summary—Field goals—Hamilton, 9; Forker, 7; B. Hamilton, 6; Fry, Hudson, 5; Lampé, 2; Scoby, 2.

RIFLE CLUB QUITS.

The tournaments which were arranged by the Fort Wayne Rifle and Revolver club have been discontinued for an indefinite time. The reason is that the General Electric company is remodeling the indoor range where these meets were formerly held. It is xpected that it will take at least three weeks to complete the job, after which the club will continue holding these tournaments.

A CHALLENGE.

The Wayne Street M. E. Basket Ball team is out with a challenge to play any team in the city whose weight does not exceed 135 pounds. This team seems to pick particularly the Ford's, Herald's or Trinity Juniors. Phone 2376 red, between 6 and 7 o'clock any night and ask for the manager.

W. A. C. CHALLENGE.

The Wayne Athletic Basket Ball club which has a number of open dates are desirous of arranging games with the best teams of Fort Wayne and vicinity. Write Herschel Platt, 1327 Huestis street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ODDS AND ENDS

Weeghman and That $250,000 Check.

From the best reports to be gained there is $190,000 left of that Weeghman check to strengthen the Cubs—$60,000 he expended for Alexander and Killifer—and there has been a procession following the president of the Chicago Cubs ever since he flashed it as long as a sweet girl's dream. The latest devotee—to the $190,000 is no less a personage than Ban Johnson, president of the American league. What need Ban has for money is not understood; but he is there and undoubtedly with a purpose. Wonder if he wents to sell the American league to Weeghman? Every sporting writer in Chicago is up in the air about the deal. Weeghman has been trying to get Johnson to lunch with him and Johnson has been trying to do the same thing with Weeghman, and still there has been block after block seperating them. It is known that there are a good many things to be settled in the matter of claims of the deposed moguls of the defunct Federal league. Baltimore is suing for a claim of some $600,000. Weeghman go from under the avalanche when that base ball organization began to ski, and it may be that Ban feels the pangs of remorse and would suggest to Weeghman to let go part of that remaining—$190,000—as salve to wounded base ball aspirations.

Hoblitzell a Game And Patriotic Fellow.

Dick Hoblitzell is flat on his back in a Cincinnati hospital and must lie practically still for three weeks. He went through a very severe surgical operation a few days ago, so that he may be fitted to enter the army. That is surely true patriotism. He was easily exempt because of his affliction, due to a base ball injury. He heard his country's call and he felt that he could not face his fellow man unless he responded to the call and so he is going. There are many of the base ball stars which have answered the appeal of Uncle Sam, but there is no case where true patriotism was better exemplified than in the case of Hoblitzell.

McGill Withdraws His Options.

News comes from Indianapolis that J. C. McGill had withdrawn the option he had given on his American association club and also the option he had put on his Manager Jack Hendricks' contract, and that he has decided not to sell. He sends word that he will return soon from Los Angeles and will begin plans with Hendricks for another season as a magnate in the American association. Another angle to the report is that the efforts to form a syndicate to buy out McGill failed, in spite of the fact that President Tom Hickey put in a week working on the job.

Jeffries Is Sure Jockeying.

All hail to the king of all pugilists, Willard, and hail while hailing is good. In a year from today it is expected that he will have passed ingloriously from the limelight leaving behind him the worst ring record in the history of boxing. There is no doubt about it, Willard has no stomach for boxing. Two years ago last April he knocked out Jack Johnson in the twenty-sixth round. Since then he has fought one lone fight, with Frank Moran at New York, March 25, 1916. Willard has used his championship for the sole purpose of making money. All right, we wont blame him for that. But when he absolutely refuses to defend his title against all comers he does not deserve the support of the public. If Johnson had followed such tactics Willard would never have been champion. To make matters worse now comes the champion prattling like a silly schoolboy, with the offer if he is allowed to conduct all business affairs he will fight any aspirant to championship honors ten rounds to no decision, and the entire receipts to be turned over to the Red Cross. What champion in all history of the prize ring ever made such a ridiculous offer? The most prominent fighter of all the heavies, Fred Fulton, claims to have beaten Jess Willard in a fourteen-round exhibition bout at Rochester, Minn., on March 14, 1916, just prior to the big battle in Havana. Willard has never denied the statement, but Fulton's story seems true when it is considered that Willard flatly refuses to fight longer than ten rounds and then a no-decision bout. All that Willard did say regarding the bout was: "Well, if Fred thinks that way about it, let him go ahead." It is certain that Willard would never have consented to meet Fulton at all if the Minnesota boy had not so relentlessly pursued the champion. Fulton stands in the forefront of all the heavies. Fred has $1,000 forfeit up which Willard has never covered. The time expired December 20, 1917. On that date he declared that he would claim the world's championship and defend it against all comers. Willard never paid the slightest attention to this and was with his circus down in Florida, where he had some kind of a contract with the government. He even allowed it to be said that under such conditions he was a man "working for the government in war time." The stings of criticism had no effect. He continued to bask in the warm sun of Florida, and then won a majority of the sporting writers began lambasting him he rushes to Chicago and sends forth his ridiculous challenge. Such tactics won't do for a champion. Come clean, Willard.

GIRL TEAM TO ROLL AGAINST PENNSY FIVE

There is a team of ten pin rollers composed all of girls at the Edison Lamp works. They have proved so adept that the belief is paramount that they are as expert as any team of mere men. They are going to try to defeat the Pennsy copper shop five Sunday evening. The young ladies have been in constant practice for some time and rumor has it that they can shoot as straight as anyone. They have been piling up high scores in practice games.

LIMAN ROBERTSON DIES IN NEW YORK

Former Resident of Antwerp, Ohio, Passes Away at Syracuse.

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Antwerp, O., Dec. 29.—A letter to Samuel Sunday, of this place, from Mrs. Ivah H. Wilcox, at Syracuse, N. Y., announces the death of a former townsman, Lyman Robertson, at that place Saturday, Dec. 1. He was 78 years of age. Lime, as he was familiarly called here, where he spent quite a large part of his life, was well known by almost everyone, and everybody enjoyed his acquaintance as he was jovial and a true friend. He for many years was a stave cutter for the Hub & Spoke Co. and after that institution quit business he went into the cabinet business in a shop on East River street. Ill health and a discontented mind caused him to dispose of the shop, and he went to Syracuse, N. Y., where he had made his home, Mrs. Wilcox being his daughter, and who will be remembered by Antwerp folks. He had other relatives also living there, and had their loving care during his last illness, which was of short duration. Cause of death was Bright's disease.

Antwerp Brief Notes.

Mrs. Albert Lindemuth and daughter, Mrs. R. J. Coats, were visitors at New Haven Thursday, where they spent the day as the guests of Miss Emma Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Armstrong, of Fort Wayne, were the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Zuber and Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Armstrong and families, the forepart of the week.

Harry Busby, of Lima, O., visited here the first of the week with his father, Geo. W. Busby, and wife.

Mrs. Pearl Cotterell and son, Ralph, went to Fort Wayne Thursday, where they will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Ritche, and family for a few days.

Elmer Bruner, who is employed in a paper mill at Kalamazoo, Mich., was a visitor at this place over Christmas, the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bruner, southwest of town.

Several from this locality have drawn a seat on the grand and petit juries the coming term of common pleas court, among those so fortunate as to be chosen being Harry Snook, Peter Schmunk, jr., and Grant Winans, who will be on the grand jury, while George W. Murphy and A. J. Sch[illegible], will have to be contented with a seat on the petit jury.

Miss Frankie Cramer, of Paulding, after an absence of three years, is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Cramer. Miss Cramer has enjoyed a successful career during this time in vaudeville, having just closed a prolonged engagement with Eugene Vial's Melodoy Maids at New York city, the company also having made a very successful tour of eastern cities. On January 6 she will go to Columbus, where she will join the Helen Gould-Wallack Co.

North G. Sunday, contractor, is building a barn on his premises on West Daggett street in which to store his machinery used in contract work.

The friends of Miss Eva Perkins, who formerly resided here, will be surprised to know she was married at Adrian, Mich., Monday, the lucky man of her choice being Lee Knight, of Addison, Mich., to which place they went for a visit with his parents, after which they will make their home at Adrian.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX OFFICER AT ALBION

One Will be Sent There to Assist Taxpayers of Noble County.

[Special to The Sentinel.]

Albion, Ind., Dec. 29—Collector of internal revenue, Peter J. Kruger, announces that a federal income tax officer will visit Noble county during January with an office in the postoffice building at Albion where he will assist all those subject to income tax, complete their returns without remuneration for his services. Married persons living with wife or husband who have net incomes of $2,000 or over and unmarried with incomes of $1,000 or over will be caught in the meshes of whom the collector places at 800 in the county. These returns must be made before March 1, 1918, and because many don't fully understand the law the officer will assist in properly filling out the forms. A penalty of from $20 to $1,000 and jail sentence will be imposed upon those who fail to report to the government. The wise will act accordingly.

Albion Short Items.

PENNSY SHOP FOREMEN'S TRIBUTE TO REPORTER

Present Shafe Melsheimer With Magnificent Alaskan Sealskin Cap.

(Written by A. L. Moeller.)

As a token of their esteem and affection upon the eve of his retirement from active service as industrial reporter for The Sentinel, the general foremen of the Pennsylvania shops this morning presented S. D. ("Shafe"). Melsheimer with a beautiful sealskin cap, the presentation speech being made by M. W. Kemp, foreman of the east car shops.

Mr. Melsheimer was called to the office of Master Mechanic E. E. Griest this morning by the message that there was a story awaiting him. Upon his arrival he found all of the general foremen assembled in Mr. Griest's office, and was informed by that gentleman that Mr. Kemp would tell him the story which had been prepared.

In his address Mr. Kemp paid many beautiful tributes to the faithfulness, kindliness and justice of the veteran newspaper man, who has been visiting the railroad men since the late eighties. That Mr. Melsheimer holds the esteem and affection of every man whom he has come in contact with was shown in Mr. Kemp's talk.

With tears in his eyes Mr. Melsheimer arose to reply to this tribute, the gift being evidently absolutely unexpected. With a few simple words he expressed his appreciation of the present, and the feeling toward him, and stated that the esteem was heartily reciprocated. After hearty handclasps and repeated invitations to return to the shops at least for a visit, Mr. Melsheimer was permitted to leave with his toque, but not until a fitting proved that the cap was of the right size.

The men who had a part in the gift and who were present at the exercises were: Master Mechanic E. E. Griest, who introduced the speaker; Assistant Master Mechanic Walter G. Hamilton, Chief Clerk F. S. Doriot, General Car Shop Foreman H. U. Diem; Chief Shop Clerk J. H. Hobrock, Division Storekeeper J. B. Fowler, General Foreman B. F. Sarver, of the boiler department; General Foreman John T. Leach, of the erecting shop; General Foreman F. A. Opatz, of the blacksmith shop; General Foreman M. W. Kemp, of the old car shops; General Foreman G. E. Graham, of the paint department; General Foreman E. B. Hughes, of the roundhouse; General Foreman W. B. Madara, of the machine shop; General Foreman Daniel Petgen, of the tin and pipe department, and others.

NOT MAKING WAR MUNITIONS AT G. E.

F. S. Hunting Makes Statement to That Effect, Disappointing Job Seekers.

General Manager F. S. Hunting, of the Fort Wayne works of the General Electric company, this morning issued a statement to the effect that the local plant, contrary to general belief, is not making munitions of war. Hundreds of munition workers from various cities throughout this state and other states have made application at the local plant for jobs, believing that the company was employing men for this work.

The applicants for places at the local plant have flocked in from Muncie, Anderson and other small cities near here, led here by the report that munition workers might gain good places at the great factory. All of these men have been turned away disappointed. Many other men from the east and from other factories have either written or applied in person, and the office force has been kept busy writing replies to these people.

All work now being done by the local plant is along its regular line of electrical manufacture. Absolutely no shells or appliances for shells or parts of guns are being turned out at the Fort Wayne works.

PAINTERS ELECT OFFICERS.

Complete the Roster After Dividing Election in Two.

A month ago the Painters' union held a part of its election and at a meeting Wednesday night completed the work, the term of office of the newly elected ones extending from January 1 to June 30. The officers elected at the first meeting were: W. Flickenger, president; F. H. Marlatt, vice president; C. O. Harris and C. Gerber, trustees, and E. T. Drew, business agent. Those elected at the meeting this week were: George Bopp, recording secretary; W. C. Hollomon, financial secretary; H. Volmerding, treasurer; E. E. Kirchner, trustee, for eighteen months; E. T. Drew, S. W. Burgoon, George Deck, William Ramer and A. A. Thomas; delegates to the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor.

EACH HAD A FINGER INJURED.

H. D. Geise, a car builder at the Pennsylvania east shops, had a wrist sprained this morning. He was removing a side plate and when he pulled it upon the scaffold on which he was standing, the scaffold board broke, allowing him to fall to the ground with the side plate. Fortunately no bones were broken. Another victim was R. E. Neireiter, a machinist's helper in the erecting shop, and he was engaged in removing a spring hanger when it fell upon his hand, crushing one of his fingers. He will be unable to work for some time.

REVIEWED PAST, PLANNED FOR THE FUTURE

Small Motor Foremen and Employes at G. E. Mix Pleasure and Business.

Fifty-seven men from the small motor department of the General Electric works, including the foremen, assistant foremen and the operators enjoyed a banquet at the Hof Brau last night, which was a brilliant social success and of benefit in an educational way to all present. The menu was seasonable, including turkey, fish and various kinds of meats, vegetables and fruits. S. E. Uncapher, foreman of the fractional horse power department, was the toastmaster and in a masterly way called upon various participants at the banquet for speeches. Among the replies were speeches from A. A. Kaiser, superintendent of section A; H. L. Maden, chief inspector of the small motor department; O. A. Ramsey, foreman of the special machine department; Frank Brown, inspector of the small motor assembling department and others. Mr. Brown represented Foreman G. A. Obenchain who is confined to his home by injury sustained in an automobile accident. Mr. Kaiser reviewed the past year in the shop and suggested some changes in work methods which those who heard him recognized as good ideas and determinad to put them in practice. Prof. Fred LaDelle, of the department, who is a slight of hand performer of experience and exceptionable attainments, gave exhibitions which pleased and mystified the audience, and Joseph Waike, a member of the G. E. band, sang several selections. This was the third annual gathering of its kind, each excelling in every feature its predecessor.

TRAINS DELAYED BY SNOW.

Pennsylvania Traffic From Chicago Tied up by Great Drifts.

Drifts of snow from eight to ten feet deep on the tracks along the lake shore a few miles east of Chicago, are holding up passenger and freight traffic from Chicago on the Pennsylvania lines today. At Chicago snow is nearly three feet deep on the level, and has drifted in some places to the depth of ten feet.

Train No. 138 due in this city about 3 o'clock this morning, had not yet been able to leave Chicago at noon today. The traffic is being held up by a freight train which became snowed in last night and normal schedule will not be resumed until the obstruction is cleared.

RANGE CLOSED TEN DAYS.

Improvements at G. E. Works Puts Stop to Target Practice.

The Fort Wayne Rifle and Revolver club will not have any more contests for ten days at least. The indoor range in the warehouse building basement is undergoing a change and has been closed until the improvements are completed. The south wall has been taken out and connection made with the basement of the addition to the big building now nearing completion.

TEMPORARILY TRANSFERRED.

Foreman Jacob Trautman, of the small meter department of the General Electric works, has temporarily transferred several of his men to the stock department to assist in taking the inventory. R. J. Scott is the clerk and those transferred from assemblers to the stock room are C. C. Baker, Thomas Cole, Philip May, Floyd Herrick, Otis Brewer, John Thomas and Frank Graffe.

Y. M. C. A. COLLECTION GOOD.

General Secretary E. W. Peirce, of the Y. M. C. A., said this morning that 50 per cent of the Y. M. C. A. war fund had already been paid in and that the payments for the January and the April installment would be promptly met. The amount subscribed in Allen county is between $48,000 and $49,000.

SHOPMAN HAS HAND HURT.

While at work in the east car shops of the Pennsylvania yesterday, J. J. Gronau had the third finger of his right hand bruised painfully and had to call upon the company's surgeon for treatment of the wounded digit. The accident was caused by a piece of metal falling upon his hand.

E. D. Ehrhart, chief lumber inspector for the Pennsy lines west of Pittsburg, has returned from Effingham, Ill., where he spent several days on company business.

Chief Tie Inspector A. Roth, of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, who has been at St. Louis for a few days in the interests of the company, has returned to his office here.

P. A. Meyer, who is engaged in inspecting construction work for the Pennsylvania, is here to spend the holiday with his family. He called at the local shops this morning to see the "boys."

BATTLE IN DARK WAS MAINLY A MISTAKE

Army Officer and Police in Pistol Combat, Soldier Getting Hurt.

El Paso, Texas, Dec. 29.—Captain Wylie J. White, of an artillery regiment; Lieut. St. Clair, deputy provost marshal, and Edward Mebus, a city detective, were seriously wounded last night in a three handed pistol fight at the home of Captain White, near Fort Bliss. According to the report of the affair given out at police headquarters, Lieut. St. Clair, Detective Mebus and a number of policemen and soldiers were hunting illegal liquor sellers operating in the vicinity of the army post.

Informed that soldiers had been seen leaving the White home and being ignorant of the identity of its occupants, they knocked at the front door. Receiving no reply the officers sought to raise a bath room window when they were greeted with a volley of shots from a pistol in the hands of Captain White. Lieut. St. Clair was shot through the hip and right hand. Detective Mebus received a bullet through the right shoulder and Captain White was shot through the right lung. His condition is critical.

The White home was visited by burglars on Christmas night and when the captain heard some one opening his bath room window he opened fire. At the base hospital where he was taken, he lapsed into unconsciousness after making a statement that he had shot at burglars.

NO DANGER OF MILK ADVANCING IN PRICE

Dealers Are Prohibited From Raising the Present Price, Says Haffner.

There will be no change in the price of milk. Talks and rumors have no foundation. If an individual dairyman desired to raise the price of his product it would be necessary for him to get a permit from the state food administrator. This is in accordance to a statement made by County Food Administrator George M. Haffner Saturday.

The food administration of the state has been very much interested in this phase of the food question. They have made a very careful investigation of prices and cost of production and the above is the stand the commission has taken in the matter.

Here the matter rests and with the understanding the thousands of poor who are starving for an existence due to the high prices of food commodities may rest easy so far as the milk proposition is concerned

GIVES UP VISION OF WESTERN LIFE

Rollo Burros Decides That Home Isn't Such a Bad Place After All.

Visions of a spirited bronco and a big six-shooter appealed too strongly to the imagination of Rollo Burrows and as a consequence he left his Pittsburg home to seek the wilds of Wyoming. The lad followed his will-o-wisp to Whiting, Ind., where the grim reality of cold and hunger crowded out the visions of the western life. The lad claims to be 17 years old, but looks much younger. He asserted in police court that he was on his way back home via the box car route when arrested by a Pennsylvania officer. The lad was sent to the washroom and proved himself an exception when he appeared a few minutes later with not only a clean face, but a clean neck as well. The police department will place him in a position and as soon as he has earned enough money will be on his way to Pittsburg.

Continued Cases.

Joseph Kinsley, arrested and brought to Fort Wayne for stealing a large sum of money from the Westinghouse-Church-Kerr Construction Co. last summer, drew a continuance until December 31. The case of John Garvey, arrested on a loitering charge, was also continued. John Sweeney staggered all over the courtroom and was given a chance to sober up by having his case continued until December 31.

FOOD CONSERVATION SHOW FOR CHICAGO

Chicago, Dec. 29—Practical instruction in preparation of 250 dishes, prepared from receipes made under direction of the government food administration will be given at a patriotic food show in Chicago January 5 to 13. One hundred women, in addition to army cooks from various cantonments will show how to cook the different dishes. The work will be under the direction of federal food administrator of Illinois, government bureaus and the University of Chicago. The show will be for patriotic purposes and though hundreds of concerns will have exhibits they will not be allowed to sell anything or to distribute any advertising literature.

The object of the show is "to teach the women of western states how to do what the government has asked them to do," a member of the state council of defense said today.

SEVERE COLD WAVE HITS NEW ENGLAND

Boston, Dec. 29.—The most severe cold wave experienced in New England since 1914 swept in from the northwest early today and caused widespread suffering because of the general lack of fuel. From a maximum reading of 37 degrees yesterday, the temperature dropped to 4 degrees below in Boston at 7:30 o'clock this morning and held close to that mark an hour later, with little indication, weather bureau officials said, of any rise during the day. There was no promise of immediate relief for bureau reports showed that the cold would continue over Sunday.

ABANDON EFFORTS TO SALVAGE AMERICAN SHIP

Halifax, Dec. 29.—The shift of the wind into the south and east today resulted in the abandonment of efforts to salvage the American steamer ashore at Pennant. Yesterday afternoon high seas commenced to roll in Gallant inlet and all hands left the steamer in breeches buoys. Almost a thousand tons of cargo had been removed from the ship and the work of sealing up the damage to her bow was proceeding favorably when the wind changed. Should the storm increase, it was feared the steamer would go to pieces.

SCIENTISTS GATHER IN GREAT CONGRESS

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 29.—One thousand scientists from all sections of the country are here attending the seventieth annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the initial business session of which will be held today.

Thirty other organizations, affiliated with the main association, are also meeting in Pittsburg. The sessions will continue until Wednesday of next week.

Discussions of scientific subjects and appliances having direct relation to the world war, will feature the convention.

SNOW HOLDING AMERICANS OUT OF THE BATTLE

(By The Associated Press.)

With the American Army in France, Friday, Dec. 28—Still another day of howling snowstorm—the fourth—saw virtually the entire American expeditionary force within the army zone abandon preparations to battle the Germans and begin a fight to keep from being snowed under.

All last night and throughout today the flakes fell, choking the roads and badly delaying traffic. By nightfall the roads were in such shape that plows were brought out to keep the way clear. Soon after dark the sky cleared and a full moon came out, bathing the entire country in light almost as brilliant as daylight and making conditions ideal for aerial operations. There were low hanging clouds on the horizon, giving promise of more snow.

Virtually all training work was called off today, but will be resumed tomorrow unless more heavy snow makes it impossible.

EDDYTORIUL ON "INVENSHION."

Last wk Eb Simpson one of our most respeckted cittizens & not only that but also one of the biggest inventive genuses in this end of the co give out the word at Hen Weathersbys store that he had went and invented perpetchool moshion.

Some of the more ignorunter of our cittizens who was present when Eb made this a nouncement diddent apreshiate the importants of his invenshion of course but that was becuz they probly diddent know that great inventers has all been a trying to invent perpetchool moshion ever sinst the world started and jest to think that Eb Simpson of Bingville should be the one to do it and git all the honner for hisself.

Eb invited them as was interested to vissit his woodshed where he had his perpetchool machine set up. He explained that it was a contrapshion like a clock whitch while it was running down furnished power to wind itself up and therefore would run on forever and a day. Eb said he started it goin two days before and it hadent stopd sinst and never wood.

Well, several of them at Hens store inclooding ourself accompanied Eb to his woodshed and when he opend the door and we all walkd in there was the perpetchool moshion masheen allright settin on a bench as pert as ennythink. The only falt Eb or enny of the rest of us had to find with it was that the blamed thing had stopped! Outen that it was satisfacktory in every respeckt.

Eb was so ding-busted mad to think that his perpetchool moshion masheen had stopd on him speshially when he had invited a crowd to come and see how slick it was workin that before he reulised what he was a doing he pickd up a hammer and busted it all to splinters cussin very perfane. Eb said hed give it a cause to stop if that was the way his invenshion was goin back on him and now Eb has dropd perpetchool moshion and has started in to invent a mouse-trap whitch will ketch mice without ketching the fingers when a person sets the trap. He says he expecks to have it perfeckted in about a wk and that it will fill sitch a long felt want that no home will be complete without one.

A yr or so ago Eb started in to invent a pr of wings to strap on hisself and workd over em for several wks. Finally they was finished and Eb invited the hull town of Bingville to witness a demonstrashion of flying.

When all was assembld Eb strapd on his wings and clim up on the pick of his buggyshed roof, from whitch dizzy height he made a very elokwent speech to the crowd whitch lissend with baited breth. Eb said in substants that whilst steam cars flew over the land and ships flew over the sea he was a going to fly thru the air and be the 1st man in histree to conker the upper regions. He said he would soar a few times around Bingville and would then fly to the co seat and back and astonish evrybuddy.

Then with a whoop Eb jumpd offen the roof and begin to flap his wings. It was a critikal minnit. For some reason or other the wings diddent work proper. At any rate Eb come down heels over head and lit with a dull sikkening thud all snarld up with broken wings and like to of broke his fool neck. As it was he broke his leg and after that Eb give up flyin with wings.

But Eb says that the flyin masheens whitch we read about today is all copied after his idees for whitch he dont git no credit as the inventer.

We simpythize with Eb in his failures to invent great invenshions but it ort to comfort him to know that all great inventers who has ever invented ennythink has had their ups and downs and discurridgements.

Take a corn-sheller for instants. A corn-sheller is a good thing but no corn-sheller has ever been invented that wouldnt ketch a felers fingers if you dont be keerful. Then theres the tellyfone—your liable to git struck by lightnin if you talk into one of them things during a thunder storm. The ottymobeel is a great invenshion, but theyre liable to upset or blow up and bust.

All great invenshions has their drawbacks no matter what they be and our advice to Eb is to keep right on inventin things. Hell get it some day.

Big Black Bear Tuk After Old Dad Henderson & Ketched Him Too! --Narrer Excape for Dad & the Bear Also!---Exsiting Partickulers Below!

Old Dad Henderson one of our most respeckted cittizens had a turrible awful experients last Thursday forenoon whitch he wont soon forget no matter how long Dad lives and we calkilate the next time Dad meets up with a black bear he'll give it a wide birth instid of up and shootin at it like he done in this instants.

On the morning afore mentchioned Dad went out to his henhouse whitch stands at the end of his back lot to see if the hens had laid enny eggs (they haddent) and jest as Dad was a going to open the henhouse door he seen somethink big and black over the fence and a little ways down in the holler jeyant the henhouse.

Dad paused in his tracks and put on his fur-away specktakels so he could see better and tuk another lookk.

"By mighty," says Dad to hisself, "its a black bear!"

Shure enuff there was the bear jest cown over the edge of the holler and it peard to be pawin at somethink in the snow. It ockurd to Dad that if he could kill that big black bear what a turrible lot of bear meat it would make also bears grease whitch is turrible good for roomytiz to say nothink of the bears pelt whitch ort to be worth $10 or $15 and with great presents of mind Dad snuk back to the house as quick as he could snuk and grabbed his ole muzzle loader shotgun whitch was loadened with birdshot and hurried back to the henhouse. The bear was still there where Dad has last saw it not havink mooved skeercely a tall.

Well, Dad with his heart in his mouth crawld thru a hole in the fence and crep up tords the bear on his hands and knees thru the snow until he got within about 50 ft of the critter then Dad cocked his shotgun, wiped the frost offen his glasses, took keerful aim right at the bears vitals and puld the triggerr.

What follerd almost beggars descripshion!

Instid of the bear droppin down dead like it ort to of did it give a turrible yell of angwish and jumpd about four feet into the air and when it come down it lit on its hind feet and come right straight for Dad standin up and runnin jest like a huming beink!

Course Dad diddent have no time to load the gun agin so he throwd the gun into the snow jumpd to his feet and with a loud yell of derishion started as fast as he could jump for the hole in the fence after he got thru whitch he intended to keep right on going until he got inside the house and lockd the door behint him.

When Dad lookd back over his shoulder he seen to his horrer and amazement that the bear was gainin on him every jump and Dad buckeld down hardern ever, but before he reachd the hole in the fence the bear overtuk him and hauled off and kickd Dad with sitch vilents that he was lifted clean offen his feet and landed all sprawld out into the snow about fifteen feet further on.

Dad said afterward it was a awful big surprise to him being as he never knowd a bear could kick like that with one of its hind feet whitch almost felt as if had a boot on. Before Dad could excape the bear was right over him and jerkd him to his feet and shuk poor Dad until his false teeth flew outen his mouth.

Old Dads feelings can better be described than imagind when he looked into the bears fase and realised that instid of a bear what he had shot was Wes Woodruff our expert hunter & trapper who with his old bearskin coat on had been settin some rabbit snares in the holler behint Dads back lot.

"What in gorramashion did you shoot me fer?" says Wes still holdin onto Dad.

"Ime turrible sorry," gasped Dad. "I thort you was a bear!"

Then West shuk Dad agin hardern ever and told him he ort to have sense enuff to know the differents betwixt a man and a bear and besides bears was all dend up this time of yr ennyhow & furthermore ennybuddy who calkilated he could kill a bear with birdshot was a fool being as his bearskin coat had stopd all the birdshot but two which had went thru and stung him considable in the legs.

Wes threatend to bring suit aginst Dad for shootin with intent to kill but Dad pleaded so hard that Wes finally let him go and went on with setting his rabbit snares.

If you want to hear old Dad cuss jest ask him if hes shot enny black bears lately.

Lokal Jottings

Sleighing still continues good in our midst and straw ride parties in bobsleds is very poplar amongst our yung fokes. There mite of been a time when we thort it was a pleashure to go out and git frostbit when the thermometer was below zero in our yunger days but we have got over it.

Gid Johnson informs us that he has three bu of cranberries and considable celery whitch he will sell cheep. This seems ruther pecooliar becuz when fokes tried to buy cranberries and celery from Gid a munth or so ago he wouldnt sell enny. LATER—We have learnt on good orthoritty that Gids cranberries and celery was froze during the last cold snap.

Eph Higgins our accommodating P. M. of the Bingville P. O. says that the sale of stamps has fell off somethink awful as far as he is concernd sinct the guvverment boosted the price of two-cent stamps up to three cts. Eph says lots of folks in Bingville has stopd writin letters as a result of this increase in the price of stamps and unless the batch of 3-centers whitch he has on hands sells faster hes a going to set down and write a P. M. General at Warshington a sharp letter telling him if he dont reduce the price of stamps back to two cts he'll resign as P. M. of Bingville. Eph Higgins is a purty determind man when he gits his dander up.

Sammie Perkins who is a great big awkward growd up boy of 20 yrs went to the co seat to vissit his uncle Henry Perkins last wk for two wks but only stayd two days. This is the 1st time Sammie has ever been away from home over nite and he got so homesick that he cried all the time and had to be sent home. Sammie is a awful baby for his size.

Ham Wilson whilst out hunting for one of his cows who excaped from the barnyard seen a fox west of town whitch Ham says was twict as big as enny four foxes he ever seen. Whilst Ham was standin there watchin the fox and wishin he had a gun blamed if the fox diddent run right up to him and wag its tail. It was Rufe Snyders old shepperd dog instid of a fox.

Take Notis, Jerushy

We understand on reliabul othoritty that Jerushy Perkins who in the past has now and agin left a pie or a cake or somethink or other to ete on our deskk when we was out with her compliments had a jelly cake to fall tother day while it was in the oven baking.

We understand Jerushy who prides herself on being one of the best cake bakers in Bingville was awful put out reenz the cake fell. We mite add in this conneckshion that we allus perferd a jelly cake whitch has fell in baking to one whitch has riz up light and if Jerushy sees fit to persent this fell cake to us we will devour it with great relish.

Personal Breefs

"Personal Breefs" aint what you might call so numerous this wk that its amazing.

Miss Phoebe Hilderbrand our fashionable dressmaker left church service last Sabbath morning right in the middle of the sermon. We lernt later that it was becus she had on stays three sizes too tite for her. Phoebe lookd awful neat, but probly no huming beink realised what she sufferd. Phoebe has returnd em by parselpost to the co seat for stays whitch is bigger and more comfortable.

We desire to call Deacon Andrews attenshion to the facks that the sidewalk in front of his house is as slippery as a eal. We like to of fell and broke our blamed neck there tother day and if we had of did that the Deacon would of had a damage suit on his hands. Unless the Deacon sprinkels his sidewalk with ashes he'll haft to take the consequences as well as them who falls and damages theirselfs.

Si Petersby the only cobbler in Bingville says that business has briskd up like everything with him being as hes so bizzy putting on heels and taps for folks that he aint got time to haffsole his own boots or them of his wife neither. Si says if cobbling was as good in the summer as tis in the winter hed be satisfide but it aint. A good many Bingville folks goes in their bare feet in summer.

Deacon Butterworth has been going around town for a wk or more with a awful sad fase on him. We diddent lern why the Deacon was so melancholly until we found out that there wassent a drop of hard cider left in his barl whitch he made last fall. Well, the Deacon ortent to repine being as he made it fly and was happy while it lasted. Also he cant say he diddent drink it all hisself neither. That ort to be some consolashion to him.

If you diddent begin the New Yr right by subscribing for the Bugle do so now.

Big Mystery!

It has allus been a awful big mystery to us whenever we pause in our tracks to think it over, whitch is quite frequent of late, why we don't git more advertising in the Bugle than we have had for a spell back?

We have thort about this so mutch that there has been times when we have almost brung on a nervus headake, but still we can't anser it. Can you?

To begin with the Bingville Bugle is the best advertising medium in this end of the co. If you have enny doubts about this all we haft to do is to state the fackt that the Bingville Bugle is the only advertising medium in this end of the co. In other words there aint no other choice to pick from exsept us. We aint got no competishion and we don't want enny.

Our circulashion praps aint as big as it might be, but considern that for every bony fide subscriber we have five or six of his nabers boorries and reads his paper we have a considable army of readers.

It pays to advertise in the Bugle. It pays us and it pays you. If you want to buy anything advertise for it. If you want to sell anything, ditto.

We are also ready at all times (exsept press day) to do any and all kinds of fancy & artistick job work at rates that seem reasonable to us & we trust they will to you.

If you want results advertise in the Bugle. If you don't want results advertise in the Bugle anyhow. We aim to please everybuddy and give you what you want. Yours for bizness,

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy, costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations, can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Waiter in Daytime, Editor at Night, Is This Spaniard

WAITING on diners at a downtown hotel by day and being the fearless editor of a trade union newspaper at night, is the basis for the claim by friends that Manuel A. Sanchez is the busiest man in the country.

Sanchez admits that he works twenty hours out of twenty-four days in each month at his dual occupation, but insists that he likes both jobs so well that he cannot persuade himself to quit either.

"I could live on the income from either work, but I could not thoroughly enjoy life without the excitement both furnish," Sanchez said when interviewed. "My Spanish blood is the stimulant, I guess, that makes me relish hard work as long as it is interesting, and I have been busy in two fields or more since I was 16 years old."

Sanchez is as nearly a human dynamo as a man can well be, and he typifies the "never-say-die" spirit in his work.

Born with a silver spoon in his mouth in Las Chaves, N. M., forty years ago, his wealthy father was assassinated when Manuel was 7 years of age. His mother, Mrs. Barbara Chaves de Sanchez, spent a large part of the family treasure attempting to bring the assassin to justice through the courts of the territory. Patrocinio Gavaldon was convicted of the crime and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, after a protracted legal duel in distant courts. Gavaldon managed to get himself pardoned almost immediately, however, and became a justice of the peace at Las Chaves, the village bearing the family name of Mrs. Sanchez.

One day the storm broke when Justice Gavaldon met Mrs. Sanchez on the highway near her home. There were bitter words exchanged, and the justice, it is said, applied an epithet to Mrs. Sanchez in the presence of her eldest son, Ignacio 10 years old. Ignacio fired a bullet through the neck of his father's slayer. His hot Spanish blood mounted, and he attempted to fire again at his prostrate enemy, but Mrs. Sanchez interfered and said: "That was God's bullet, my boy, do no more."

Youth Sets Forth Into World.

Gavaldon lived a cripple the balance of his days, and Mrs. Sanchez spent the balance of the family fortune defending Ignacio, who was never penalized for his act. There was little left to the widow but some land claims and the wonderful old Spanish house, a villa of more than 100 rooms surrounding a typical patio.

Ignacio remained at his mother's side to comfort and provide for her, and Manuel at the age of 16 went forth into the world to restore the family fortunes. How he made a small fortune of $50,000 and lost it in the game of business is only one of the interesting things about the career of the editor-waiter who is now working out his destiny in St. Louis.

When he left the maternal roof, young Manuel went to San Francisco and cast about for a job in the metropolis of the West. Nobody seemed to require the services of a 16-year-old lad, who had no experience at any kind of work. Manuel walked the streets many days and many nights in search of a place to begin building his fortunes, and never weakened in his resolution, despite his many disappointments

He was amazed at the grandeur of of the big buildings and the brightly lighted streets of Frisco. The Palace Hotel, famous from coast to coast, made an especial hit with young Sanchez. Many an evening he lounged in front of this palatial resort and watched the swells of Frisco enter its brilliant portals to dine and dance in its radiant halls. Finally he decided that it would be just as easy to get a job in a wonderful place like that as in some of the dingy factories and office buildings at which he had been applying.

He mustered up courage and went to the night clerk one evening, a man who wore an air of importance that made Sanchez think he was approaching some foreign potentate. He smiled at the night clerk with that winning smile that has delighted so many hotel diners in St. Louis in the past few years, and asked for a job. The night clerk in his turn was impressed, and asked what kind of work the young man followed. "Any kind," came the prompt reply. "Can you wait on a table?" asked the clerk. Sanchez remembered the way the house servants at home used to wait on his family, and eagerly replied in the affirmative.

Fears for the Soup.

"Well, I guess we can find out by trying you," the clerk replied, and Sanchez's heart leaped with the realization that he had at last made a start.

Back to the helps' hall they whisked him and he soon emerged in the full regalia of a waiter, which was not a perfect fit because it was made for a much older man. The maitre d'hotel shook his head dubiously as he looked young Sanchez over, and a smile flickered over his features as he sized up the ill-fitting garments. In the Palace Hotel everything was de rigeur, and the head waiter did not like to assume the responsibility of trying out a novice who might trip on his long trouser legs and possibly spill a plate of soup on the president of a railroad or a multimillionaire mine owner. But he was short a man and decided to risk it.

He gave a few instructions to Sanchez, and found that the lad was well educated and a quick thinker. The head waiter was a real artist at his profession, and he impressed upon Sanchez that he must carry himself like a gentleman and show courtesy in every move and word. That happened to be second nature with Sanchez, due to the careful training of his mother, who was more of a stickler for gentlemanly manners than even the head waiter.

Sanchez was a success on his first job when he served his first dinner at the famous Palace Hotel. He made a hit with everyone who patronized his table, and in a few weeks enjoyed the friendship of many of the big men and best brains of Frisco.

William Randolph Hearst at that time was in the habit of taking his evening meal at the Palace, and Hearst became as interested in Sanchez as the lad became in Hearst.

It was shortly after Mrs. Phoebe Hearst purchased the San Francisco Examiner as a toy with which her son might amuse himself, now that college days were over. Young Hearst, however, surprised the family and his friends by wading into journalism with unflagging passion.

After boon companions had abandoned him for the evening, Hearst would sometimes confide in young Sanchez that those chaps did not know how to enjoy the excitement of life. He would philosophize on the joys of setting things right that were wrong and helping the helpless through the medium of a great daily newspaper.

These little talks fired Sanchez with determination to some day be a publisher. As one of the working men of the nation, his sympathies were naturally with the plebians, and he was painfully conscious that these people, like himself, needed help and guidance and sympathetic, strong hands to get them along through the world as it was.

With the dream of restoring the family fortunes to gladden the heart of his mother, young Sanchez mingled new aspirations to be an editor of a powerful paper that could turn the limelight of publicity on all the dark, festering corners of the world and drive out the evil conditions that existed.

But Mrs. Sanchez could not buy him a newspaper plant, fully equipped, to begin his great crusade against the powers of evil. He realized that at his present rate of progress he must spend many a weary month and years at work before he could hope to have a controlling voice in such a plant.

Young Sanchez, with an inborn love of work, buckled down to his first avocation, and did nobly. In eighteen months he was maitre de hotel, and if that distinguished gentleman had died or resigned in the next three years Sanchez would have been maitre de hotel in fact, on the word of John Fitzpatrick, the manager of the Palace Hotel.

Took Side of Unions.

But the matre de hotel enjoyed life and his job too well to quit either, so the impatient Sanchez decided after five successful seasons at the hostelry to gather up his savings and move to a new field—the far East.

Sanchez' idea of the East at that time was Chicago, and therefore he hiked to the Windy City, which was several times as big as Frisco, a fact that forced Sanchez to expand his plans in proportion.

He was not yet ready to become a newspaper publisher, he realized, so he decided to follow his work as waiter until he got better acquainted with the big city on the lake. He looked over the swell hotels and cafes of Chicago and picked on Rector's as the one that pleased his fancy most. He applied for a position, and when he described his experience at the Palace, was placed at work.

He made money and saved some of it, and made himself popular with not only the patrons of this place but with other cafe managers who saw him at work and appreciated his methods. The catering firm of Kunz & Remmler, operating several first-class cafes in Chicago, offered him inducements to join their forces. He did well in his new berth and made himself almost indispensable to his employers.

In 1905 a general movement was started to organize the waiters and other employes of hotels and cafes in labor unions. The movement was resisted in every manner by the employers. Sanchez' sympathies guided him to the side of the unions, and he enlisted under their banner in the struggle for better wages and improved working conditions. His employers offered to make him a full partner in one of their cafes if he turned his back on the labor union and refused to walk out on a strike that was declared in every hotel and cafe in Chicago of any consequence.

Sanchez chose the labor union to this fine opportunity to establish himself in business, and went out with the strikers. They remained out eight days, and the strike was lost by the unions at the end of this period, because the employers had found substitutes for the strikers and were able to get along without the old help.

Sanchez had cast the die and was now a martyr to his principles. He realized more keenly than ever what it meant to fight the battles of his fellow man in addition to paddling his own canoe. He had lost in his first big fight, and the newspapers with its attendant fortune seemed many years further away than ten days before.

Becomes a Proprietor.

While comforting himself with the reflection that he had lost in a just cause, and through no fault of his own, there came a cheering message from his former employers. The offer was still open, they said, to make him a partner in a cafe at 195 La Salle street. Sanchez jumped at it and went to work as a proprietor for the first time, but did not lose his interest in the cause of the workingmen and women for a minute. His management was a success from the start and the cafe began to produce larger and larger profits for the owners every month. At the pinnacle of his management, Sanchez had more than $40,000 in bank and a small amount invested in realty.

Matilda Armijo, his childhood sweetheart now lived in Chicago, where fate had evidently guided the steps of her parents. Sanchez renewed his suit and they were married. Everything was roseate and the young business man had reason to believe that he had at least laid the foundation for the restoration of the fortune his father had left at his untimely death.

Then the pendulum swung. Business fell off in spite of anything that Sanchez could do to hold it. Old 1907 arrived, and everybody tightened up. Most of the savings went back the way it came and Sanchez pulled up stakes before he went flat broke and came to St. Louis to start afresh, his confidence unshaken.

He returned to his old trade at the Jefferson Hotel in 1910, and made good again. In 1913, another strike loomed in his path. The Waiters' Union, Local No. 20, in which he carried a card, succeeded in having one cafe after another recognize the union. The hotel managers feared it would be their turn next to recognize the Waiters' Union, so they beat the union to it, as they say, in the vernacular, and one June evening, every large hotel in the city notified the white waiters, union and non-union, that their services were no longer required.

Keeping Up With News.

Sanchez head fell beneath the ax with all of his union associates. It fired the old Spanish blood on him, and he offered his services to the union officials as an active campaigner against the step.

His thoughts flew back to the old Palace Hotel and the talks he used to have with Hearst. Now was the time, if ever, to launch his newspaper, when the enemy was pressing hard. He had a few thousands left in hand and he resolved to throw it into the enterprise and stand by the result.

The lockout was only a day old when the busy Sanchez got out the first issue of The Unionist, a tiny paper that came out spasmodically for the next month, as occasion required. In one day of rioting about a downtown hotel Sanchez got out three issues in order to keep up with the latest news. The newspaper proved a great factor in winning the fight for the white waiters who were locked out. It denounced the police roundly for treatment of white pickets who walked before the cafe in question, distributing handbills.

The police arrested about 120 men, many of whom went to the police station via the City Dispensary. The men were all exonerated in Police Court the next day and in a test case carried to the St. Louis Court of Appeals, the judges held that the union pickets were lawfully entitled to picket any business establishment, provided they did not disturb the peace or blockade traffic by their actions.

This was the gospel spread by The Unionist during the strike. Its energetic editor not only wrote the copy and locked up the forms as it went to press, but he would rush to the scene of the daily melee with the damp copies under his arm and give away the paper to the interested public, in defiance of the squads of police on guard.

Sanchez made a hit, not only with his union colleagues and the public, but with many of the police who were detailed to "take care" of the union pickets. They never once used a club on him, nor did they arrest such a fire-eating picket. The picketing ended in a clean-cut victory for the union waiters, and today every hotel recognizes them and seems to be pleased with the service the union men furnish.

Free Papers Didn't Pay.

It was in this campaign that Sanchez was dubbed by his friends the "fearless editor." He wrote for his paper just what he thought about the police and the strike opposers, and he did not shrink from circulating his poor opinions of both under their very noses.

When the strike ended Sanchez discovered that giving away newspapers that do not carry paid ads. is an unprofitable business, and his bank account was seriously depleted. Local No. 20, rising spontaneously to a motion to that effect, voted to open the treasury to reimburse Sanchez for his invaluable services to the cause.

He suspended publication of The Unionist after it had accomplished its purpose, but two years ago he launched a monthly publication, The St. Louis Independent, which was indorsed a year later by the Labor Press Association of the United States, with the exclusive franchise in St. Louis.

Sanchez is still the fearless editor, as indicated by his action in the October edition.

The United Railways Company is today seeking to settle its differences with the city government in order to renew its franchise for fifty years and raise new capital to make needed extensions and take up maturing obligations.

The United Railways applied to another St. Louis union labor publication for advertising space in which to put before union men the company's reasons for urging the enactment of pending settlement bills. The labor paper refused to publish the ads., thus cutting off the company's opportunity to present its arguments.

The company then applied to the St. Louis Independent and the editor surprised it by announcing that he would carry any statement the company chose to make to union readers, marking it "paid advertisement."

The company officials accepted and told him of their experience with the other labor paper. Sanchez unlimbered his editorial wrath upon the contemporary sheet, charging it with unfairness and disloyalty to the union labor principle of arbitration.

Sanchez says he is in love with both his occupations. He holds that waiting is an art that requires almost as much study and intelligent application to perfect as does editing a paper. They are both forms of work, he says, and are worthy the best efforts of any man who essays them. The rewards of each are about equal, he says, so far as he can determine from his own experience, although he is convinced that as the proprietor of a newspaper, he may eventually accumulate more wealth than by waitering.

Sanchez frequently arises at 5 a. m. in order to report for duty at his hotel at 6 o'clock, and is not finished with his hotel work until 8 p. m. that evening. It frequently happens that he must "make up" his paper for the presswork between 8 p. m. and midnight, and sometimes he has worked on his paper until 2 a. m.

"Suppose you get tired out some night after working all day as a waiter, and your paper must go to press?" he was asked.

"I can't get tired out that night, because I have to make the edition," he replied, just like a regular newspaper man.

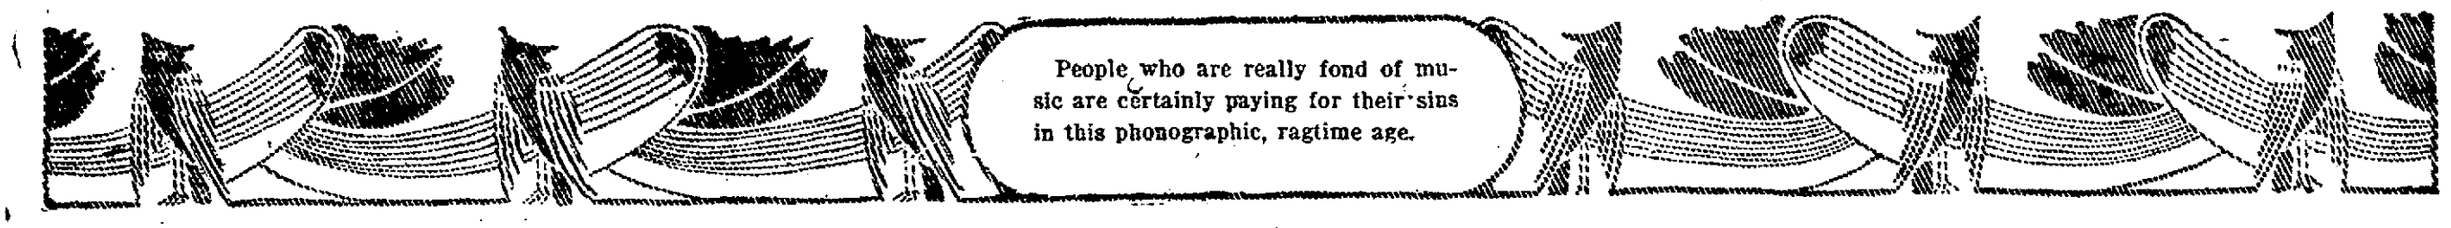

OBJECT LESSONS FOR TROOPS.

A large proportion of the pictures made in the European war are not intended for public exhibition. A rigid censorship is exercised over all photographic work by the governments, exactly as in the case of the mails and printed matter. The films may be developed in the field or in near-by cities, but they are not permitted to leave the country until they have been passed upon. A Board of Censors sits in a darkened room at headquarters and scans every detail of the movies as they flash past. Should some secret valuable in any way to the army, be revealed, it is erased or the film is destroyed.

The presence of the moving picture men in such numbers at the front does not mean that the governments are going into the show business. The photographs thus secured, at enormous expense, become matters of official record, and are, of course, invaluable.

In no previous war has such complete photographic reproduction been possible, and the government officials have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity. It is estimated that upward of 10,000 films have been prepared by the army movie men in Germany alone. They are intended mainly for educational work in the military training schools.

As illustration for text-books and lectures, the war movies will have a unique value in the classroom. A lesson in strategy, for instance, may be illustrated by a moving picture, showing the advance or retreat of troops in an actual engagement. Every phase of military instruction may thus be illustrated.

family, succeeded his uncle, King Charles in October 1914, King Charles having died at Sinai on Oct. 18.

Rumania declared war on Austria on August 27, 1916, and King Ferdinand took personal command of the army shortly thereafter.

King Ferdinand is the son of Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen and two of his brothers are generals in the German army. He was born at Sigmaringen, August 24, 1865.

Crown Prince Charles was born Oct. 3, 1893 and is an officer in the Rumanian army. He is numarried, although early in 1914 it was reported that his betrothal to the then Grand Duchess Olga of Russia had been arranged.

Queen Marie of Rumania, who was a duchess of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria of Great Britain and was married to King Ferdinand on January 10, 1893. Since Rumania's entrance into the war, more than two thirds of her territory has been overrun by the enemy. The royal family fled from the capital, Bucharest, in the fall of 1916 and since that time has been at Jassy.

DESTROYERS AND A MERCHANT SHIP DO WELL-MANAGED JOB

so weak that lines had to be passed under their arms to haul them aboard. One man was in such a condition that he could not even hold the line thrown him. Chief Pharmacists Mate Elzer Harwell and Coxwain Francis G. Connor jumped overboard after this man and secured a line under his arms. When he was hauled aboard, every effort was made to resuscitate him, but he died in a few minutes. The four officers of the submarine and the 35 members of the crew were all taken prisoners.

Were They Downhearted?

"After being taken on board the prisoners were given hot coffee and sandwiches. Though kept under strict guard they seemed contented and after a short time commenced to sing. To make them comfortable the crew of the destroyer gave them their warm coats and heavy clothing.

"The German officers said the first depth charge had wrecked the machinery of the submarine and caused her to sink to a considerable depth.

"The submarine bore no number nor distinguishing mark. She was, however, identified by lifebelts and by statements of an officer and men of the crew. One of the lifebelts, the reports said, had 'Kaiser' marked on one side and 'Gott' on the other.

"The Fanning proceeded to port and transferred her prisoners under guard. As they were leaving in small boats the Germans gave three cheers. The commanding officer of the Fanning read the burial service over the body of the dead German sailor and the destroyer proceeded to sea and buried him with full military honors.

"In his report the commander of the Fanning praises the conduct of his officers and crew and gives particular credit to Lieut. Walter O. Henry, officer of the deck, and to Coxswain Loomis, who sighted the periscope. He also commends Pharmacist's Mate Harwell and Coxswain Connor, who jumped overboard to save the drowning German.

Praise From British Chief.

"The British commander-in-chief, under whom the destroyers were operating said this in his report to the British admiralty:

"'The whole affair reflects credit on the discipline and training of the United States flotilla' and added that the incident showed that the Fanning is a man of war in the best sense of the term well disciplined and organized and ready for immediate action. He also praises her commander, Lieut. A. S. Carpender and comments Lieut. Henry Coxswain Loomis, pharmacist's mae Harwell and Coxswain Connor. The British admiral also commended the prompt action of the Nicholson, which he says completed the success of its sister ship. The Nicholson was commanded by Lieut. G. H. Fort. The British admiralty sent a telegram to the commander in chief, directing him to express to the commanding officer, officers and men of the Fanning its 'high appreciation of their successful action against the enemy submarines.'

"Vice Admiral Sims commanding the American forces operating in European waters, commended the officers and men of the Fanning and Nicholson. Coxcwain Loomis was advanced to the next higher rating in recognition of his vigilance in sighting the periscope."

the air. The enemy vessel was not seen again.

There has been no resumption of the Austro-German attack on the Italian mountain front. On the contrary, the Italians have been the aggressor, attacking near Monte Tombo, between the Brenta and the Piave. Berlin reports that the assault broke down under the Austro-German fire.

Great Britain's destroyer fleet suffered a considerable loss on the night of Dec. 22. The admiralty announced today that three British destroyers were sunk during foggy weather off the Dutch coast on that night through torpedo attack or striking mines. Altogether 193 officers and men from the destroyers were lost.

directed its progress from the very beginning to its conclusion. I must speak personally in this hour, because this house of God is the visible, tangible reality, the material consummation of a deeply felt interest. As now I look about me and realize how out of the process of the builder's work, apparently fragmentary and disjointed; how out of the placing of the stone here and there, and the piling of brick upon brick, and the joining of wall into wall; how out of a multitude of materials in the process of orderly construction, there has finally been evolved what we now see and enjoy, a beautiful temple of God, the wonder of it all is overpowering and a sense of awe and reverence is upon me.

The time has come when this building ceases to be merely the consummation of plans and specifications. The hour has arrived when it no longer is to be conceived as merely the beautiful creation of the workman's hands, a building of brick and stone, beautiful, stable and symmetrical. As we are assembled here in this first hour of worship the though comes home to me as to the patriarch of old, that now "this is none other than the house of God." Tonight these bricks and stones are sanctified and these walls, by your presence within them, to reverence the name of Israel's God, are consecrated to the noble and uplifting cause of religion. Here you and I shall continue, under God's grace, to assemble in search of the things that are higher and better than material realities; the things of the spirit, that shall uplift and sustain us, that shall enrich us with the power to find spiritual joy in the varied experiences of life, and strengthen us to meet bravely and hopefully its sorrows and trials. Here we shall endeavor to stand face to face with God, for now does His spirit abide here, for now is this His house.

"We have builded it for Him and to the glory of His name. You who look about are doubtlessly struck by the simple, dignified beauty which greets your eye. The beauty which the eye sees is good, but it is not enough. That was enough up to this hour, but tonight, when this place is consecrated into a place of worship, the beauty of materiality must be eclipsed by the beauty of holiness, with which our worship this night and succeeding times must invest it. And once the beauty of holiness abides within these walls, it shall and must be to us, unless we have labored in vain; must be the retroactive, spiritual power, bringing home to us the recognition of its deeper demands, and widening our vision to see and fulfill its practical applications.

The eye can see, but the gift of physical vision, the one of God's greatest blessings, is but one small factor in the truly fruitful life—the life consecrated to high ideals. Your eyes, for instance, can see the ideas written into the memorial windows of this room. They represent the contest of the faith which is yours today by inheritance from a glorious history. Unity it preaches to you, the unity of God in His universe, the unity of mankind on this earth, for behold, "Have we not all one Father; hath not one God created us all?" Peace it proclaims to you.

"Peace, peace be to him who is far and to him who is near." "Let men beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks and let nations know war no more," was the fervent prayer of the ancient prophet, and today it is Israel's prayer, too, for Israel's mission is peace, the peace, the security and the safety of mankind, even if it be necessary to fight and die under the banner of right and justice to attain it. Justice cries out that faith to you. "Let justice roll down as waters and righteousness as a mighty stream." Let man deal justly with his neighbor, and what is hateful unto himself let him not do unto another. Justice, Israel has preached; justice it has demanded for itself; for justice it has suffered and died, and still it cries out to the whole of mankind, justice, justice! Righteousness is its appeal to you. Let the gates of righteousness be opened up to you. Walk with God in humility and sincerity within the sacred precincts of the soul. "For by righteousness does the Lord judge the world and nations by His truth."

Truth it demands of you, "for the Lord is God, who keepeth truth perpetually." To be true to one's deepest and sincerest convictions of right, seeking in spiritual communion, the sanction for those convictions. To hold fast to our spiritual heritage, with due regard for the faith of others. To live the truth as God gives us power to see it. Wisdom it enjoins upon you, not the mere gift of knowledge, not the power to marshal in the mind the myriad facts of wordly understanding, but to learn that knowledge is power; when it teaches us to reverence God and refrain from evil. Sinai's commands that historic faith thunders down to you today as it did of old, for "the commandment is a lamp and the law a light to guide thee in the path of life."

These things constitute the Torah Israel's book of life, Israel's instructions for living. The law of Israel it is, a vast storehouse of religious, and moral inspiration and guidance. This is the story which is symbolized in the windows of this room. These are the ideals to which this building is consecrated. These are the ideals to which we, one generation after the other, in the life of Israel, must also be consecrated.

Let the eye behold them! Let us consecrate ourselves to fulfill them. Let us worship God here in the beauty of holiness. Let that beauty enter into the deepest recesses of our hearts, illuminating them with the light of love and glorifying us with the sense of divine fellowship. Let it animate us with a newer and deeper sense of obligations. Let it find expression in the words of our mouths, in the meditation of our hearts and in the accomplishment of our hands. May God be with us and bless us. Amen.

The new temple was erected at a cost of $90,000 and is one of the finest synagogues in the country.

prevailing in France, which caused it to be drawn as it was.

Some Difficulties.

"The question of prohibiting the sale of all intoxicants to American troops is under discussion with the French government," said Gen. Pershing, "but of course there are difficulties here in France that do not exist in the United States. The general order issued Dec. 13 was a long step toward the prevention of drinking among our men.

"It was not by any means intended to convey an injunction to the American troops to drink light wine and beer, but quite the reverse. It was drawn to conform to French regulations on the subject.

"It stated that light wine and beer only would be permitted and prohibited the purchase of and acceptance of gifts of whisky, brandy, champagne or similar beverages. It ordered that all drinking places where such articles are sold be forbidden American soldiers. It is the same regulation made in France by the British army and by the French.

Situations Different.

"Although I am heartily in favor of prohibition for the American expeditionary force, the situation in France and the United States is not the same. Comparatively few French people drink water as we do; they drink wine instead. This is partly because the French water supply is not as pure as ours. French wine is light and much less intoxicating than is generally supposed. An intoxicated Frenchman is a rare sight indeed. French beer is also by no means as strong. The French government issues to its soldiers a regular wine ration. Obviously there are obstacles to forbidding wine shops in the zone of the army to do business at all, which practically is what the French would have to do. Local sentiment will play a large part in the determination of the question.

The Social Evil.

"The same order which forbade soldiers taking strong drink contained the most rigid regulations to prevent the spread of the social evil. The questions are connected closely. Thus far the record of the army in both respects has been most excellent. It is highly gratifying to me and is a testimonial to the high character of the American soldier. Everything possible is being done to protect his morals and his health and honor to himself and countrymen."

the railroads had refused the brotherhoods demands it was learned that the railway workers had decided not to press their request for a perio of at least thirty days or until it is seen just what the railroad situation will be.

M'Adoo Gets Started.

Director General McAdoo spent today assembling a staff of advisers and executive officers to assist him in administering the railroads as a national unit. He conferred with John Bartone Payne, counsel for the shipping board, and Inter-state Commerce Commissioner Anderson. An announcement of plans is expected soon. The railroads' war board went to work on a general scheme of operation. A few reports reaching here today told of first efforts by local railway officials to haul freight by shortest routes, as requested by the director general in his first telegram to railway heads.

A cold wave accompanied by snow in many localities probably would prevent a noticeable improvement in freight congestion under government operation for a week or more officials said. It was understood that Mr. McAdoo would use the various departments of the inter-state commerce commission to execute most of his orders and in addition would form an advisory cabinet including representatives of the war and navy departments, the shipping board, the fuel and food administrations and the federal trade commission.

Studying Legal Phases.

Legal phases of government operation have been studied carefully by the legal bureau headed by Jos. W. Folk, chief counsel of the commission, and many questions remain to be threshed out between the railroads and government before a smooth working plan is developed. The interstate commerce commission has nearly 1,800 employes, including several hundred experts on specialized lines, to be placed at the disposal of the director-general and carry out his orders. The senate interstate commerce commission today decided to continue its plan to investigate the railroad situation under the Cummins amendment. Members of the committee agreed that the investigation would be purely academic, but decided that any information obtained would be of benefit in considering legislation to carry out recommendations of the president in his forthcoming address. What scope the investigation will take was not decided upon, but members of the interstate commerce commission as well as representatives of the railroads will be called.

ACTUAL FEDERAL OPERATION.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Actual government operation of the railroads began today with the railroad war board continued in charge under orders from Director General McAdoo to direct traffic over the most convenient and expeditious routes.

The board, composed of five of the nation's foremost railroad executives who have been in control of roads since April, now will be enabled to effect the pooling of traffic heretofore impossible under the anti-trust laws.

The board's retention as operating head of the railroads for the present was announced yesterday after the five members had conferred with Director McAdoo, who instructed them to continue their functions and submit immediately a plan for directing traffic. Later McAdoo issued his first formal order designed to speed up the freight movement. He instructed all railroads to move shipments by the shortest routes, and ordered them to continue operations of their lines to conform with President Wilson's proclamation putting them under government control.

way as to render useless the torpedoes in which the gyroscopes were installed.

"Not only would these torpedoes have been worthless as weapons but it is possible they would have proved engines of destruction for their own users," said the district attorney.

Henning came to the United States in 1908 and was naturalized in 1916. Naval inspectors, it was stated, have had him under close observation for several weeks, imperfections in the parts of the gyroscopes which were assembled in Henning's department having aroused suspicion.

The gyroscope which has been termed the "brain of the torpedo" is of such intricate construction, authorities say that a defect which could be detected only by an expert would divert the missel from its course. In the indictment which was returned yesterday by a federal grand jury and kept secret until today it is charged Henning "maliciously and traitorously aided Germany" by equipping torpedo gyroscopes with imperfectly fitted bearings and wheels which were found to be cracked. District Attorney France declared enemy dust, an abrasive which would disable the delicate gears of the gyroscope also was found among the assembled parts.

Henning, authorities declare, is a highly skilled mechanic and holds American patent rights on a number of torpedo control and propulsion devices. One of Henning's sons, it was said, has been interned as an alien enemy at Ellis island. When arranged before Federal Judge Veeder in Brooklyn today, Henning, in an accent which was unmistakably German, pleaded "not guilty." He was ordered held without bail until January 2 when a date will be set for his hearing.

DEMAND PEACE AT ANY PRICE

mand, it is likely to be a serious stumbling block to further negotiations.

Allied residents in Petrograd, according to the Post's correspondent, like the ordinary public, have been six weeks in complete ignorance of what is happening in allied countries. The ordinary postal service stopped working long ago. On the other hand there is plenty of German newspapers and information.

Capital Full of Germans.

Petrograd, the correspondent adds, is full of Germans who, quite at ease speak the Berlin dialect loudly, the Russians not protesting. In general he says, the feeling of the allied residents in northern Russia at the present moment finds its nearest parallel in that of the European residents in Peking during the Boxer troubles. He quotes a representative of one of the allies as saying to him last week: "We shall put up with any affront to keep Russia in the war."

The Posts' correspondent adds that affronts to the allied diplomats have not been lacking. It is reported that the Bolsheviki are trying to establish a rival Ukrainian rada to be composed of workmen and peasants.

A Rival Rada Set Up.

A congress of workmen's and soldiers' delegates held in Kharkhov has declared itself the supreme power in the Ukraine, deposing the Ukrainian rada.

The Ukrainian military commander at Kiev has requested Ensign Krylenko, the Bolsheviki commander-in-chief, to release a number of Ukrainian officers and soldiers he arrested at Minsk, Pskoff and elsewhere. A reply was demanded within 48 hours.

Thursday morning at her home in Milford with three bullet wounds from a twenty-two calibre revolver, two in the head and one in the thigh.

Bartholomew, the husband, who was arrested on Thursday on a warrant issued by Coroner Kelly, still insists he is not guilty. He does not seem the least disturbed and says he is confident of the outcome of the investigation now being so vigorously pursued.

Nothing is being left undone in an effort to place the guilt for the woman's murder for there is no longer any doubt but that she was murdered and did not commit suicide as neighbors at Milford at first thought.

The coroner's inquest was resumed today and it is not likely a verdict will be reached until late this afternoon or on Monday. The finger print expert from Plymouth has taken the impression of Bartholomew's fingers, and will make comparison today with the prints found in the room where the woman was murdered. He will report his findings to the coroner's jury.

No New Clues.

No new evidence has been uncovered. Bartholomew is being held because of his peculiar conduct and not because of anything tangible the officers have been able to get against him. If Bartholomew is guilty he must be given credit for wonderful acting for he has said nothing and has done nothing while in jail that would involve him.

There is one thing greatly in Bartholomew's favor. He has always borne a good reputation and has never before been in any trouble whatsoever. Citizens at Milford regard him as a man of good habits and a hard worker.

He will be given a preliminary hearing before Justice Graham on Monday.

Body Partly Under Bed.

Mrs. Bartholomew's body was found about one-half under the bed. The post-mortem examination showed that one of the three bullets that struck her entered the brain and certainly in itself caused instant death. This fact alone, with that of the three revolver wounds, is believed to be sufficient to disprove the unfounded rumor of suicide. A report was circulated in Milford yesterday that Mrs. Bartholomew was a "dope" fiend. This is emphatically denied.

Born in Noble County.

Mrs. Bartholomew was born in Noble county and at the time of her first marriage resided in Goshen. She was married twice prior to her marriage to Bartholomew, the first time to Archibald Ogle, of Chicago, and the second time to Angus Morrison, also of Chicago. She was separated from both former husbands. Nothing has developed that would in any way involve the former husbands.

The murdered woman was married to Bartholomew one year ago last October, since which time they have resided in Milford. It is a matter of rather common report there that Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew were not compatible. It is generally known that some time ago they separated and lived apart for quite a period. A reconciliation, however, was effected a short time ago.

A report has been circulated in Milford that Mrs. Bartholomew owned considerable property in Chicago and that she also has been accustomed to being careless with money and jewelry which she left around the house. No strangers, however, have been seen in Milford for several days, officers there declare.

THOUSANDS OF PARTS IN MODERN AIRPLANE

Government is Trying to Simplify Construction of Fliers.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Amazing figures as to the number of parts and amount of material entering into construction of an airplane have been assembled by army aviation officials in an effort to simplify construction as a means of hastening production.

While the present program cannot be delayed for the result of this investigation it appears likely that a way will be found later to reduce greatly the number of parts and kinds of material now needed.

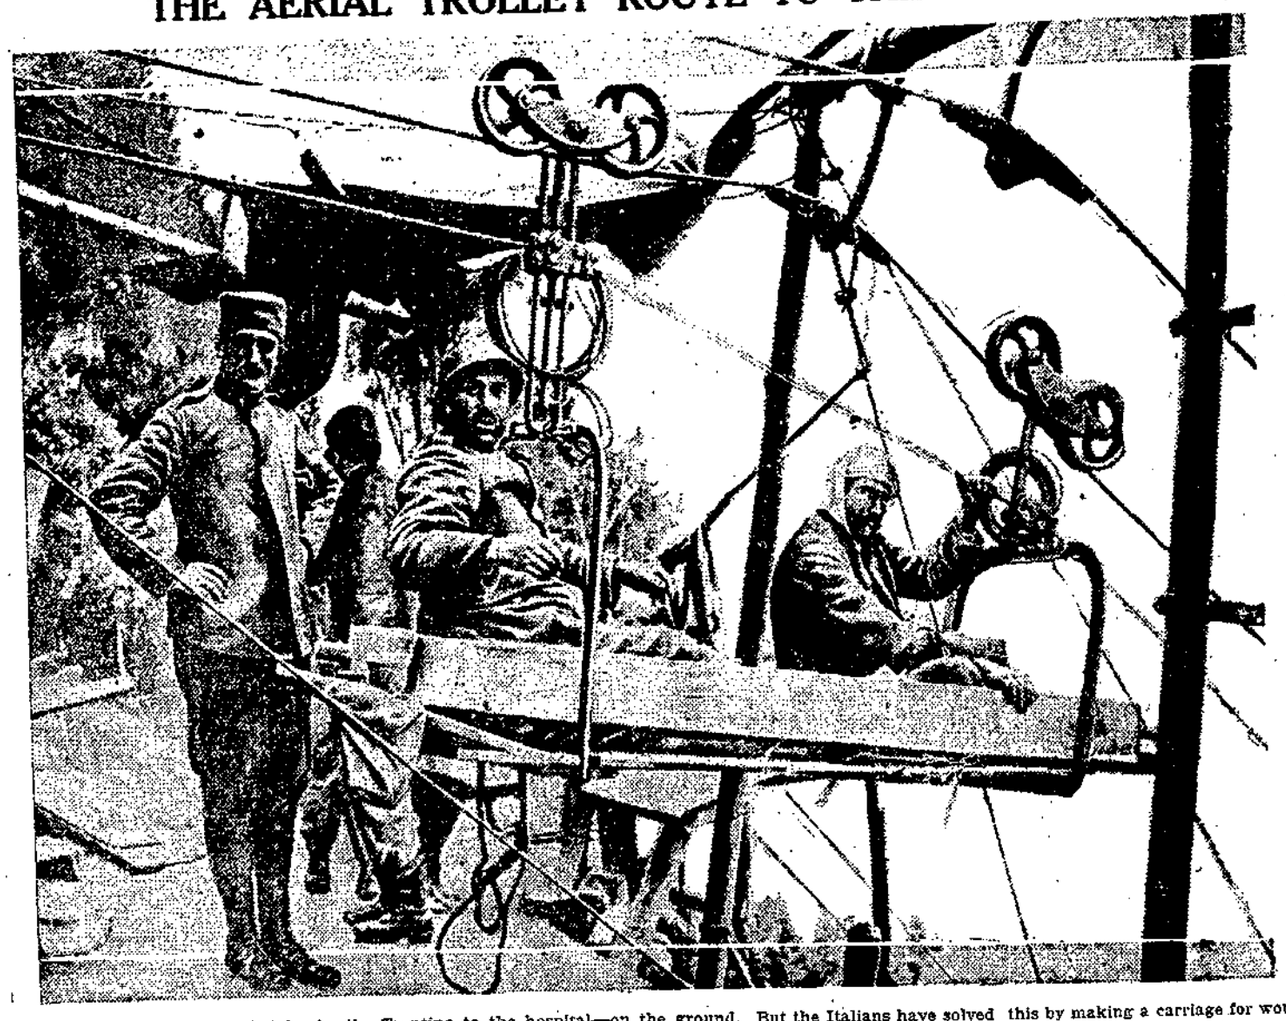

Exclusive of the engine there are hundreds of parts in the structure of an airplane and even when built up sections of the frame are regarded as single parts, there remain nearly 200 separate pieces to be assembled in a complete machine. That is exclusive of screws, nails and similar things. These are the things necessary to build a machine without its engines: Nails, 4,326; screws, 3,377; steel stampings, 921; forgings, 798; turn buckles, 276; veneer, 37 square feet; wire, 3,262 feet; varnish, 11 gallons; dope (for dressing wings), 59 gallons; aluminum, 65 pounds; rubber, 34 feet; linen, 201 square feet; spruce, 44 feet; pine, 50 feet; ash, 31 feet; hickory, 1½ feet.

THE AERIAL TROLLEY ROUTE TO THE HOSPITAL

It's a long trip from the heights in the Trentino to the hospital—on the ground. But the Italians have solved this by making a carriage for wounded soldiers which can be used on the aerial trolleys built for moving big guns and other war supplies. It's sho rt work, by use of this trolley, to get a badly wounded soldier into the hos pital.

WALL STREET ADDS FURTHER TO GAINS

Short Session Gives the Stock Market Another Nice Boost.

New York, Dec. 29—Gains of the last two days were added to in the first half of today's stock market. Much of the advantage was lost at the end of active selling for profit. Minor rails were 1 to 2 points higher at their best and munitions and the motor group also developed marked strength. United States steel moved fractionally over and under yesterday's final price. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 450,000 shares. Liberty 4's sold at 97.14 to 96.98 and the 3½'s at 98.50 to 98.42.

FROST HURTS THE FLORIDA ORANGES

Green Stuffs Plentiful With Prices Firm—The Local Markets.

Frosts during the last four weeks in Florida have caused considerable damage to oranges and jobbers have raised the price. Florida crops were damaged to some extent by these frosts, but the heaviest loss fell on the orange crop.

Green stuffs from Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana are plentiful, but prices hold steady and firm. Potato prices hold steady, but receipts are falling off in quality. Commission men say they know of no reason for this unless it is delay in transportation.

The top price for hay continued at $26 today. Fifteen loads were brought to the city. Three loads of corn sold for $1.15 to $1.20 and oats at 72 to 75 cents.

THIS BRITISH OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPH SHOWS ONE OF THE BRITISH DOCTORS WRITING A FEW WORDS HOME FOR A SOLDIER SO BADLY INJURED IN THE HAND THAT HE CANNOT WRITE.

GERMANS RECEIVE TENDER CARE FROM BRITISH. BRITISH PADRE GIVING A DRINK TO A WOUNDED GERMAN SOLDIER ON THE MENIN ROAD BATTLEFIELD. THIS IS NOT A NOTABLE INCIDENT. THE BRITISH TREAT THE GERMAN WOUNDED WITH THE TENDEREST CARE. NO WOUNDED GERMAN HAS EVER COMPLAINED ABOUT THE TREATMENT HE RECEIVED FROM THE HANDS OF THE BRITISH DOCTORS AND AMBULANCE MEN.

"WHEN A MAN'S DONE" THEN ENMITY ENDS. A BRITISH DOCTOR IN HIS WHITE OPERATING ROBE IS A TRUE "ANGEL OF MERCY" TO THE GERMAN WOUNDED.

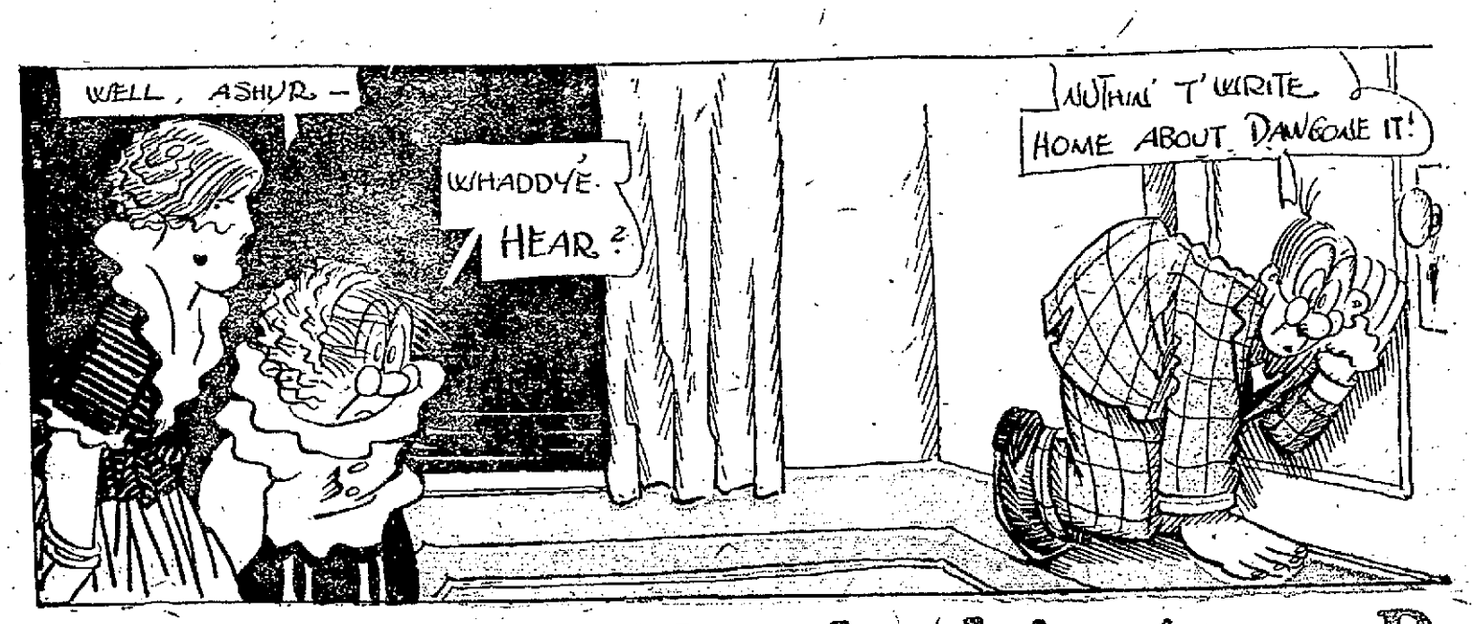

ALL PARTICULARS OF THE WOUNDED ARE TAKEN DOWN WITH THE GREATEST CARE SO THAT THE NEXT OF KIN CAN BE IMMEDIATELY INFORMED OF THE EXACT CONDITION OF THEIR WOUNDED RELATIVES.

RESOLVED

THAT POOR TIGE WANTED A COMPANION- ONE OF HIS OWN KIND FOR CHRISTMAS. ALL OF US LIKE OUR OWN FOLKS AROUND ON THAT DAY. IT SEEMS LIKE FAMILY DAY. IT IS FAMILY DAY. WE ARE ALL SOCIABLE CREATURES WHO ARE DEPENDENT UPON EACH OTHER FOR ALL OUR MATERIAL, SOCIAL, INTELLECTUAL AND SPIRITUAL REQUIREMENTS. (WHETHER WE THINK SO OR NOT). DO NOT PUT ON AIRS- WE ALL NEED EACH OTHER- AND THE MOST IMPORTANT MAN IN THE COMMUNITY IS THE MAN WHO CLEANS THE SEWERS. THIS DAY OF CHRISTMAS CELEBRATES THE BIRTH OF THE ONE WHO SAID "HE THAT IS GREATEST AMONG YOU LET HIM BE YOUR SERVANT" THE GREATEST MAN IS THE ONE WHO SERVES MOST AND BEST. IN HEAVEN THERE WONT BE ANY AUTOCRATS NOR ARISTOCRATS TO SPOIL THINGS, THEY FINISHED THIER JOB HERE — MERRY CHRISTMAS.
